'Age' New Shingles to Match Old

Q. After inspecting my roof last month, I found a few of the asphalt shingles were torn, and I plan to replace them. My pet peeve, however, is that new shingles really stand out from the surrounding shingles. Is there any way to color these shingles so they look like the rest? I know it sounds dumb, but the pitch of the roof is such that the shingles can be seen from the top of the street. — Taylor J., Cincinnati

A. You can do a bit of "aging" with asphalt shingles to match them with the rest of the roof. Be careful, because the aging method basically removes some of the protective granules that shield the shingles from the elements.

Wearing protective gloves, pour a small amount of mineral spirits into a container. Set the new shingles on a protected surface. Dab an old white rag into the mineral spirits and carefully wipe the surface of the shingles. Be careful to just match the look of the older shingles — use one of the damaged shingles side-by-side as a guide while you work. Once matched, rinse the new shingles thoroughly to remove all trace of mineral spirits and allow them to dry completely before installing.

Homeowners with wooden shingles or shakes also can quickly age replacements to match the current roofing material, and with a safer medium. Dissolve one pound of baking soda in one gallon of water. Brush this solution onto the wooden shingles, and then place them in direct sunlight for half a day. Bring them inside and rinse thoroughly. You'll need to repeat this process until the new shingles look like the older shingles.

Remember that both aging processes will slightly change the replacement shingles, and — especially in the case of asphalt shingles — can shorten the service life of the materials. Wooden shakes and shingles might swell and crack from the water-and-sun method. Also, aging them could void any warranty on replacements. So take these factors into account before beginning the project, and weigh the benefits of a uniform-looking roof with the potential problems.

Good Timing Opens Door To New Homes

(NAPS)- While the adage that real estate is all about location, location, location may still hold true, timing can be just as critical. In today's fast-paced world, technology makes it possible to do things quicker than ever before-and finding the right home is no exception.

Today, the majority of buyers are beginning their home search on the Internet. Browsing listings online provides access to photo galleries, virtual tours, floor plans and detailed lists of amenities that help buyers learn more about home than previously possible. This added knowledge often speeds up the decision-making process. In fact, it's not uncommon for people to buy a home after simply viewing the house online or seeing it once in person.

To avoid missing out on the home of your dreams in a competitive market, it is important to act fast. The faster you can see a property in person, the better chance you have of beating the competition to the punch. Unfortunately, Internet inquiries are often not responded to promptly, if at all.

However, companies such as ERA Real Estate (www.era.com) may help change that. The firm uses cutting-edge technology called DirectAccess Powered by ERA LeadRouter to quickly connect buyers and Realtors. The tool converts inquiries from buyers viewing the company's properties online into voice calls that go directly to a sales associate's cell phone. Instead of waiting days for an online response, a buyer can be contacted within minutes-often while he or she id still at the computer looking at homes. This ensures that buyers can make an appointment to see the properties they are interested in as quickly as possible.

The technology helps home sellers as well, by reducing the chance of losing an interested buyer due to lack of timely follow-up by their sales associate.

Once a sales associate contacts you, timing continues to be important. Make sure you are working with a real estate professional who responds quickly to your questions and needs throughout the buying process. When you are ready to buy, it's important for your sales associate to submit your offer as quickly as possible to get the edge on any other offers. Finally, when you are under contract, your sales associate should keep you informed of the steps you will need to take up through your closing in a timely fashion.

For more helpful tips on buying and selling a home, visit www.era.com.

Heat Up Your Home's Value In A Cooler Housing Market

(NAPS)- If you've ever trying to sell your home in a cooler housing market or simply looking for an affordable, value-enhancing renovation project, adding a fireplace can be a smart bet. Several studies point to the increased value a fireplace brings to a home.

A recent six-year study by the National Association of Realtors and Florida State University suggests each fireplace in a home yields a 12 percent increase in home value. According to the study, only adding an additional full bath or a garage increased the value of a home more. In addition, the National Association of Real Estate Appraisers indicates home-owners without fireplaces can potentially raise the selling prices of their homes by about 6 to 12 percent simply by adding a fireplace.

Because of their warmth-both literal and figurative-fireplaces are one of the features that potential homebuyers inevitably gravitate toward. "When I get a new listing of a home that has a fireplace, it's imperative that I work that fact into all the marketing material about the property," said Brad Palecek, a realtor with Edina Realty in St. Paul, Minn.

The National Association of Home Builders (NAHB) reports that fireplaces rank among the top three features desired by new homebuyers. An NAHB survey also found that 77% of homebuyers want a fireplace in the family room, where they'll spend most of their time. And 50% of homebuyers would like a fireplace in the living room, where they do most of their entertaining.

With the high demand for fireplaces, adding one to your home clearly means a great investment. One of the most attractive, convenient and cost-effective options is a direct vent gas fireplace. Direct vent gas fireplaces can be installed in virtually any room at a fraction of the cost of a masonry fireplace. Homeowners can turn them on or off with the flip of a switch and some manufacturers such as Heat & Glo, Heatilator and QuadraFire actually allow operation with a remote control.

Besides adding value to your home, direct vent gas fireplaces can cut heating bills by reducing dependence on the central furnace. They burn efficiently with up to 70% of the heat they generate remaining in the house. A direct vent gas fireplace also adds intangible value by helping buyers see your home in a better light.

For more information on fireplaces and how to select the right one for your home, visit www.fireplaces.com.

A Job Well Done

On Wednesday, Oct. 4, at approximately 8:30 p.m., Detectives Brian Coen, Ed Ryan, Gerard O'Rourke, Bill Ward and Bill O'Brien were in the Brewer's Corner area conducting surveillance.

LT. DAN MINTON

The Drug Unit, working with the community, was watching for illegal drug activity in the area.

Detective O'Brien observed a male and female cross Copeland Street and walk into the driveway of 30 Copeland St., where they met a female standing next to a staircase. This female had not been seen earlier because she was motionless in the darkest pat of the lot.

Detective O'Brien watched as an exchange of something occurred. Immediately after the exchange, the lone female ran across the street into one of the residences while the male and female walked towards Brewer's Corner. Believing that a drug transaction had just occurred, he notified the other detectives in the area.

A short distance away, Detectives Coen and O'Brien approached the male and female, displayed their Quincy Police badges and told them that they were Quincy police officers. Once this occurred, the male attempted to flee and after a brief struggle, he was taken down to the ground, where he dropped his cell phone and a small bag of white powder believed to be cocaine.

The male (suspect #1) was placed under arrest. The female was asked if she had anything on her that was illegal and she said no. When asked if she had any needles on her that may stick an officer when she was searched, she again said no. Since the second suspect was female, Officer Melanie Reeves arrived on scene to conduct the search.

Just as the search was to begin, the female suspect admitted that she had a needle down the front side of her pants. Under control of the officers, the female suspect was allowed to retrieve the needle, which had a brown residue believed to be heroin.

Suspect #1, a 25-year-old from Whitman, was charged with "Possession of Class B Drug." Suspect #2, a 25-year-old from Quincy, was charged with "Possession of Class A Drug." With information coming from members of the community, the Quincy Police Drug Unit was able to act quickly and apprehend two criminals.

Nice work!

Spotlight On Health & Fitness

FROM START TO FITNESS

by Andrea Wyatt
M.S.S., C.S.C.S.

Early Results Aren't Always Dramatic

Q: I am following a program to kick up your metabolism by eating six small meals a day and doing cardio every day with some weights twice a week. The program says that in six weeks you should definitely see a difference in your body, but I am not seeing results like I know I should be. What I could be doing differently? I feel very discouraged.

A. Following a generic fitness and nutrition program can be helpful to get you started, but you must remember that it was designed for the general population and not with your personal needs in mind. Use the following steps to help tailor general fitness programs to meet your goals.

Carefully read the description and purpose of the fitness program. Titles such as "speed up your metabolism" or "slim down your middle" imply that the program will work if you simply follow the designed workout. This can be misleading, since there are many factors that affect how your body responds to exercise.

While most people can begin to see changes within six weeks, these changes might not include a dramatic loss in body fat or weight, or a large visible change to your body.

Remember to use measures besides weight loss to gauge your progress. Monitor your body fat, circumference and strength, and lean-muscle gains as a better measure of results. Yes, you will see visible changes, but also use these other assessments to give you a good idea of how your body composition is changing.

There might be certain changes you need to make for the program to work for you. These modifications can include increasing the type, intensity or frequency of your cardiovascular and strength-training workouts. For example, the program might suggest that you walk or jog daily as your cardiovascular exercise, while you might find other forms of cardiovascular exercise are more effective for you.

Keep a log or journal that includes your daily nutrition, exercise and lifestyle habits. Writing down what you are actually doing can allow you to compare it to the program you are following. You might be able to make adjustments based on your findings. Maintaining a log or journal requires your honest account of your daily eating habits and the exact workout program you are completing. Often you can find small but important elements missing that can help you begin to see results.

Don't forget that an increased energy level, being able to move through everyday activities more easily, and feeling stronger are also results from consistently completing an exercise program and proper nutritional habits. Always remain patient, and complete only programs that will keep you safe.

Don't be discouraged. Six weeks is a great kick-start, but you want to develop a positive lifestyle that you can maintain for years to come.

Why Eye Exams Are Important For Overall Health

(NAPS)- The eyes are the windows into the entire body. Just as the eyes allow us to see what's happening in the world around us, they also allow doctors to see what's happening inside of our bodies.

A comprehensive eye exam performed by an eyecare specialist such as an optometrist not only assesses the condition of a person's eyes, but can also detect the onset of eye disease and other serious health issues. As a result, vision care is essential to maintaining a healthy lifestyle and should be a top priority.

Vision Care

Research indicates that 3.4 million Americans age 40 or older suffer from visual impairments including cloudy or blurred vision, near-or farsightedness and even blindness, Predictably, as the population continues to age, the occurrence of vision disorders will increase.

In addition, adults are prone to developing various age-related eye diseases such as glaucoma and macular degeneration. Fortunately, eyecare doctors can often detect symptoms of these diseases in their earliest stages, even before a patient is aware of vision issues.

Link to Health Management

Eye exams serve as a preventative tool not only for identifying eye impairments but also symptoms of serious diseases. For example, examining the cornea and blood flow through the retina in the eye can help eyecare specialists detect signs of diabetes, high cholesterol, high blood pressure and heart disease. Ultimately, this early detection can not save patients' eyesight but also alert them to the presence of disease before it causes serious damage.

Taking Charge

It's clear to see that an annual eye exam provides important benefits. To take charge of your health, schedule an eye exam with a local eyecare doctor who can provide you with a full visual assessment.

A comprehensive eye exam is straightforward, painless and takes less than an hour to complete. By receiving your annual eye exam, you will be taking a proactive step to safeguard your vision and sustain your total-body health.

Five-Step Approach To Optimal Heart Health

(NAPS)- Alan Flood, 58, has a good reason to be concerned about his heart. A few years ago, poor lifestyle choices and diet contributed to major heart problems. Flood knew he needed to make changes to improve his health.

For many, this can seem like a daunting task. However, nutrition expert Lynn Laboranti, M.S., R.D., maintains that it's never too late to strive for optimal heart health. She offers the following five-step approach to help get your ticker in tip-top shape:

Step 1: Move It of Lose It. According to the American Heart Association (AHA), losing as little as 10 pounds can drastically reduce the risk of a heart attack. Daily aerobic activity, such as walking or swimming, will increase your fitness and help keep your heart in shape. Remember that every bit helps.

Step 2: Expand Your Palette. Eat a rainbow of fresh foods to get a wide variety of nutrients. Heart-healthy foods like garlic, fresh fruits and vegetables, whole grains, fish with beneficial omega-3 fatty acids, a handful of walnuts and even an occasional glass of red wine can be beneficial when added to a well-balanced, low fat/low cholesterol diet.

Step 3: Strive for a Perfect 10. Statins, or cholesterol-lowering drugs, are used by approximately 20 million Americans. Health experts found that statins deplete the body's stores of coenzyme Q10 (CoQ10), a vitaminlike substance found in every cell in the body and responsible for boosting energy and providing powerful anti-oxidant heart protection against free radicals. Laboranti suggests taking a maximum-strength supplement such as Nature Made CoQ10 400 mg for optimal heart health.

Step 4: Put It Out. Smoking is the single most preventable cause of death in the U.S. Cigarette smokers are twice as likely to die from coronary heart disease as nonsmokers, says the AHA. But a Surgeon General's report found that after one year off cigarettes, the excess risk of heart disease caused by smoking is reduced by half. Set up a plan to help you quit successfully.

Step 5: Stress Less. Stress-related complaints make up nine out of 10 visits to primary care physicians, according to the Center for Disease Control and Prevention. Besides challenging the immune system and affecting mood, constant stress can also take a toll on heart health. Make note of your stress triggers and create a strategy for managing them. Try setting aside time for yourself each day.

Most importantly, consult a health care professional before starting any diet or exercise program. To ask Lynn Laboranti a question, read additional articles on heart health and find information on vitamin supplements that can help, visit the Nature Made Wellness Advisor at www.NatureMade.com.

Stroke Screening Nov. 13 At St. John's

Appointments will be gin at 9 a.m.

Residents in the Quincy area can be screened to reduce their risk of having a stroke, which is also known as a "brain attack." A stroke is ranked as the third leading killer in the world, and the second among women.

Through preventive screenings, the risk of having a stroke can be greatly reduced.

Screenings are fast, painless and low cost. They involve the use of ultrasound technology, and scan for potential health problems related to: blocked arteries which can lead to a stroke; aortic aneurysms which can lead to a ruptured aorta, and hardening of the arteries in the legs, which are a strong predictor of heart disease.

Also offered for men and women is a bone density screening to assess their risk of osteoporosis.

All four screenings take less than an hour to complete. A complete vascular screening package, including the Stroke/Carotid Artery, Abdominal Aortic Aneurysm and Ankle Brachial Index (hardening of the arteries) screening is $109. Sign up for a complete vascular package; include the osteoporosis screening and pay $129.

Life Line Screening was established in 1993. The non-invasive, inexpensive and painless, ultrasound tests help people identify their risk for stroke, vascular diseases or osteoporosis early enough for their physician to begin preventive procedures.

For more information, or to schedule an appointment, call 1-800-697-9721.

DENTISTRY for the 21st Century

by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.

PERMANENT OR REMOVABLE REPLACEMENTS?

For patients with one or more missing teeth in succession, there are two replacement possibilities other than dental implants. A "bridge" is a permanent dental appliance that consists of a pontic (false tooth) and two crowns that are cemented into place on the abutment teeth (on either side of the space). Unlike removable partial dentures, fixed bridges cannot be taken out of the mouth. Removable partial dentures, on the other hand, usually consist of replacement teeth attached to pink or gum-colored plastic bases, which are connected by metal framework. Removable partial dentures attach to your natural teeth with metal clasps or devices called precision attachments. Precision attachments are generally more aesthetic than metal clasps and are nearly invisible.

Which replacement possibility would work best for you? We can help you decide on the right option for your situation. If you have questions about your bridge or dentures, we invite you to call our office. We want to provide you and your family with the best dental care possible in a comfortable, professional environment. Prevention – brushing, flossing, and regular professional cleanings and checkups – is still the best road to dental health. Our office is located at 44 Greenleaf Street. Please call 617-479-6220 to schedule an appointment. We offer the services of anesthesiology with a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Visit us on the web at www.quincydentist.com.

P.S. At least as much care must be given to replacement teeth as you give to your natural teeth.

North Quincy Girls' Goal: Advance In Tournament

By SEAN BRENNAN

The girls' Division1South Sectionals, which are scheduled to begin at the end of this week, will feature a number of talented and skilled teams in the field, but it is one local team, the North Quincy Red Raiders, who may pose the biggest threat to the favorites.

The Red Raiders (12-5-1), slated to be between a 8 and 10 seed, have been playing an aggressive, ball-hawking style of soccer all season long, and with their talented set of skill players, the Red Raiders should have a legitimate shot at advancing deep into the post-season.

North's post-season run will hinge on their continued success of scoring early and often and playing sound defense. The Red Raiders have a handful of dynamite offensive players to go along with their rock-solid defense, and NQ should be capable of competing with any team that they are matched up against. Leading the way for the Raiders on offense will be the Stille sisters, MaryKate (15 goals) and Lauren, Emily Milone (7 goals, 15 assists), Bridget Coleman, Jillian Benn, Ali Russell, Keriann Cabral and Megan Therrian. Defensively, the Raiders' Tara Whooley, Brittany Folkins and goalkeeper Siobhan Carnell lead a defense that can be as good as any in the tournament.

North Quincy, playing a non-league game last Friday, defeated Medford High School, 5-2. The visiting Raiders struck early in the game as senior captain Bridget Coleman took a through pass from junior midfielder Emily Milone and walked in alone on goal. Coleman's tally was her second goal of the season.

After Medford responded in kind five minutes later to tie the score at 1-1, North Quincy's leading scorer, MaryKate Stille, ripped a shot into the back of the net for her 13th goal of the year and a 2-1 lead. Milone earned her second assist of the half with a beautiful pass to Stille in the box.

Late in the half, North made the score 3-1 on a highlight reel goal from senior captain Megan Therrien. Therrien's goal was set up by yet another assist from Milone. Milone drove down the sidelines and lofted a perfect cross into the penalty box, and Therrien's Taylor Twellman-like diving header put the Red Raiders up 3-1.

Emily Milone would etch her name in the North Quincy record book later in the game when she connected with senior forward Lauren Stille from 10 yards out. Stille buried the pass and the Raiders took a 4-1 lead. Milone's four assists set a North Quincy single game record for helpers.

Last Tuesday (10/24), the Red Raiders played the Quincy Presidents in the two team's inaugural game at Veterans' Memorial Stadium. North Quincy won that game 3-0, and in the process secured their spot in the post-season.

In their final regular season game on 10/30, the Red Raiders took it to Hanover High School in what turned out to be a slugfest and came away with a hard-fought, 5-3 victory.

North Quincy stormed out of the gates and took a commanding 3-0 lead before Hanover scored three straight goals to even the score in the second half, but the Raiders' Jillian Benn netted the gamewinner midway through the second half and the Raiders were on their way to a victory.

Senior captain Megan Therrian started the scoring for North with a beautiful shot from the left corner in the first minutes of play. Junior MaryKate Stille continued her scoring streak later in the half with her 14th goal of the year to give the Raiders the early 2-0 lead. Stille connected once again before halftime and the Raiders went into the half for a 3-0 lead. Stille's scoring barrage was a continuation of her stellar play all season long, and she should be a major factor for North Quincy and opposing defenses once the post-season starts.

"We came out with a aggressive attitude in the first-half," head coach Paul Bregoli said. "Therrien had a great goal to get us started and MaryKate continued to be our best goal scorer. But the game turned into a slugfest, we got a little relaxed, and Hanover rattled off three straight goals to tie the score at 3-3."

After Hanover found the back of the net three times, North Quincy was picked up by another one of their senior captains. Jillian Benn, who was on the receiving end of a Emily Milone pass, knocked in the eventual game-winner midway through the second half. Milone's seventh goal of the season from 35 yards out finished up the scoring for the Red Raiders, and the team held on for their 12th win of the season.

Next up for North Quincy is the South Sectionals. The team's 12-5-1 overall record places them between an 8th and 10th seed, and leaves the door open for a possible home match in the first round.

"There are a couple of variables left to be sorted out before we really know when, where and who we will be playing in the first round," Bregoli said. "The possibility remains that we can be anywhere from a 8 to a 10 seed. Being seeded in this spot means we may end up playing Durfee, Notre Dame Academy or Marshfield, but we really won't know until the seeding are announced and all of the other eligible teams finish their regular seasons."

"Last year we lost to Natick High School in the first round, and Natick eventually lost in the semi-finals," Bregoli added. "But we know that the first round game is always the hardest, and hopefully we can get past it this year."

The seedings for the 2006 post-season will be announced on 11/1, and the preliminary round games will be played at the end of the week. North Quincy will begin their post-season run starting early next week, and if the regular season is any indication, then the Red Raiders and their fans should be in for an exciting next couple of weeks.

Quincy, North Represented At Conference All-Star Games

The four local high school soccer teams were well-represented this past Saturday during the Atlantic Coast League Conference boys and girls all-star games.

Milone and Stille were also chosen as two of the top 12 players in the entire Atlantic Coast League, and they will be nominated for the EMASS All-Star Team.

GET BETTER MILEAGE WITH DIFFERENT GAS

It sometimes pays to do something that is not altogether immediately necessary. For instance, i yfou are going to repaint the hall, you might as well paint the hall closet since you already have the paint and drop cloths out anyway. The same might be said of replacing your vehicle's water pump while you are replacing the timing belt. Timing belts must be replaced at specified intervals in order to avert potential engine damage. Water pumps, on the other hand, can fail at less specified intervals. When they do, almost all the labor required to replace a water pump has already been performed while replacing the timing belt. So, why not replace both at the same time?

At LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO, we can assist you in making sure that both your timing belt and water pump are operating efficiently. If one needs replacing, we fully recommend you get the other replaced. We guarantee your satisfaction in any work that is performed by our expert car technicians. Located at 258 Quincy Ave., E. Braintree, we are proud to serve the community. Questions? Call 781-843-1550. We are your local source for propane for grills, motor homes, and converted vehicles.

HINT: When a water pump fails, the vehicle becomes inoperable due to a halt of the engine's cooling system.

Woodward School Girls Soccer In Independent Division Playoffs

Jasmine Johansen and The Woodward School for Girls varsity soccer team have qualified for the Independent Girls League 1st Division playoffs. This is the first appearance in the post-season league tournament for Woodward in their team history. The Wildcats finished their regular season with a 7-5-1 record.

The leader and goal-scoring machine for the Wildcats in 2006 was Johansen. The senior from Mattapan finished her high school career with some mind-boggling numbers. Her 26 goals and 14 assists (40 points) this season, puts her among the leading point scorers in girls' soccer for all of Eastern Massachusetts. Johansen's 102 goals and 63 assists in her high school career makes her the most prolific soccer player in Wildcat history.

Johansen was recently named, not surprisingly, to the All-League Team in the IGC.

Woodward will play a semifinal match against The Waring School on 11/1, and the winner of that game will play the winner of the Gann Academy/Montrose School semifinal game in the IGC Championship.

Marshfield Rams Raiders

The thrill and excitement of their pasting of Nauset High School one week earlier quickly dissipated last Friday night for the North Quincy Red Raider football team.

The Raiders, aiming for their second consecutive Atlantic Coast League win, traveled to Marshfield High School to see if they could crash the Rams' homecoming party, but instead, the Red Raiders were blown out like the candles on a birthday cake.

North Quincy (1-7, 1-5) were no match for the league-leading Rams (7-1,7-0), and ultimately fell by a score of 33-0. The Red Raiders could do very little offensively and defensively in front of a sell-out crowd on a cold and windy night, and the Rams' took their first two offensive plays from scrimmage to the house for an early 13-0 lead.

Marshfield quarterback Kurt Leone (4-5, 116 yards), opened the game by throwing a 50-yard touchdown pass to Ryan McElaney, and the Rams' Steven Good took the first play after a North Quincy punt, 77 yards down the right sidelines for the 13-0 lead.

The Red Raiders drove the ball all the way down to the Marshfield 4-yard line on their next possession at the end of the first quarter, but senior quarterback Shaun McBrien was picked off in the endzone, ending the only real scoring threat North Quincy would have for the remainder of the evening.

McBrien, coming off the best game of his varsity career last week versus Nauset, had a tough night against the Atlantic Coast League's stingiest defense. Marshfield is allowing a paltry 8.9 points against per game this season, and their defensive dominance continued against the Red Raiders. McBrien (4-15, 39 yards) was picked off four times, and was on the wrong end of a botched snap at their own 1-yard line that resulted in a Marshfield touchdown.

The Red Raiders were not just limited in their passing game, but also in their running attack. Marshfield held North Quincy to 59 total yards on the ground. Junior Jon Cahill paced the Raiders with 29 yards on 12 carries. Danny Jackson contributed 15 yards on six carries and caught a 15-yard pass from McBrien, and senior Dave Guerriero chipped in 15 yards on four carries.

A bright spot for the Raiders was their goal-line defense which forced a big turnover on a third down and goal play late in the first half. North Quincy recovered to keep the Rams out of the endzone, but the fumbled snap on the Raiders' first play after the Marshfield turnover resulted in a touchdown and a 27-0 halftime lead.

North Quincy will host Whitman-Hanson High School (4-4, 3-4) this Friday night at 7:00 p.m. at Veterans' Memorial Stadium.

The Red Raiders will travel down to Plymouth South (5-3, 4-2) on 11/10, and will finish their 2006 schedule on 11/23 in the annual Thanksgiving Day game versus cross-town rival Quincy.

FALL CAR CARE

Different Vehicles Require Different Winter Driving Habits

Motorists should be aware that different types of vehicles have particular operating characteristics that change the way they handle on icy or snow-covered roads, according to AAA Southern New England.

"Knowing the different winter-weather capabilities of a vehicle can mean the difference between a safe trip and serious trouble," said John Paul, AAA's Car Doctor. "Motorists should carefully read their owner's manual for information on their vehicle's equipment and handling characteristics."

Front-wheel-drive vehicles generally handle better than rear-wheel-drive vehicles on slippery roads because the weight of the engine is on the drive wheels, which improves traction. The back end rear-wheel-drive cars tends to slide from side-to-side during turns on icy roads.

While many motorists are now driving sport-utility vehicles and light trucks that can be excellent for driving in difficult conditions, AAA warns drivers not to become over-confident.

"Sport-utility vehicles and pickup trucks with four-wheel-drive make it easier to get moving on snow-covered roads, but they don't stop any quicker than other vehicles," Paul said. "Drivers still need to slow down and keep a safe distance behind the vehicle in front of them."

Drivers of pickup trucks with rear-wheel-drive need to be especially cautious on slick roads because these vehicles have very little weight over the wheels that are propelling the vehicle and are prone to rear-wheel skids on slippery roads.

A vehicle's breaking system also determines how motorists should operate in winter weather. Anti-lock brake systems (ABS) can provide a significant stopping advantage on slick roads, but are only effective if properly used. When stopping a vehicle with anti-lock brakes in slippery conditions, motorists should apply steady pressure to the brake pedal. The ABS will automatically pump the brakes to keep the wheels from locking and the vehicle from skidding.

Drivers of cars without ABS should gently apply pumping to the brakes on slippery conditions to avoid wheel lock-up.

Additionally, many new cars feature traction control, which prevents wheel spin during acceleration. This is very helpful when initially trying to get moving on slippery roads. Many cars are equipped with stability control, which helps prevent skidding.

Slick Facts About Oil

It's time to change the oil on your trusty car and you decide to do it yourself. You find yourself at the auto parts store staring at the assortment of oil on the shelves, trying to decide which one to buy and trying to decipher all the numbers and letters on the containers.

Cracking the oil code requires some basic understanding of what your vehicle requires. In every owner's manual there is a chart with a recommendation of oil type for that car.

The right engine oil is important to cold weather starts, says AAA. Oil can become thick and gluey when cold and can make it difficult for engine parts to move. Some oil grades are thinner than others, and thinner is better for winter weather.

The Society of Automotive Engineers (SAE) rates oil for its viscosity in both cold and hot conditions. The first number, usually a 5W or 10W, is and indication of how thin the oil stays when cold. The second number is an indication of how thick it stays when hot and usually ranges from 30 to 40. This means that 5W-30 oil is thinner than 10W-30 when cold.

AAA advises motorists to refer to the SAE oil rating to decide which oil grade is best, and to look in the owner's manual for the viscosity recommended for the vehicle.

Presidents Win First League Game At Nauset

By SEAN BRENNAN

FOOTBALL

The Quincy Presidents (2-5, 1-5) had to travel all the way down to North Eastham, Cape Cod last Friday night to take on Nauset High School (0-7, 0-6) in an Atlantic Coast League Conference football showdown, but the long road trip was well worth it.

The Presidents earned their first league win of the season with a 34-7 white-washing over the Warriors. Quincy took full advantage of a porous Nauset run defense, and incorporated a timely pass offense enroute to a decisive victory. The win elevated the Presidents into an eighth place tie with North Quincy in the league standings.

The win and the night belonged to seniors Tom Hazelhurst, Matt Boyle, Jared Tucker and Camillo Arredondo. All four showed up to play under the lights and each one's individual performances combined to give the Presidents the boost the team desperately needed.

The star of the game was Hazelhurst, and if there was a fantasy football league for high school teams, Quincy's senior runningback would have been the player of the week for the second straight game. Hazelhurst bested his stats from last week's game versus Dennis-Yarmouth (23 carries, 150 yards) against the Warriors. Hazelhurst finished last Friday's game with 200+ yards on the ground and four touchdowns, giving him 350+ yards and four touchdowns in his last two Atlantic Coast League contests.

Senior quarterback Matt Boyle regained some of the form that he had shown during the season's first few games with a solid night behind center. Boyle connected on a 35-yard touchdown strike to fellow senior Jared Tucker in the second quarter to help make the score 21-0 at halftime.

On the defensive side of the ball, the Presidents were led by senior captain Camillo Arredondo. Playing the middle linebacker position, Arredondo registered 10 tackles for Quincy. Like Hazelhurst, Arredondo has excelled over the last two games, showing a keen eye for the ball, while at the same time exhibiting solid senior leadership that has helped the Presidents' defense hold their last two opponents, Dennis-Yarmouth and Nauset, to 12 points and 7 points, respectively. Arredondo has 42 tackles over his last three games.

Junior defensive back Joe Reggiannini stepped up for the Presidents with two huge interceptions that helped to quell two Warrior drives.

The boys in blue and white have completed the away portion of their 2006 schedule. Their next three games will be held at Veterans' Memorial Stadium, but the team will be the away team in their Thanksgiving Day game against North Quincy.

This Saturday, Quincy will host Plymouth South (5-3, 4-2) at 7:00 p.m., and the following Friday (11/10) the Presidents will play Sandwich High School (3-5, 3-4) at 7:00 p.m. The team will finish their season when they play guests to the North Quincy Red Raiders in the two teams 73rd annual Thanksgiving Day game.

Since three consecutive wins by North Quincy (1991-1993) in the early 1990s, the Presidents have held the advantage in the annual turkey day game. Quincy is 10-1 against North since the 1994 football season, with the Red Raiders lone win coming in a 21-6 victory in 1998.

This year's game will pit a first-year coach (Jim Connor/NQ) against a Thanksgiving Day veteran (Bob Noble/Quincy), and will put two senior laden rosters up against each other one last time.

Allison Auppelee Rookie Of Week

Allison Auppelee, a freshmen volleyball player at Eastern Nazarene College and a 2006 graduate of North Quincy High School, recently earned Rookie of the Week honors for her outstanding play in Commonwealth Coast Conference volleyball action.

Auppelee received CCC Rookie of the Week honors after her solid all-around performances during the Crusaders' three win/one loss week of Oct. 15th-21st.

The outside hitter and Quincy native, averaged 5.31 digs, 1.39 kills and .92 service aces over the 13 game span. The 5'8" freshmen posted a double-double (10 kills, 35 digs) versus Newbury College on Eastern Nazarene's homecoming weekend.

Allison Auppelee and the Crusaders are now 13-13 overall and 5-4 in the Commonwealth Coast Conference. League playoffs begin on 10/31.

City Tennis Tourney Champions Crowned

The Quincy Recreation Department and Quincy Credit Union recently sponsored the 36th annual city-wide tennis tournament.

The 11-event, three week, 150 match tournament brings together young and old, families, past champions and first-time entries to determine which residents will be crowned City Champions. The tournament is held annually at the Russell Park Tennis Courts.

In the Women's Singles Championship, Patrice Sullivan advanced through a challenging draw to win her third straight city title over two-time champion Phoebe Chan, 6-1, 6-3.

Ron Abell won the "Lionel Shine Buckley Bowl" for his second Men's Singles Championship, 7-6, 6-4, over two-time champion Jirawat Anektanasap.

In the Girls' Sixteen and Under final, twin sisters Sara and Elizabeth Sullivan (the daughters of Patrice Sullivan) battled for two and a half hours. At the conclusion of the evenly played match, Sara Sullivan was crowned champion with a 2-6, 6-4, 7-5 over her sister. The girls, who are only twelve years old, demonstrated that they have the skills to be on the Quincy Tennis top player's list for years to come.

One of the most exciting matches took place in the Boys' Sixteen and Under event. In the end, Robert Yee won for the second straight year over Alexander Lato, 6-1, 6-0.

In other tennis action, tournament regular, Job Chan, repeated his 2002 win in the Men's "B" event with a 6-2, 6-1 victory over Paul Silva in the same event this year.

Richard Meade and Joseph DelRosso played in the final of the Men's 50 and Over event, and DelRosso bested Meade, 6-1, 6-2. DelRosso's win earned him the Richard Meade Bowl for 2006.

Victor Luzarraga and Helen Mao defeated Ron Arbell and Allison Eleey, 3-6, 6-3, 6-3, to win the William F. Ryan Bowl in the Mixed Doubles final.

Luzarraga added to his Mixed Doubles win with a victory in the final of the Men's 35 and Over event. His opponent Cristan Popa was forced to retire because of injury. The win was Luzarraga's third straight victory in this event.

In the Women's 35 and Over event, Helen Mao defeated Patrice Sullivan in three hard-fought sets, 7-5, 1-6, 6-1.

The Women's Double Championship has been won by Aileen Eleey and nine assorted partners nine times since 1993, and this year's tournament was no different. Eleey teamed with her daughter Jacquelyn this year and made it six straight years of championships by defeating newcomers Mary Brown and Linda Adams, 6-1, 6-2.

One of the most competitive events in the tournament, the Henry McAulfee Bowl, was won this year by the team of Jirawat Anektansap and Michael Chan. Anektansap and Chan defeated Luzarraga and Josh Pendergast, 6-1, 4-6, 7-5.

In the popular City Employee Event, Jack Goddard, of the Quincy Fire Department, defeated retired Planning Director Richard Meade, 6-4, 6-3 in men's action. In women's play, Liz Clancy of Q.A.T.V. defeated Kathy Brennan of Quincy College, 6-0, 6-4, to win the women's event.

Recreation Director Barry J. Welch once again credited Tournament Director John Franceschini for creating an outstanding draw and an inviting atmosphere for the tourney.

"The play was excellent and equally important the participants also had fun," Welch said.

Welch also had high praise for tournament co-director, Michelle Hanly, who was instrumental in directing the time and days of the matches, and worked around the weather and the participants' work schedules.

"We could not have operated without her," Welch said. "We are fortunate to have such a great staff."

Welch continued to praise the involvement of the Quincy Credit Union for its financial support of the tournament and their contribution of a can of balls to all participants.

"I know that they (Quincy Credit Union) recognize that traditional events, like our tournament, contribute to the fabric of our community," Welch said. "We would not be able to continue this event without such a caring and willing sponsor."

All champions have their names engraved on a permanent bowl, which is displayed year-round in the Recreation Office.

The Garden Bug

Planting in the fall

People are most inclined to plant when spring arrives, but fall is the best time to plant trees and shrubs. The soil is still warm and moist from summer, and allows a season to establish roots without supplying energy for foliage, making them stronger going into next summer.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) A relatively quiet time is now giving way to a period of high activity. Face it with the anticipation that it will bring you some well-deserved boons and benefits.

SCOTT DEWARE

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

In less than a week we will have a chance to exercise one of our great privileges as Americans. Yes, it's time to vote again. Election Day is next Tuesday, November 2. We can exercise a right that nearly every American is willing to fight to maintain, yet pitifully few exercise and fewer exercise seriously.

No need to discuss at length the reasons for low voter participation. The reasons given vary little over time . . . no good candidates, too much corruption, my vote doesn't matter, not registered but may register and vote next time, etc., etc.

Granted some of the folks we elect leave much to be desired, but if all the smart people who didn't vote or weren't registered had been registered and had voted, maybe we'd have elected better. It is so easy to agree with Harry Truman who said, "Ninety percent of politicians give the other 10 percent a bad reputation," but if we don't vote, there is no chance of improvement.

Let us, as Americans, make next Tuesday a very special day. Let us exercise our very special right. Let us "in droves" go to the polls and vote for the candidate of our choice and for the issues we believe in.

Community Preservation Act – Nicer Neighborhoods in Quincy

A steady funding source for 3 issues facing Quincy...

1. Preservation of land for open space
2. Restoration of our historic sites
3. Providing avenues for affordabie housing

"The time to act is now. The sooner we enact the CPA, the sooner we will avail ourselves of the funds necessary to preserve what little open space is left in Quincy.
– Ross E., Narragansett Rd.

The most logical reason to Vote Yes on 4 is that Quincy is already paying into the CPA. Without the CPA, Quincy residents are handing almost half a million dollars per year over to other towns.
– Maureen M., Bayberry Rd.

Is protecting the remaining open spaces, preserving historic sites & supporting affordable housing in Quincy worth $26.50 per year? We think it is and we hope the voters of Quincy will agree.
– Maura O., Chickatabot Rd."

Quincy residents have already paid $2.5 million into the state CPA fund, but we can't access that fund since we have not yet passed the CPA.

The CPA already benefits 111 cities & towns in MA, including Braintree, Weymouth & Randolph.

Those communities are using OUR money to improve their neighborhoods.

Isn't it time we invested this money in our community?

On Tuesday...

It's Patrick-Murray Here, Statewide

The Milton Democrat and his running mate, Worcester Mayor Tim Murray cruised by Lt. Gov. Kerry Healey and Reed V. Hillman.

The Patrick-Murray team took nearly 52 percent of the Quincy vote with 14,914. Healey-Reed had 37 percent with 10,684.

Independent Christy Mihos and Green Rainbow Party candidate Grace Ross were a far back third and fourth.

Mihos's vote here was 2,479 and Ross had only 687.

Fifty-four percent of Quincy's 54,503 registered voters went to the polls, a little higher than the 48-to-50 percent expected.

Patrick, who served in the Justice Department in the Clinton administration, was making his first bid for public office in Massachusetts.

State Treasurer Tim Cahill was re-elected as was Congressman William Delahunt in the 10th Congressional District. Both are Quincy Democrats.

Cahill crushed Green Rainbow challenger James O'Keefe here with 88 percent of the vote. Cahill's vote was 24,025 to O'Keefe's 3,086.

Delahunt easily turned back challenges from Republican Jeffrey K. Beatty and Independent Peter A. White.

Delahunt took 75 percent of the vote here with 20,875 to Beatty's 5,482 and White's 1,446.

Senator Edward M. Kennedy topped Republican challenger Kenneth G. Chase, 19,986 to 7,903.

Democrat Martha Coakley was elected attorney general over Republican Larry Frisoli. Coakley's Quincy vote was 20,783 to Frisoli's 6,883.

Secretary of State William F. Galvin rode to another term, over Jill E. Stein, Green Rainbow candidate. Galvin had 22,754 votes here to Stein's 3,657.

State Auditor A. Joseph DeNucci had little trouble fending off challenger Rand William, Working Families party candidate. DeNucci's Quincy vote was 21,636 to Wilson's 4,275.

Local incumbents state Senator Michael W. Morrissey and state Representatives Bruce J. Ayers, Ronald Mariano and A. Stephen Tobin, all Quincy Democrats, were re-elected unopposed.

Morrissey's vote was 23,121; Ayers 9,037; Mariano 4,320 and Tobin 9,508.

Also re-elected without opposition were Norfolk County Dist. Atty. William R. Keating, Clerk of Courts Walter F. Timilty, Jr. and Register of Deeds William P. O'Donnell.

County Commissioner Peter H. Collins topped Republican challenger Thomas E. Gorman of Dedham here, 17,394 to 6,428 and appeared well on his way to re-election.

76th In Nation

Quincy Rated State's Second Safest City

Quincy was recently rated second in Massachusetts and 76th nationally in a recent study of America's safest cities.

Only perennial leader Newton was rated higher than Quincy.

The ratings were based on major crime statistics reported to the FBI, released this past June. Quincy moved up 19 spots from 95th last year to 76th.

"This is a testament to the job that the Quincy Police Department and Chief Robert Crowley are doing on a daily basis," said Mayor William Phelan. "We have the best-educated, best-trained force in the history of the department and these results reflect that. I am proud of the job that our policemen and policewoman do to keep our residents safe and comfortable."

In Massachusetts, Newton and Quincy were followed by Somerville (85th nationally), Cambridge (117), Worcester (229), New Bedford (254), Boston (314), and Springfield (341).

"We will continue to improve our community policing program and support crime prevention programs like our Summer Anti-Gang programs and citizen police academies. There are also a host of positive after-school educational and recreational programs that set our young people on the right path. I will continue to support those programs in an effort to reap great benefits for our community."

Crowley cited the success of the community policing programs, the city's participation in the new Boston Regional Intelligence Center (BRIC), the number of after-school programs for young people, and the handwork of the men and women of the Quincy Police Department as reasons for the success of the department."

Free Legal Clinics At Quincy Court

The Norfolk County Bar Association is sponsoring free legal clinics at Quincy District Court, with the next one scheduled for Nov. 14.

A panel of attorneys experienced in all areas of the law will be available for one-on-one confidential consultation. No appointment is necessary.

The clinics will be held Tuesdays from 6 to 8 p.m. The schedule after Nov. 14:

Dec. 5, April 10, May 8, May 22, July 10 and Aug. 14.

For more information contact Adrienne Clarke at 617-471-9693.

Question 4 Only Winner

The vote on Question 4 was: Yes: 14,491. No: 11,125.

Question 1: Allowing wine to be sold in food stores: No: 16,374. Yes: 10,270.

Question 2: Nominating candidates for public office. No: 17,294. Yes: 8,485.

Question 3: Allowing unions to organize employees in day care centers operated in homes. No: 13,227. Yes: 12,481.

Plead Innocent, Held On $100,000 Bail

5 Arrested In Drug Raid At Quincy Apartment

Norfolk District Attorney Bill Keating's Drug Task Force arrested five men in a raid at a Quincy apartment Keating said was being used as a drug "warehouse" last weekend.

"This is something very bold on the part of drug dealers that we had not seen until recently," Keating said. "Setting up a warehouse for drug distribution in a suburban area is something we had not seen until this year."

State Police from District Attorney's Drug Task Force worked with agents from the Drug Enforcement Administration for roughly a month developing information that an apartment at 225 Independence Ave. was being used as a storehouse with kilos of cocaine and quantities of other drugs being moved in and out of it.

"Fear of neighbors observing this kind of activity had suppressed using suburban areas in this way in the past," Keating said. "It is often observed that people interact less with their neighbors now, keep to themselves more. We are asking the public to join us in targeting this by making police aware of activity they deem suspicious."

BILL KEATING

Surveillance of the apartment led to arrests on Wednesday and Friday, and a court sanctioned search of that property late Friday night.

Keating said, on Wednesday, Wilber Ruiz, 24, of Jamaica Plain was stopped in Dorchester by State Police, after he left Independence Ave. in a car and found to have a kilo of cocaine in a "hide" or a secret storage compartment built into the dashboard of his car. He pled not guilty to cocaine trafficking and is being held on $100,000 cash bail or $1 million surety.

On Friday, Keating said, State Police arrested Carlos Vasquez, 28, of Revere, Urcinio Nivar-Marcano, 35, of Lawrence, Hector Rodriguez, 31, of Lynn and Jonathan C. Ramos, 23, of Boston. They pled not guilty at their arraignments in Quincy District Court on Monday and are being held on $100,000 cash bail or $1 million surety. They are due back in court Dec. 5.

Following these arrests, State Police and Quincy Police executed a search warrant on Independence Avenue apartment, Keating said.

"A search dog trained in locating narcotics was released into the house first," Keating said. That dog indicated an area of wall which, when pried open by State Police, showed a secret compartment built into the wall to store drugs.

"The secret compartment contained 40 grams of cocaine, notes from possible drug transactions, and many boxes of glassine baggies often used for repackaging narcotics," Keating said. "No one was in the apartment at the time of the search, and it did not appear anyone was living there full-time."

Quincy Teaming With Others To Mobilize Medical Reserve Corps

To Assist Emergencies

The Quincy Health Board is working with other local communities to mobilize volunteers for a Medical Reserve Corps that would assist in the event of a health emergency.

Quincy Health Commissioner Andrew Scheele said disasters such as Hurricane Katrina, tsunamis and the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks have made communities all the more aware of the need for an organized group of qualified volunteers who are preparing to help.

Future needs, he said, may include flu pandemic or bioterrorism.

The Quincy Board of Health would like to identify, credentiate and train as many volunteers as possible. Volunteers may be nurses, physicians, pharmacists and physician assistants, whether practicing or retired, those with experience in public health, mental health and allied health professionals or community members without medical training to assist with administrative and other essential support functions.

An information session for health professionals and other interested citizens will be held Wednesday, Nov. 15 at 2 p.m. and Thursday, Nov. 16 at 7 p.m., City Hall in the second floor conference room, Quincy Center. For directions and to RSVP, contact Alison Minkoff at 617-665-3871 or email aminkoff@challiance.org.

Recognizing that many professionals have limited time to volunteer, the Board of Health encouraged Medical Reserve Corps members to choose their level of participation. Volunteers may elect to serve their community both during emergencies and for more routine public health needs such as immunization clinics, screenings and health education, or strictly during emergencies. Because Quincy is working in cooperation with 27 area communities to share resources, volunteers may also choose to serve only in their town or as part of the regional Medical Reserve Corps.

The other communities are all part of Massachusetts Public Health Region 4b, which encompasses 27 cities and towns and 981,000 residents. The Region 2b Medical Reserve Corps will be a cadre of trained volunteers from communities in the region who will work with medical, public health and other local emergency responders to guarantee a timely and harmonized volunteer response for local and regional public health emergencies.

Medical Reserve Corps, a component of USA Freedom Corps, was created in 2002 to promote and organize volunteerism and service in the United States. While the Office of the U.S. Surgeon General oversees the national network of MRC volunteers, there are more than 200 MRC units throughout the nation. Each unit is organized locally to ensure that individual community needs are addressed.

More specific examples of practicing and retired professionals who are encouraged to volunteer include, but are not limited to: physicians, nurses, dentists, veterinarians, pharmacists, respiratory therapists, epidemiologists, health educators, psychologists, social workers, chaplains, language interpreters, lawyers, funeral directors and administrators. Medical, public health, and other allied health professionals are also encouraged to apply, as well as non-medical personnel. United States citizenship is not rquired to be a Medical Reserve Corps volunteer.

Communities in Region 4b are: Arlington, Belmont, Braintree, Brookline, Cambridge, Canton, Chelsea, Cohasset, Everett, Dedham, Hanover, Hingham, Hull, Milton, Needham, Newton, Norwell, Norwood, Quincy, Revere, Scituate, Somerville, Watertown, Wellesley, Westwood, Weymouth and Winthrop.

For more information, contact Scheele at 617-376-1272 or Alison Minkoff at 617-665-3871 or email her at aminkoff@challiance.org.

Veterans Day Parade, Ceremonies Saturday

Decorated Iraq War Veteran Keynote Speaker

A decorated veteran of the Iraq War and a Quincy native will be the keynote speaker Saturday as Quincy observes Veterans Day with its annual parade and ceremonies.

Lt. Col. Robert A. Frazier, who returned from Iraq in March, is now assigned as Division Chief, Requirements and Assessments, Rapid Equipping Force, Office of the Assistant Chief of Staff at the Pentagon.

He served with the Multi-National Corps in Iraq. Prior to that he was Director of Personnel and Community Affairs at the Army National Guard Training Site at Camp Edwards.

The parade will start at 10:30 a.m. from in front of St. John's Church on School Street and proceed along Hancock Street to the World War I Doughboy Statue at the Adams Academy where the ceremonies will be held.

In the event of inclement weather, the ceremonies will be held at 11 a.m. in the Center For Technical Education gym on Coddington Street.

Three of five North Quincy High School 2006 graduates who recently completed Marine basic training at Parris Island, S.C., will march alongside Mayor William Phelan in the parade.

They are Pfc. Robert Connell, son of Robert and Karen Connell; Sean Joyce, son of Daniel and Catherine Joyce; and Matthew Tobin, son of Mark and Judith Tobin, and nephew of Mayor Phelan.

The other two, Pfc. Stephen Spring, son of Kathleen Spring and Pfc. Keith Lorsordo, son of Joseph and Kim Lorsordo are at Camp Lejeune, N.C. for additional combat training.

Frazier, whose military career spans 38 years, received the Bronze Star Medal for service in Iraq, the Global War on Terrorism Service Medal and the Iraq Campaign Medal.

He is also the recipient of the Army Reserve Components Achievement Medal, National Defense Service Medal, Humanitarian Service Medal and the Armed Forces Reserve Medal.

A Quincy native, he is the son of Ansel R. Frazier, a World War II veteran who served 30 years in the Quincy Fire Department and Mary (Costello) Frazier, Quincy High School class of 1939.

He attended St. John's elementary school, Central Middle and Quincy High School class of 1964.

Vaccine Is Ready For Flu Season

Remember the great flu crisis of aught-five when it was touch and go for a while whether or not we would have enough vaccine to protect even the elderly among us?

Well, take it from Health Commissioner Drew Scheele, you can forgeddaboudid in aught-six.

"We'll have more than enough vaccine this year," he said. "I expected we'll have about 3,700 doses. We have 350 doses on hand now and they are coming in 10 per cent allotments at a time.

"We'll have all the vaccine we need by Nov. 24."

The first doses of the vaccine will be given to those who will need it the most, the residents of the senior housing complexes. Seniors won't have to travel to clinics to get the shots. The shots will come to them on their home turf.

After that, four free clinics have been scheduled for the general public:

• Saturday, Nov. 18, from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m., at the Safety Fair at the Koch Park and Recreation Complex, One Merrymount Parkway.

• Wednesday, Nov. 29, from 9:30 to 11 a.m., at the Elks Lodge, 254 Quarry St.

• Sunday, Dec. 3, from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m., at the Health Department, 1585 Hancock St.

• Wednesday, Dec. 6, from 2 to 4 p.m., at the Health Department, 1585 Hancock St.

If you should happen to pass up the four clinics, the shots will be available every Wednesday from 2 to 4 p.m. at the Health Department until the vaccine is gone.

By that time, Quincy folks should be well insulated against the flu as it enters its peak season in February and March.

The adjustable rate mortgage that got you into your house might not be the right loan for you now

A fixed rate mortgage is a locked-in sure thing. No more getting panicky about rising interest rates or dealing with annual adjustments that make your original "great rate" not so great after all. With a fixed rate, you get stability and an absolute guarantee of what your principal & interest payment will be next month, next year and until the day you pay it off. Taxes, water & sewer and the cost of living generally only keep going up. But your monthly principal & interest payment can stay the same for the next 30 years. And with fixed rates still near historic lows, you may even be able to lower your payment or take out some cash. People who switch to a fixed rate are glad they did! Is switching right for you? Come see us or call Richard Coleman or Angela Blanchard at 617-471-0750.

Cheney Coming Back?

With the state election now over, political observers are beginning to take a look at next year's city election.

Right now it looks like a pretty tame one. No challengers in sight for mayor, city council or school committee.

But things can suddenly change.

CHENEY

Is he coming back? Looks like he's itching to do so.

Cheney, who served 13 years in the City Council, two as president, left in 1997.

Now, nine years later, he appears to be coming down with that old political fever.

"Yes," he acknowledges when asked if he's thinking of running next year. "I'm weighing my options."

His options seem to be revolving somewhat around Joe Finn.

If Finn runs for mayor next year, would he run for Finn's council at-large seat?

FINN

"Possibility," Cheney says. "That's one option."

Another option:

"If Joe did run for mayor, I might just help him full-time. I think he would make a good mayor."

One more option:

If Finn doesn't run for mayor would Cheney?

"Possibility," he says, and adds:

"I'm seriously considering doing something. It's frustrating to be sitting on the sidelines and see things you believe should be changed and you're not in a position to change them. Or, there's something you don't want to see happen and can't do anything about it."

One of the things he doesn't want to see is the city to take over the Souther Tide Mill.

"It would take between $1.5 and $3 million to restore it," he says. "I don't support using taxpayers' money for that. It should be done through a private non-profit organization with some help from the city."

Cheney spoke in opposition to taking over the Tide Mill property at a City Council meeting in September.

His appearance touched off the first speculation he might be coming back as a candidate next year.

Cheney served in the council from 1984 to 1997, five years as Ward 1 councillor and eight at-large. He was council president in 1994-95.

He was an aggressive, hard-working councillor who let you know where he stood on issues. "No comment" wasn't in his vocabulary.

At that time he was working nights as an MBTA mechanic which meant at the end of Monday night council meetings he would head to his MBTA job instead of home. And after spending the night at work, he would first stop off at City Hall in the morning to see if there were any messages for him.

In between he found time to head up such major community projects as the First Night celebration and Arts in the Park.

Cheney is now a consultant with clients that include union Locals 133 (laborers) and 424 (carpenters), the Plymouth County Sheriff's office and fundraising events.

That union connection would help jump-start a new political career.

And if he did come back, it would certainly liven things up.

FORMER WJDA STAFFERS Mike and Debbie Logan are now in new teaching careers.

Mike, who was the news director and Debbie, assistant manager, are both English teachers in Taunton middle schools: Mike, 8th grade at the Parker and Debbie 7th and 8th grade at the Martin.

Mike's company, MWL Sports, will produce the game.

MILESTONE: Deanna (Gazarian) Seymourian, former owner of Phase II in Quincy Center, and husband, Greg, are grandparents of twins for the second time.

DEANNA

Daughter Jessica and husband Brian Cherry welcomed Stephen Brian and Abigail Anne Oct. 6 at Brigham and Women's Hospital.

Jessica is a member of Sheriff Michael Bellotti's legal department staff and Brian is a Milton police lieutenant.

Daughter Karin and husband Jim Sheridan presented Deanna and Greg with their first set of twin grandchildren five years ago.

The latest set brings the total number of grandchildren to seven.

Deanna, a past president of the Quincy Business Association, is keeping busy as burser, managing social functions and bookings at the Milton Women's Clubhouse. (You can reach her at 617-696-6736.)

PET PEEVE: Those people who leave shopping carts in the middle of a parking space or straddling two in supermarket parking lots instead of returning them to the designated drop-off which is usually close by. Are they too darn lazy or too darn inconsiderate?

Frank Bellotti Stands For 'The Best In All Of Us'

Back when I was growing up, there was a host of politicians in the late 50s and early 60s who fought with passion, but never forgot their principles. I think of folks like Jack Kennedy, Chub Peabody, Kevin White and Frank Bellotti.

Recently, the Quincy Democrats honored Francis X. Bellotti for his lifetime achievement in politics.

His speech to those assembled explained with vigor about what government should be. It isn't to make a profit. It's not them. Government is us, and government is there to help not hinder.

As I listened to Bellotti, he sounded like a dinosaur because too many polls today live by sound-bites and 30 second ads. If they tell a stupid joke their too big to apologize.

Frank Bellotti was the first pal I ever volunteered my services. In 1970 I was 22 years and I was attracted to Bellotti's ideals. He didn't win that year, but it didn't stop me from working over the years in endless campaigns. My ideals are slightly jaded with the years, but I still believe, like Frank Bellotti, that public service is about serving the needs of people. It's a partnership between all of us.

Back in 1990 I volunteered in Frank Bellotti's last campaign with the same person as in 1970. Bellotti did likewise.

Frank Bellotti is real. He has always stood for the best in all of us. He never ran on fear, but always hope.

Today's politicians could take a lesson from his career. As a Democrat, I think he left a legacy about caring about those he served. It was never just a job or campaign.

A 'Thank You' For Police Seminars

I want to thank Sgt. Dick Potter with assists from Capt. Paul Keenan and Lt. Dan Minton of the Quincy Police Department for presenting Police Seminars during the month of October to residents of the Granite Place Elderly Housing, 125 Granite St.

He introduced interesting and pertinent topics to our residents and brought in guest speakers that spoke on elder abuse, identity theft, safety and information of Fallon Ambulance services, MBTA accessibility and the Council on Aging. His program was extremely well-received by all that attend. A "thank you" also to Councillor Kevin Coughlin for his continued support.

We as tax-payers and residents of Quincy should be very proud of the men and women that service our needs and protect us from those that want to harm us. The Granite Place residents know that the Quincy Police Department is there for them and that the department is one of the finest in the state of Massachusetts.

Thank you again and I hope that the program can continue for years to come.

An Open Letter To QMC Nurses And Technicians

After five weeks at Quincy Medical Center, I'm home now and feeling better, thanks to all of you.

I'd like to acknowledge the never-ending kindness I received during the five weeks I was in your care.

The task was monumental, yet day after day and night after night you performed like a choir of angels.

As sick as I was, I was constantly amazed at your dedication.

It wasn't just that you knew what to do to make me feel safe, the way you did your job made me feel important, as though each and every one of you really cared.

I've never been so sick and I've never felt so much concern from so many.

I am forever grateful and I'll never forget you.

I love you one and all!

Stage Set For Hot Ward Council, School Races

This Week
33 Years Ago

By FRANK McCAULEY

Tuesday's preliminary election results have set the stage for red hot ward council and school committee races in the Dec. 4 final election.

A surprising 39 percent (19,204) of the city's 48,838 registered voters went to the polls. A lean 28 percent had been forecast. Mayor Walter Hannon with 11,110 votes, will face Mrs. Grace Saphir with 5,997 votes, in the final election. Incumbent City Councillors Clifford Marshall, Ward 2, Albert Barilaro, Ward 4, J. Vincent Smyth, Ward 6, as well as Councillors at Large Arthur Tobin, Joseph LaRaia and John Quinn were all nominated.

Quincy's preliminary election had been an on again off again affair for months after the city had been ordered by a federal court judge to redistrict. This delay caused the scheduled Nov. 6 final election to become the preliminary election with the final election scheduled for Dec. 4

Easy Peanut Butter Cookies

If you're a peanut butter lover, here is the easiest recipe that I have found for a great peanut butter cookie. Imagine a recipe without flour.

Today's recipe can be used with either Splenda or sugar equally as tasty especially for those on a sugar free diet.

Easy Peanut Butter Cookie

Pre-heat oven to 350 degrees.

1 cup of either creamy or crunchy peanut butter

1 cup sugar (or splenda)

1 egg (slightly beaten)

1 teaspoons vanilla

Mix all of the ingredients together. Roll in walnut sized balls and place on a slightly greased cookie sheet If it is too moist, you can dip them lightly in flour or some more sugar. Then flatten them a bit and top with a fork making lines on each.

Bake for about 12 minutes. Wasn't that easy?

Special Tribute To Late Teacher

Bernazzani School Remembers Jane Farrell-Smith

By MIKAELA SLANEY

Bernazzani School students, teachers, and parents honored their late second grade teacher, Jane Farrell-Smith, with a special assembly tribute last Friday, followed by the planting of daffodil bulbs in her memory in front of the school.

Mrs. Farrell-Smith died Oct. 19 at the age of 45, leaving her husband Frederick D. "Rick" Smith Jr., and son Spencer Smith.

Daffodils were chosen in remembrance of her program "Daffodil Days," which she helped coordinate at the school to benefit the American Cancer Society.

Bernazzani students and teachers sang "Take Me Out to the Ball Game," to honor her love for the Red Sox, and participated in the "Dinosaur Dance," which she had made popular among her students.

"The last few weeks have bee extremely difficult for those who knew her," said Peter Dionne, principal of Bernazzani School. "In the spring we will be rewarded with beautful yellow daffodils out in front of the school."

JANE FARRELL SMITH

Her former second grade students took turns sharing memories.

Brendan Fitzpatrick recalled how she loved the Red Sox, dressing up as Johnny Damon once at school, and how she loved her son Spencer, and spoke of him often.

"Mrs. Farrell-Smith will always be in my heart," he said, "and I hope she'll be in yours too."

Stephanie DiPietro remembered experiments that she conducted with her class, and playing games such as "Four Corners," and "Telephone."

BRENDAN FITZPATRICK, a former second grade student of Mrs. Jane Farrell-Smith's, said, "Mrs. Farrell-Smith will always be in my heart, and I hope she'll be in yours too."

"There is no teacher as humorous or dear as Mrs. Farrell-Smith," he said.

Kerry Phelan, daughter of Mayor William Phelan, said that she will remember Farrell-Smith's hugs and songs.

"The first day I walked in to Mrs. Farrell-Smith's class I felt special," she said. "I'm sorry we lost her, but she's still in my heart. I'll never forget Mrs. Farrell-Smith."

Mrs. Farrell-Smith was a school teacher in Quincy for 20 years, and moved to Quincy 19 years ago. She represented Bernazzani School in the Quincy Education Association. She was a classically trained ballerina, and taught ballet and jazz.

Mayor William Phelan attended the tribute, and watched his daughter, Kerry, speak.

Those wishing to honor her memory may send donations to the Jane Farrell Smith Scholarship Fund, c/o Colonial Federal Savings Bank, 15 Beach St., Quincy, MA, 02170.

'Tanline' Business Not Yet In Relocation Negotiations

By MIKAELA SLANEY

Guy Bognanno, business owner of 'Tanline,' said that although property owner Cifrino Realty Trust has accepted terms from the city to take the property, he has not started negotiations to relocate the business.

"Tanline", 148 Parkingway, is located at the center of the designed Concourse Project which is set to connect Burgin Parkway with McGrath Highway across Hancock Street.

Bognanno told The Sun that he and Cifrino Realty Trust are to settle with the city separately. He said that the negotiation process and then the moving process could take an extended amount of time.

"We've been waiting to move for over 10 years," he said. "The city and I have not begun to negotiate a relocation package as of today (Tuesday). To my understanding it will be happening shortly. I will notify clients in plenty of time.

"We have not even found a new location yet. This process could take months. I really don't have an idea of a timetable, and we are doing business as usual. We were voted for the 5th straight year as 'Quincy's Best Tanning Salon, Travel Agency.'"

Bognanno also urges his clients to visit the other Tanline location at 1 Elm Ave., Wollaston.

The Oct. 31 City Council meeting yielded a unanimous vote by the Downtown Committee to accept terms, when Dennis Harrington planning director, assured the Council that the Cifrino Realty Trust was cooperative with the city.

Tom Stansbury Honored As Jewish War Veterans 'Citizen Of The Year'

TOM STANSBURY of the Quincy Veterans Services Department, receives the Quincy Jewish War Veterans "Citizen Of The Year Award" from Harvey Solomon, past commander and program co-chairman.

Tom Stansbury of the Quincy Veterans Services Department, was honored Sunday by the Quincy Jewish War Veterans Post as its 56th annual "Citizens of the Year."

Stansbury, Graves Registration Officer, was recognized for his dedication to veterans' causes.

He was presented with the award at a breakfast at Beth Israel Synagogue. The presentation was made by Past Commander Harvey Solomon, co-program chairman on behalf of Commander Dr. Bertrand Shaffer, co-chairman Irving Isaacson and members of the post.

Two mayors, William Phelan, former mayor Frank McCauley, and City Council President Doug Gutro were among those attending. McCauley was last year's recipient of the award.

Other officials, faculty members and past recipients of the award also attended.

Phelan had this tribute:

"Tom has really dedicated his life to the service of others (with) the compassion that leads him to be involved in so many benevolent organizations and charitable causes not just as a member of an organization but as a human being. He cares deeply for his fellow men and is a great choice as Citizen of the Year."

Phelan presented Stansbury with a Certificate of Recognition for his "unwavering commitment to veterans and dedication and devotion to duty that has made Quincy a better place to work and live."

Gutro, who presented Stansbury with a City Council commendation said:

"Tom Stansbury has impeccable credentials, decades of service to the city and country and he has quietly dedicated his life to the veterans of this community, the Quincy Veterans Council and the city in various capacities that have brought respect and honor to Quincy veterans and their families."

Tacky Chan, representing state Senator Michael Morrissey, presented Stansbury with a senate citation in recognition of his "outstanding service and dedication to veterans causes."

Henry "Hank" Bradley, Director of Quincy Veterans Services, and a recipient of the award himself, said:

"Tom's dedication knows no limits. Rain, snow or shine, if there is a problem he will be out there. He doesn't care if it's on or off the clock, he is out there. He is out there for the family of the veteran."

Stansbury said he was surprised at his selection, referring to himself as "the guy in the background just doing my job." He thanked the Quincy Jewish War Veterans for the honor and his wife, Nancy, who sat beside him, for her help and support.

He served in the Navy from 1968 to 1972 as a radarman and is past commander of Morrisette Legion Post and the Quincy Veterans Council.

FOOT CARE FOR DIABETICS

Diabetes often results in foot problems, so a proactive approach is critical to prevent serious complications. It's important to see a podiatrist at least annually for a complete evaluation. Your podiatrist will examine your feet to assess your risk of developing nerve damage, vascular problems, or other complications. He or she will do this by inquiring if you ever feel tingling, burning, or numbness on the skin, or if you suffer calf muscle cramps during activity. The podiatrist will check for calluses that can lead to open wounds if left untreated and also for deformities like bunions, hammertoes, or unusually high or low arches. These deformities can lead to sores on the feet when shoes rub against them.

If you have diabetes, you no doubt already know about the special health challenges you face as a result of this disease. Seek professional help for treatment as well as prevention. And be sure to participate with us in the American Diabetes Association's National Diabetes Month to help communicate the seriousness of this disease and the importance of its control and treatment. Diabetic Medicare Recipients: Be sure to ask us about receiving comfortable shoes, expertly fitted by a podiatrist at NO COST to you. We're located at 999 North Main Street, in the MEDICAL OFFICE BUILDING. Office hours are also available at Quincy Medical Center and Milton Medical Building. Call us at 781-986-3668.

HINT: In addition to booking an annual podiatric exam, check your feet daily for any scapes, cuts, or redness that may require medical attention.

11:15 a.m. Ceremony Sunday

Flagpole Dedication At Point Congregational To Honor Veterans

Veterans will be recognized and honored at the Flagpole Dedication Ceremony in front of the Quincy Point Congregational Church, 444 Washington St., Sunday at 11:15 a.m.

Glenn McGhee, moderator of the church, and a marine veteran will be the master of ceremonies. Guests will include Jake Comer, past national commander, American Legion and Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymondi.

Pat Strout of Duxbury and Bob Mastico of Quincy will play trumpet. Choral music will be by the Chancel Choir, under the direction of Paul A. Thistle. The National Anthem will be sung by Alyson Greer, a teacher in the Hanover Public Schools.

During the 10 a.m. worship service in the sanctuary, family members of deceased veterans are invited to bring a memorial flag for a blessing at the altar. The theme for the morning is "Sacrifice and Service."

The idea of a flagpole honoring veterans was that of Don Smith, a church member.

"What really got to me was the great response to the idea," he said. "I believe the flagpole will honor all veterans of the church and the community."

FLAGPOLE AT QUINCY Point Congregational Church, Washington St., will be dedicated Sunday in honor of veterans who have served their country.

Rev. Ann Suzedell, pastor, said he hopes that the sight of the flag flying will "let all veterans know that their service is honored; let those who have lost loved ones who were veterans know that their lives are remembered with gratitude, and assure family members of those who are currently serving in the military that they are always in our hearts."

Anyone who would like to bring a flag to the 10 a.m. worship service for the blessing is invited to call the church office at 617-773-6424 so that the name may be read. Veterans who are planning on attending the 11:15 a.m. service are also invited to call the church so that their names may be in the program.

The Best Time to Exercise

Q: What is the best time of the day to exercise? I have heard many opinions. Some people say morning, some say afternoon or night. Which one is right?

A: Whatever time of the day you plan to work out is the best time for YOU. Completing a consistent, safe and effective exercise program is more important than worrying about performing that workout at a certain time of day.

There is lots of research on the best times of day to exercise. Several studies have concluded that afternoon can produce the best outcomes in athletic performance. However, the general population has many factors to consider, such as family, work and other obligations that affect the scheduling of workout times.

If you are a morning person and feel you have the most energy in the morning to safely and effectively complete your exercise routines, then morning is the best time for you. After a long day of work, exercising may be the last thing you want to do, making it a stressful and less positive experience. This may suggest that for you to stay motivated and committed to your exercise program, you should choose a time in the morning to exercise and get your day going.

Others may be on a completely different schedule. They might like to exercise after work and feel as if they can de-stress and take their time to work out after a long day. If that is your situation, then evening workouts could be for you.

Realistically, commit to the best available time for you to exercise — no matter what time of day. Focus on completing safe and effective workouts on a consistent basis. For many, finding ANY time to exercise can be a challenge, and I wouldn't complicate this by worrying about a specific time.

If you're not sure what time of day works best for you, explore your options. Try working out at different times of the day. You may find you have more energy in the afternoon or evening than in the morning. Or you may enjoy exercising before you go to work to give yourself an energy boost. Make the quality time you put into your exercise program the objective, no matter what time of the day.

Always consult a physician before beginning an exercise program. Stigma And Denial Delay Diagnosis Of Alzheimer's Diease (NAPS)- According to a survey from the Alzheimer's Foundation of America, concern about stigma and denial of symptoms can, on average, delay a diagnosis of Alzheimer's disease by more than two years after symptoms appear. This is troubling news for patients and caregivers alike.

Spouses, children and siblings are usually the first to notice the symptoms of Alzheimer's disease; they help with the diagnosis because they witness the progression of the disease in their loved ones, playing a pivotal role in caring for the estimated 5 million Americans with the disease. A delay means that patients must wait to receive treatment that could potentially reduce the disease's symptoms.

"Any delay in diagnosis is a setback for people with Alzheimer's disease and their caregivers-and a delay of two years or more is a serious and unnecessary setback." says Eric J. Hall, chief executive officer of the Alzheimer's Foundation of America.

With respect to stigma alone, the survey found important differences between patients and caregivers. When patients were concerned about stigma, diagnosis occurred on average 3.5 years after symptoms appeared, but when caregivers harbored this concern, delay of diagnosis was even more severe, averaging six years.

"While facing Alzheimer's disease is never easy, getting a diagnosis is an essential step to managing and treating the disease. Living with this in silence can isolate people with Alzheimer's disease and their caregivers, leaving them without critical support, resources and proper treatment," adds Hall. "We encourage everyone touched by Alzheimer's disease to reach out for support- help is out there."

In addition to bringing the need to put an end to the stigma associated with the disease to light, the results of the survey show the impact that the disease can have on caregivers, wreaking havoc on families, straining sibling relationships, and leaving caregivers feeling emotionally burdened.

Families Struggle with Caring for Loved Ones on Their Own

Many sibling relationships suffer under the stress of caring for a parent with Alzheimer's disease and the division of caregiving responsibilities. In fact, more than half of caregivers of parents with siblings report that they are responsible for their parent's care. Sixty-nine percent of caregivers surveyed report that they want more help from family and friends.

More Support, Education Needed

Caregivers indicate that more assistance in certain areas could ease the caregiving strain, most notably, assistance with day-to-day caregiving activities, financial support, emotional support, and time for themselves.

Two in five caregivers surveyed report that lack of knowledge about the disease is a barrier to diagnosis, suggesting that more education is needed. Additionally, while the majority of caregivers report that they are aware of medications that may slow the progression of symptoms, only half of caregivers surveyed are aware of the opportunity for combination therapy.

Alzheimer's disease is a progressive brain disorder that gradually destroys a person's memory and ability to learn, reason, make judgment, communicate and carry out daily activities.

Alzheimer's disease currently strikes approximately 5 million Americans, with an estimated one in 10 persons over age 65 and nearly half of those 85 and older suffering from the disease. In fact, publishing reports project that this number could more than triple to over 16 million people in the United States by 2050.

Support is available and medications exist that can slow the progression of symptoms of Alzheimer's disease. For more information, call (toll-free) 866-AFA-8484 or visit www.alzfdn.org or www.alzheimersonline.com.

THE YOUTHFUL LOOK OF WHITE TEETH

As the popularity of cosmetic skin procedures has risen dramatically, it has not taken long for patients to catch on to the fact that they should have white teeth to match their near-perfect skin. After all, the effect of having youthful-looking, wrinkle-free skin can be compromised by yellow teeth. Just as wrinkles are a sign of aging, so too are yellow teeth. The good news is that it is possible to whiten teeth professionally faster than the time it takes to treat wrinkly skin. It is also usually quite a bit less expensive, with results that are equally dramatic. Patients report that after they have their teeth professionally whitened, they find themselves on the receiving end of compliments almost immediately.

Everybody loves a bright smile, and there are a variety of products and procedures available to help you improve the look of yours. If you have any further questions about tooth whitening, please ask us. Our goal is to help preserve your smile throughout a lifetime, and whitening can help make that possible. We welcome you to the 21st century of modern dentistry and to an unparalleled level of service in your search for a beautiful smile. Call 617-479-6220 to schedule an appointment. Our office is located at 44 Greenleaf Street. We offer the services of anesthesiology with a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Visit us on the web at www.quincydentist.com.

P.S. The effects of professional tooth whitening are long-lasting and require only simple maintenance to afford years of satisfaction.

HINTS FOR HOMEOWNERS

Don't Let Rising Interest Rates Push You Around

(NAPS)- For many Americans, their home equity represents the cornerstone of their personal finances. Fortunately, there are new tools and services designed to help them take control of their finances in the face of rising interest rates.

Whether you're a first-time homebuyer who wants to begin building home equity or you're a seasoned homeowner who wants to understand how to leverage home equity to finance a remodeling project or you child's education, taking control over what you can and cannot do is essential, say mortgage experts.

"Managing your home equity means not allowing interest rates to push you into making a hasty decision," said Jim Ferriter, executive vice president with GMAC Mortgage. "Instead, take a deep breath, contact your mortgage professional and carefully explore your options. And, as it is appropriate, we recommend the assistance of a financial planner or tax advisor to provide additional insights about managing your home equity."

First-Time Homebuyers

For first-time homebuyers, said Ferriter, the two most critical elements to purchasing a home are becoming preapproved, and a rising interest rate environment, securing a favorable interest rate. In today's real estate market, sellers are extra cautious- before they take their homes off the market, they want confirmation that a buyer has been approved for financing.

In addition to assisting a first-time homebuyer with becoming preapproved for a mortgage, GMAC Mortgage loan officers can offer HomeCommand, a program that protects a homebuyer from rising interest rates by capping the interest rate for up to 126 days.

By capping the interest rate, first-time homebuyers have greater control over knowing what their monthly mortgage payment will be, based on the price of the home they purchase. This knowledge can be very helpful is assessing the price range of the homes viewed by a first-time homebuyer.

To help homebuyers get a jump on other house hunters, the company also offers access to a free home-finder service, which can alert homebuyers about homes that have just been placed on the market.

For many first time homebuyers, the next biggest hurdle is knowing whether or not they can manage the monthly mortgage payment on a home that has caught their eye.

While interest rates remain at historically all-time lows, in a raising interest rate environment, Ferriter said, first-time homebuyers, who are often in their late 20s or early 30s, should give additional consideration to such factors as how long they anticipate living in their first home, the growth of their family (need for additional space as the family grows), career and salary growth, and property values of nearby homes.

For some first-time homebuyers, it may be more advantageous in terms of managing their cash flow to consider an adjustable-rate loan versus a 15-or 30 year fixed rate loan. It all depends on a first-time homebuyer's financial situation.

Existing Homeowners

If you already own your home and you originally financed it with an adjustable-rate mortgage, now may be the right time to refinance into a fixed-rate loan. The key is to compare the interest rate and monthly mortgage payment, based on the terms of your mortgage (when it adjusts), versus other types of mortgages, including fixed-rate loans. Talking to a professional, such as a GMAC Mortgage loan officer, or using a tool such as an ARM versus fixed-rate calculator, available at www.gmacmortgage.com, can help homeowners better understand their options.

Water Leak Stains Ceiling

Q. Earlier this year, a small leak from an upstairs pipe caused a water stain on my kitchen ceiling, about a foot in diameter. The pipe has been fixed, but the stained ceiling remains. The water also caused it to warp slightly, so I'm not sure that painting over the stain will improve it. Is it possible to replace the stained section? — Dahlia J., Cincinnati

A. Yes, it is. You can patch the stained ceiling by cutting out the damaged area and replacing with a new piece of drywall (aka wallboard or Sheetrock). The tools you will need are: replacement drywall, a drywall saw, a ruler or carpenter's square, pencil, drywall screws, plywood, a power drill, a hand or power saw, mesh drywall tape, drywall compound, putty knife, interior paint and a sturdy ladder.

First, turn off power to the kitchen at the circuit box, because you will be cutting blind when removing the stained section. For added safety, place a strip of masking tape across the circuit box door and write "Do Not Touch" on the tape.

Using the ruler or carpenter's square and pencil, draw a square around the perimeter of the stain — the straighter the better. Take the drywall saw and carefully saw along the lines to cut out the damaged area.

Either using the damaged piece as a template, or measuring the sides of the new hole, mark and cut out a piece of the replacement drywall.

Take a piece of thin plywood and, using the measurements of the hole, cut it into a rectangular shape so that two sides extend a couple of inches past the edges of the hole and two sides are a couple of inches narrower than the hole. This serves as the support for the patch. (Note: if you don't have a saw, take the measurements to the store and purchase a piece cut to size.)

Slip the plywood into the hole and center. Holding it in place, drill drywall screws upward through the ceiling on each side of the hole, into the overlapping edges of the plywood.

Put the new drywall piece into place, pressing up against the plywood backing. Drill drywall screws through the piece into the plywood — one or two on each side should anchor it. Sink all the screws a few millimeters into the surface of the drywall.

Run strips of mesh drywall tape along each edge of the patch. With the putty knife, spread drywall compound over the tape and the screw indentations, feathering out to blend into the ceiling. Let the compound dry, then paint the area to match the rest of the ceiling.

Precautionary Steps To Help Save Money

Prepare Your Home For Winter Weather

(NAPS)- Taking a few precautionary steps now can help ensure that you and your family stay warm when the cold weather hits - without spending a fortune on heating bills.

Dan Steward, president of Pillar to Post, North America's largest home-inspection service, offers these tips for winterizing your home.

Seal leaks around entry points- Add or replace worn weather stripping around doors and windows. Caulk gaps where necessary. Replace worn doorstops at the bottom of doors. Use caulking and weather stripping around entry points for all pipes and ducts that travel through an exterior wall.

Check insulation- Inspect attic insulation to make certain that it's adequate. Proper attic insulation keeps a home warmer in the winter by reducing heat loss through the ceiling. Consult with a home-insulation specialist to find out how much insulation is recommended in your area.

Inspect the heating system- Hire a home heating specialist to do a routine check of the heating system before the cold weather hits. Vacuum heating vents and other heating components. Replace the furnace filter. Install a setback thermostat to regulate the temperature, allowing the home to be cooler when homeowners are away or asleep.

Check the fireplace- Hire a chimney service professional to inspect and clean the chimney. Close the fireplace damper when not in use to eliminate cold drafts. Consider installing a wood-burning fireplace or gas log fireplace to cut costs on utility bills.

Check the roof- Replace loose or missing shingles or roof tiles. Have a licensed roofer fix gaps that could potentially get worse and cause melting snow or rain to seep through. Check and clean gutters. Trim tree limbs hanging over or touching the roof; snow and wind can cause branches to break off, potentially damaging the roof.

Winterize the plumbing- Exposed pipes can freeze and creak; heat tape can be used to keep them warm during extremely cold weather. Repair leaking pipes and learn how to turn off water at its source so that you can stop leaks immediately. Drain water from outdoor faucets when you think a hard freeze is coming.

In addition, Steward suggests that homeowners know how to turn off the water, gas and electricity, repair leaking taps, and wrap cisterns, boilers and electrically heated water tanks with insulating jackets. There is a potential fire hazard in wrapping gas or oil-heated water tanks.

Offset Mortgage Costs By Saving On Insurance

(NAPS)- Although experts expect the number of homeowners facing foreclosure to increase over the next two years, a better understanding of insurance may help keep you from becoming a statistic.

Surprisingly, homeowners insurance policies are a common bill many borrowers fail to save on; instead accepting insurance as just another cost of owning a home. As far as many new home borrowers have been concerned, their homeowners insurance policies are bundled into their mortgage payments. Homeowners insurance rates, however, can vary by hundreds of dollars from company to company; therefore, homeowners should shop for insurance the same way they would shop for any other product.

Look for Multi-Policy Insurance

Most insurance companies that sell insurance products other than homeowners insurance will offer consumers discounts for buying more than one product from them. For example, if your auto insurance company also sells homeowner insurance, you might get a discount of up to 15 percent by buying both.

Only Buy Coverage You Need

Homeowners insurance policy limits should be revisited every year to reevaluate any major purchases and additions. On the other hand, many of the possessions that homeowners insure depreciate significantly over a year. Update your home inventory and reevaluate policy limits for possible savings.

Raise Your Deductible

Increasing your deductible by just a few hundred dollars can make a significant difference to your premium. Most deductibles start at $250; therefore, if you raise yours to $1,000, you may save nearly 25 percent on your premium.

Look for Discounts That Apply to You

There are a myriad of homeowners discounts that go unrecognized by many consumers. For example, you may be able to get a lower premium if your home has safety features such as deadbolt locks, smoke detectors, an alarm system, storm shutters or fire-retardant roofing material.

A service called SmartWatch provides homeowners with periodic information about various ways to leverage their home equity for such things as debt consolidation, college tuition, remodeling or other major purchases. GMAC Mortgage, provides alerts when market conditions indicate that it may be a "smart" time to consider refinancing. In addition, it can be used for assessing if a cash-out refinance makes sense or to gain a better understanding of how the growth in home equity, based on property values, may be applied to a future home purchase.

For example, many Generation Xers and baby boomers born in the 1960s are in the thick of saving for retirement while anticipating major milestones such as paying for their children's college education, purchasing a vacation home or paying for a wedding.

By gaining a better understanding of how and when to leverage their home equity, and possibly combining it with mortgage acceleration (adding an extra payment to the principal), these homeowners are able to take more control over their personal finances and prepare themselves to make smarter decisions with less stress.

"We're able to offer the tools and services that allow homeowners to take control and evaluate their specific situation so that they can use their mortgage as a financial tool to meet their goals, regardless of the rate environment," Ferriter said.

The Garden Bug

Preparing for winter For healthy growth, most garden plants need the resting phase that cold weather brings. The first, light frosts acclimate the plants; this is the time to prepare the bed for the long dormancy of winter. Trim back dead and diseased stalks, stems and leaves, and remove old mulch. Some plants like to be watered before the hard freeze sets in. Protect the bed through the winter with fresh mulch.

'The Case Of The Bad Samaritan'

On Friday, Oct. 13, at approximately 3 a.m., Officers Paul Holland, Matt Tobin and Ron McKim were dispatched to the 7-11 store on Copeland Street on a report of a disorder.

Upon arrival, Officer Holland interviewed a female sitting in a vehicle parked near the entrance of the store. She said that she went into the store and literally walked into a dispute between a customer and the clerk. She said she immediately walked out, returned to her car and told her male passenger about the dispute. She said the male in her car believed that a robbery was occurring and went into the store.

LT. DAN MINTON

As officers stood by the occupants of the car, Officer Holland went in the store and spoke to the caller/employee of the store. He confirmed there was a dispute over the cost of the items a customer was purchasing and that a female customer walked in, made a purchase, and then existed the store. He also learned that although there was a dispute, the customer frequented the store and knew the clerk.

According to both parties, the dispute never came close to a physical confrontation. The employee said a male then entered the store, verbally confronted the customer and then reached into the waistband of his pants and retrieved a knife.

The male (suspect #1) then went at the customer attempting to stab him. The customer said he grabbed the suspect's arm and forced the knife back and in the same motion was able to push the suspect out the front door of the store.

The customer showed the officers lacerations on his left forearm and fingers, also know as defense wounds, as he attempted to ward off his assailant. The customer described the weapon as a black handled hunting knife.

Officer Holland returned to the suspect and had him and the woman exit the vehicle. As the suspect stepped out, Officer Holland located a knife with black electrical tape over the handle, with a six-inch blade where the suspect had been sitting. There was also an open bottle of beer.

As the officers searched the suspect, they found what appeared to be a part of a marijuana plant. When asked where it came from, the suspect said he brought it from home. The knife was brought before the customer, who identified it as the one used during the attack.

The suspect, a 51-year-old Weymouth resident, was placed under arrest and charged with "Assault and Battery with a Dangerous Weapon" (knife) and "Possession of Class D" (Subsequent Offense). The suspect has an extensive criminal record, with 115 court appearances and a past sentence of 10 years for armed robbery.

The video from the store security cameras was also obtained for court purposes.

As the suspect was being led away, he said, "That's what you get for trying to help - I got hung up trying to help people."

Nice work!

Presidents Prevail In Round One

By SEAN BRENNAN

The fall athletic teams at Quincy High School would be looking at a post-season washout if not for the Presidents' girls' volleyball program.

An annual participant in the post-season, the Presidents (12-8) entered last Friday night's MIAA Division I Central/East first-round match against Boston English High School with the knowledge that they would be the only Quincy High team with a shot at post-season success. The Presidents also entered their first-round match as the lower seed and as a result the visiting team.

Quincy, seeded 10th, had to travel to Boston English to take on the seventh seed, but came away with an impressive and dominating victory.

Quincy never allowed English to get into any type of rhythm and took the match three games to none. The scores for the games were 25-13, 25-5, 25-14.

Junior captain Liz Bock's skill and leadership were on display for everyone to see against English. Bock had a solid first-round performance, and finished the match with a team high 14 kills.

Alicia Woodberry stood out on the offensive side of the net for Quincy against Boston English. Woodberry finished the three game sweep with 22 assists and three kills.

The next test for the Presidents was a quarterfinal round matchup versus Boston Latin Academy on Tuesday (11/7). Quincy will need to bring its A-game against second seeded and 17-1 Latin Academy if the they have any aspirations of advancing to the Central/East semifinals.

"We're just going in concentrating on serve-receive and tough serving and hopefully that will be enough," head coach Jacqui Niosi said. "We're hoping we have pretty good chances; I know the Boston league isn't as strong as it has been, and we're hoping we can keep the match at a pace that we like and take it one game at a time."

Along with Bock, Woodberry and Santon, the Presidents will need stellar play from the rest of their roster if they hope to continue on this post-season.

Next Up Cambridge R&L In Quarter-Finals Tuesday

Red Raiders Humble Holliston

The North Quincy girls volleyball team took care of business last Friday night (11/3) against Holliston High School in the opening round of MIAA Division I Central/East post-season action.

The fifth seeded Red Raiders controlled the pace of the match versus 12th seeded Holliston and came away with a convincing 3-1 victory.

North Quincy (16-5) won the all-important first game by a score of 25-15, and followed that win with a 25-21 win in the second game. The Red Raiders fell just short of a match sweep in the third game, losing by a 22-25 score, but North rallied for the match and the victory in the fourth game with a dominating 25-19 win.

The Red Raiders, playing on their home court and in front of their home crowd, did not let a unique rule alter their concentration against Holliston. Holliston, playing with a male player on their side, were no match for the post-season experience of the Red Raiders and the solid all-around play of junior Virginia Wong.

Wong's performance was as good as it gets on the court, and with the support of her entire team, the Raiders cruised into the quarterfinal round.

"She (Wong) turned it on, she was good," head coach Kerry Ginty said. "She is getting after it and she is staying really aggressive."

Wong's 17 kills and three blocks and North Quincy's senior and junior laden roster helped offset any athletic advantage Holliston may have thought they would have had with a male on their side. Dan Drebing, who is the rare male on a girls volleyball team, did not faze or change what the Raiders were looking to do, and that was to advance on in the tournament.

"He could jump and get up there, so he put up a good block, but for the most part he is still understanding the game," Ginty said.

Luckily for North Quincy, understanding the game and what it takes to win in the post-season, comes naturally and is a by-product of the program's consistency and its yearly status as one of the South Shore's best teams.

The Red Raiders' Becca Goreham played great and she took advantage of all of her opportunities to get North Quincy points when she could. Her eight kills were second on the team behind Wong's 17, but her play was second to none.

Also, chipping in with good play was Rebecca Stanton. Stanton contributed four kills and three blocks in the victory. The Red Raiders' Arta Dashi finished the match with 10 digs.

The fifth seeded Red Raiders will look to make it to the Central/East semifinals with a win on Tuesday (11/7) against a high-flying Cambridge Ridge & Latin squad in quarterfinal play.

If North wants to advance beyond the quarters, they are going to have to travel into the city and play in a hostile environment against fourth seeded Cambridge. The game should be a great test for the Red Raiders, but it should be a game for which the team's post-season experience and savvy play a positive part in the team's search for another deep and prosperous tournament run.

The reminder of the Red Raider post-season roster includes captain Maria Della Croce, Julie Lynch, Shannon Malone, Kathleen Lynch, Maggie Poon, Sarah Kou, Connie Ng and Amanda Kelly.

HEART TRANSPLANT

If your engine is failing but the rest of your vehicle is in good shape, consider having the engine rebuilt. When remanufactured and restored to quality standards using precision machining procedures and parts designed and manufactured for a particular engine application, a rebuilt engine can be as good as new. Common machining operations include resurfacing heads and blocks, boring and honing cylinders, and resurfacing valves and valve seats. School's Only Cross-Country Runner

Bethany Keenan Shows There Is An 'I' In Woodward Team

By SEAN BRENNAN

Bethany Keenan, a junior at The Woodward School for Girls, maybe the lone exception to the saying that, "there is no I in team".

Keenan, a Quincy resident, is the cross-country team at Woodward. As a result of the small number of students at the school, Woodward does not have your typical numbers for a cross-country team, but that fact has not deterred Keenan from participating in Independent Girls' League meets, nor has it prohibited her from winning two events and coming in second place in two other races.

Keenan, on Oct. 25, won her first IGC event during a meet at The Waring School. The win was a direct result of all of the hard work and training she has put into her running for the past twelve years. Keenan also finished in first place in her last meet of the year on Nov. 1st at Gann Academy with a winning time of 22:17.

"I have run with Geoff Hennessy (head coach for the Quincy/NQ cross-country team) and the Quincy Track Club since I was four," Keenan said. "He is a good friend, and this past summer I asked him if I could train with him and his team to get myself ready for my season at Woodward."

"Before my sophomore year, I had taken a couple years off from running because I didn't want to get worn out," Keenan added. "But during sophomore year, I decided to run for Woodward as an experiment, just to get myself back into cross-country. I love running and I have been doing it forever, and this year I've just taken it to the next level."

Woodward's athletic director, Bob Giordano, acknowledges the difficulties Keenan faces as the lone member of his school's cross-country team, but he also couldn't be prouder of her accomplishments and her school spirit.

"Bethany is our team," Giordano said. "We can't facilitate a team because we are so small, but she trains herself, and with the help of her parents who drive her to and from all meets, she represents Woodward and we are all very proud of her."

This camaraderie and school pride was on display during a recent soccer game. The Wildcats, who were losing to the top team in the league, suddenly erupted into cheers and celebration on their bench.

"I didn't know what was happening, we had just had a bad play and the bench was screaming and cheering," Giordano said. "One of the teachers had come over and said that Bethany had won the race. It really showed our school spirit and just how happy the girls were for Bethany."

Keenan has used the support-system of her teachers, coaches and classmates as motivation to improve and continue running even when sometimes being the only cross-country runner can be difficult.

"Woodward is great. I love the small environment and getting to know everyone," Keenan said. "All the classes are always supporting me, and people I don't really talk with come up and congratulate me and wish me luck in my next meet. If it were a bigger school, I don't know if I could go out and run on my own, but the situation allows me to go out and represent the school and enjoy running."

Keenan's improvement could be seen as the meets she was entering continued throughout the fall. After finishing in 16th place in her first meet, Keenan finished second twice before ending the year with two first place finishes.

In Bethany Keenan's case, there is definitely an "I in team."

North Quincy Bows In Double OT To New Bedford, 1-0

GIRLS' SOCCER

The North Quincy girls' soccer team, in their first-round game against New Bedford, had its post-season dreams dashed on a goal in the second overtime. The Red Raiders fell by a 1-0 score.

The Raiders, the tenth seed in the South Sectionals, had to travel down to New Bedford High School to play the seventh seeded Whalers on their home field on a cold and blustery evening, and North could not find the back of the net, losing a heartbreaker in dramatic fashion.

"New Bedford's speed finally caught up with us in the second overtime," head coach Paul Bregoli said. "It is tough to win a post-season game when you don't find the back of the net. Their backs did a great job of containing our forwards (although North Quincy outshot New Bedford, 7-5), but our lack of depth hurt. To be honest, neither team deserved to lose this game."

The game started out just the way the Red Raiders could have hoped for, but the team was unable to capitalize on their early pressure up front. In the 20th minute, Jillian Benn's free kick from just outside the penalty box went wide right, and after two New Bedford corner kicks that were defended nicely by the Raider defense, North's MaryKate Stille put a nice move on a New Bedford defender and earned her team a corner kick. The Raiders missed out on two decent scoring chances after the corner, and could not convert on the early opportunities.

In the closing minutes of the first-half, North's Emily Milone sustained a sprained ankle after she stepped into one of the many holes that covered the playing surface, and her injury slowed down the pace of the game for the Raiders the rest of the way.

"Milone was playing great for us at the midfield position in the opening half," Bregoli said. "But late in the half she got clipped from behind and ended up stepping in a hole and spraining an ankle. We got her taped at the half, and she gutted it out in the second half, but it did affect us. The field was not great, and I am surprised that a tournament game was allowed to be played there, but having scouted New Bedford, we knew what kind of surface we would be faced with."

The second half began just as the first half had, with North Quincy controlling play, but the Whalers countered the Raider offensive attack with a simple plan. New Bedford continually took away ball possession in the second half with long kicks from their defenders up the field. This strategy took away the scoring threat of Raider forwards like Stille. It also allowed for the Whalers to utilize their speed and wear down the North Quincy team.

The Raiders owned all of the 50/50 balls and the team's physical style of play seemed to get under New Bedford's skin as the game went on, and their aggressiveness led to a golden scoring chance late in regulation. In the 75th minute, North Quincy earned a free kick outside of the box, but a scoring chance by Stille went by the books.

"We have had trouble all year getting goals," Bregoli said. "But without the abundance of depth, speed and skill we need to play physical and we did a good job of that versus New Bedford. My girls need to play with that hard-nose, bulldog mentality, but you need to score goals especially in the tournament."

With their season coming down to twenty minutes of overtime, where a goal ends the game, North Quincy had their chances to advance to the second round. Early in the first OT, Stille rushed into the box with the chance to knock a bouncing ball into the net, but she was just a second too slow and the result was a violent collision with the New Bedford goalie. Their scoring opportunities where few and far between the rest of the way, and a penalty shoot-out loomed for both teams, but unfortunately for North Quincy the Whalers ended any thought of that happening.

In the 94th minute, the Whalers' speed finally caught up with the Red Raiders. After a deflected shot by North Quincy bounced out to the left side of the field, a New Bedford player raced down the sidelines, cut back to the middle and found herself one on one with Raider goalie Siobhan Carnell. Carnell, who played very well all game, was left on an island and as she went one way, the Whaler player shot the ball just inside the right goal post for the game winner.

"It was a tough game to lose," Bregoli said. "I know we could have competed against Bridgewater-Raynham, and could have moved on, but that first-round game is always the hardest."

North Quincy received solid performances from Milone, Carnell, Megan Therrien, Brittany Folkins (who played all 94 minutes), Bridget Coleman and Ali Russell, and finished their season with a 12-6-1 record.

The Raiders under Coach Bregoli have won 112 games over the last 10 years and will return a handful of starters to next year's team, and though the results were not what the team expected, it can look back at another successful season.

"We played a tough schedule and played a handful of skilled teams evenly all year," Bregoli said. "I have one player (Milone) who plays soccer all year long compared with other teams who have rosters filled with players like that. The girls did a remarkable job this year."

North Quincy, it should be noted, was supported by a loud and boisterous crowd at the tournament game and all season long.

Red Raiders Start Fast But Fall To W-H, 28-7

FOOTBALL

By SEAN BRENNAN

One way to fire up the home crowd on a cold November night is to start off a game with a big play. The North Quincy Red Raiders did just that on Friday night against Whitman-Hanson High School, but the team could not sustain the momentum and fell by a score of 28-7.

The Red Raiders (1-8 overall, 1-6 in the Atlantic Coast League) brought the Veterans' Memorial Stadium crowd to their feet with a big special teams play on the opening kickoff of the game. The Raiders' coverage team stormed down the field and forced the Whitman-Hanson kick returner to fumble the ball at the 22 yard line. The turnover set up North Quincy with great field position, and the Red Raiders responded with a five play, 22-yard scoring drive. Junior running back Jon Cahill capped off the drive with a 1-yard touchdown, and after Dave Guerriero's extra point kick went through the uprights, North Quincy had an early 7-0 lead.

Whitman-Hanson (5-4 overall, 4-4 in the ACL) returned the following kickoff back to the North Quincy 46 yard line, and subsequently went on a time-consuming 15-play, 56-yard drive to even the score at 7-7 late in the opening quarter. Running back Beau Barnes (two touchdowns) scored from two yards out after the Red Raider defense had stopped the Panthers twice inside the one-yard line.

The biggest weakness for the Red Raiders on the drive and throughout the evening was their inability to stop the running attack of Barnes and Ben Ford especially on third down and long. North Quincy's defense gave up a handful of third down conversions to Whitman-Hanson when a stop may have changed the outcome of the field position game.

The Panthers controlled the clock behind the running of their backs, and North Quincy had no answer for Whitman-Hanson's power running game. W-H gained 200 yards on the ground and scored three touchdowns.

The Raiders were forced to play from behind for most of the game, and as a result, senior quarterback Shaun McBrien had another difficult evening. McBrien finished the game 4-11 for 42 yards and one interception, but without much help from the defense, McBrien had no other choice but to air it out.

"We really need to start getting stops on defense," head coach Jim Connor said. "We were passing a lot because we were behind early."

The turning point of the game occurred after Whitman-Hanson scored to make it a 14-7 game with just under five minutes to play in the first-half. After a solid kick return to their own 39 yard line, McBrien found Dave Thomson for a first down and Cahill followed that play with a solid 11-yard gain on the ground. With first and ten from the W-H 34, the Raiders were in great shape to put some points on the board, but a botched play in the backfield resulted in a sack on 2nd down, and an penalty on 3rd down made it third and 19. McBrien's third down pass was knocked down and the Raiders were forced to punt, ending any chance for momentum to swing back to the Raiders' side.

The second half was all Panthers all the time, and after Barnes scored his second touchdown in the third quarter, North now down 21-7, was forced to pass and they could not get it done. Nate Clergy scored from three yards out in the fourth quarter to finish the scoring for the Panthers. Final score: 28-7.

Adam Tragellis (1 INT) played exceptionally well all evening long for North Quincy. Tragellis returned kicks and had solid coverage all night on defense. Phil Kelly, Efraim Melendez, Jim Bleiler, Stephen Matos and Dave Thomson also played good games for the Raiders.

North Quincy will take to the road this Friday to play Plymouth South in a tough ACL matchup. The Red Raiders should have their hands full against the Panthers, but they are a team that is improving each and every game, and come Thanksgiving the Raiders should be more than ready to take on the Presidents.

Central Top Team

295 Students Run In Middle School X-Country Championships

The 18th annual Quincy Public Middle School Cross-Country Championships took place on Oct. 27 under beautiful skies at Pageant Field.

The event mixed 295 middle school runners from all of the city's public schools together to determine which school would be crowned city champion. Central, Broadmeadows, Atlantic, Sterling and Point Middle Schools were all represented in the championship race.

In the boys race, 8th grader Colin Ryan (Central), who had missed the first two weeks of the season with an injury, led from wire to wire and won going away with a course record time of 9:06. Ryan's victory helped lead Central Middle School to their 10th consecutive City title.

Overall, 112 boys finished the 1.5 mile course.

The final team results are as follows; Central (24 points), Broadmeadows (51), Atlantic (70), Sterling (105), and Point Middle School (134).

In the girls' race, Central's Danielle Mullaney (6th grader) lead for most of the 1.5 mile race, but was overtaken by Sterling's Erin Richardson and Atlantic's Erica Brady not 10 yards from the finish. Richardson edged Brady in a photo finish to win the race, and in the process, Richardson set a new course record with a time of 9:36 which smashed the previous record of 9:52 set by Mullaney earlier in the year.

The final team results for the girls are as follows; Central (25 points), Atlantic (50), Sterling (69), Broadmeadows (119), and Point Middle School (135). Central's win was their 17th in the 18 years that the race has been held.

The top twenty finishers for the boys are as follows; Ryan (Central), Malger (Broadmeadows), Bloomer (B), Christian Durham (C), Kevin McManus (C), Greg Nelson (C), Roberto Morales (Atlantic), Sean Ryan (C), Chris Connelly (C), Michael Nelson (C), John Green (C), Chris Keenan (C), Dan Green (C), Conor Cross (B), Matt Poles (C), Rahmy Eltoury (C), Matt Kerin (A), Nick Gillespie (C), Darren McGrath (C) and Takei Kurtzman (B). Peter Lieu, who finished 28th, was the top finisher for Point and Brendan Myers, who finished 31st, was the top runner for Sterling Middle School.

Mullaney (Central), Brianna Mullaney (C), Sarah Gardiner (C), Jacly Scuzzarella (C), Julie Ross (C), Courtney Timmins (C), Jaclyn Merchant (C), Jessica O'Donovan (C), Jillian Carchedi (C), Annie Dow (A), Natal Scuzzarella (C), Klea Avrami (A), Megan Leahy (C), Meradith Flaherty (C), Lia Bonoli (C), Sarah Ryan (C), Thanh Luc (A), and Stacey Beekes (Broadmeadows). Joanna McGroarty, who finished 37th, was the top runner for Point Middle School.

Plymouth South Handles Presidents

The Quincy Presidents lost to Plymouth South, 24-6, last Saturday evening at Veterans' Memorial Stadium to drop to 2-6 overall, and 1-6 in the Atlantic Coast League Conference. With the loss, Quincy dropped to 0-4 at home. Plymouth South is now 6-3 overall, and 5-2 in the league.

The Presidents were victimized by Plymouth South's Andrew Tognacci all game long. Tognacci scored on a 2-yard run in the second quarter, and later in the second, he kicked a 30-yard field goal. Tognacci finished his day with a 16-yard touchdown reception from quarterback Derrick Duquette.

Quincy, looking to improve on their 11.5 points per game average, could muster only one score against a Panther defense that is allowing only 15.9 points per game.

Senior quarterback Matt Boyle's 1-yard touchdown run in the third quarter was all the scoring that the Presidents would get all evening long.

The Panthers controlled the game clock and time of possession behind the running of Brandon Coolidge. Coolidge racked up 223 yards on 23 carries and he put the final exclamation point on the scoreboard with a 25-yard touchdown run.

Next up for the Presidents is a home game against Sandwich High School on Friday night (7:00 p.m.) at Veterans' Memorial Stadium. Sandwich will be another difficult test for the Presidents, and come into Friday's game averaging 21.6 points per game (Quincy is allowing 21.9 points per game), while allowing just under 20 points per game to their opponents.

After Friday's game, Quincy will take a thirteen day break before matching up against the Red Raiders on Nov. 23rd in the annual Thanksgiving Day game.

'Turkey Dip' To Benefit Interfaith Social Services

The third annual "Turkey Day Dip" to benefit Quincy-based Interfaith Social Services will take place Thanksgiving Day, Thursday, Nov. 23.

Katherine Maloy, founder of "The Turkey Dip," said the event will get a chilling start at 8:45 a.m. as participants dive into the North River at Mary's Boat Livery, located on 2205 Main Street (Rt. 3A) in Marshfield.

Maloy, a high school sophomore at Tabor Academy in Marion, started the event in 2004 at the site of her grandmother's Marshfield boatyard, Mary's Boats on the North River. She invited friends and family to take a dip in the frigid North River to raise funds for Interfaith Social Services of the South Shore.

In 2005, the event raised more than $3,000.

"The 'Turkey Dip' brings together our community to raise money for families in need on the South Shore," said Maloy. "Participants can help raise money by gaining sponsorships for their dip. All money raised will go directly to help Interfaith Social Services. Our goal is to raise $5,000 this year."

For more than 65 years, Interfaith Social Services has supplied nutritious and wholesome food, clothing, counseling and limited financial assistance to people in need throughout the South Shore.

In 2005, the Pantry Shelf provided food for 3,787 households, including 3,096 children. The agency's Fresh Start and HomeSafe programs helped 50 families and individuals avoid homelessness.

Last year, Maloy was honored with the Norwell Visiting Nurse Association's "2006 Young Leaders Award" for her work on the event.

For more information on the "Turkey Dip," call Katherine Maloy at 617-842-3224.

Pettinelli: Investigation Findings 'Inconclusive'

Vapor Source In House Explosion Still A Mystery

By MIKAELA SLANEY

The source of the vapors believed to cause the expolosion of a Quincy Point Home is still a mystery.

Fire Chief Timothy Pettinelli presented reports to the City Council Monday night showing that the origin of the vapors that caused the explosion that claimed the Ramos-Donnelly home on Craig Avenue was still inconclusive.

MWRA (Massachusetts Water Resources Authority) and MassDEP (Environmental Protection Department) reports did not identify the source of the vapors, but did list slightly above normal amounts of volatile chemicals found in surrounding sewers, and suggested ways that they may have accumulated.

Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymondi said preliminary reports, which were completed 12 days after the June 18 explosion, should have been made available for public viewing sooner.

He said that every effort should be made to relieve neighbors who feared for their safety, and asked Pettinelli to ensure that there would not be a repeat of the explosion that claimed the Craig Avenue home.

"My question is that we don't know what the cause was, and if we don't know how it migrated into the system, and if the conditions on Craig Avenue could very well be replicated within other homes in the area, how could you in confidence tell people, 'don't worry, you'll be safe,'" Raymondi said.

Pettinelli said that residents may ensure their safety by having their pipe system inspected by a professional.

"People have to be diligent in inspecting their own home," he said. "They need

Phelan Calls For Development Guidelines

Mayor William Phelan has called for the creation of design guidelines to guide multi-unit projects in Quincy's neighborhoods.

The guidelines would help direct developers and municipal boards and agencies in protecting the character and aesthetics of Quincy's neighborhoods, Phelan told the city's smart zoning committee.

"As we look to continue our efforts to strengthen our neighborhoods, I have continuously heard that the overdevelopment of our neighborhoods is an issue that greatly concerns our residents," said Phelan. "Design guidelines would set the standards by which we as a community expect our neighborhoods to be treated. New development should fit the character of our existing neighborhoods."

Phelan created the "Smart Zoning" Committee earlier this year. The committee is currently looking into ways to improve city ordinances and the Zoning Code. The committee consists of repre-

Nominations Open For Sun 'Citizen Of Year'

Nominations are now open for The Quincy Sun's 22nd annual "Citizen of the Year" award.

Established in 1985, the award recognizes an individual for outstanding community service or a special achievement.

Last year, George White, a 40-year member of the Quincy Christmas Festival Committee – including 25 years as committee chairman – was honored for bringing holiday joy to many thousands of all ages.

White was selected for the honor from among 35 nominees submitted by Quincy Sun readers. A panel of judges representing a cross-section of the community made the final decision.

Again this year, Sun readers may nominate the person they feel is the most deserving of the award.

A nomination ballot to help the selection process appears on Page 11 of this week's issue of The Quincy Sun.

After nominations close Sunday, Dec. 31, a judging panel will be selected to make the final choice from nominations submitted.

Phelan Calls For Development Guidelines

sentatives from the City Council, Planning Department, Building Department, Solicitor's Office, Mayor's Office and the public.

Phelan recommended that design guidelines be established for multi-family projects, specifically ones in Residential B-zoned neighborhoods.

"Our city has experienced significant neighborhood development and our boards and commissions are currently dealing with these issues on a case-by-case basis," Phelan said. "We need to provide our boards and our neighborhoods with the tools to protect the character of our city. I believe that proper design guidelines would accomplish that and I believe that this group of individuals is most capable of producing the proper guidelines."

The Planning Board and City Council are currently deliberating a one-year moratorium on added development in any Residential B zoning district. Earlier this year, Phelan requested that the Zoning Board of Appeals take a strict view on issuing zoning variances due to hardships.

Flooding Relief Seen For Carlisle Street

By MIKAELA SLANEY

The City Council Monday night, unanimously accepted an appropriation of $583,735.60 for the Carlisle Street Sewer Improvement Project.

The project will reportedly eliminate chronic sewage backup in approximately 20 Carlisle Street basements, with the construction of a sewer pump station.

Public Works Commissioner Stephen O'Donnell requested the appropriation in a recent letter to Mayor William Phelan.

O'Donnell said in the letter that the pump station will be one of the first in the city to be equipped with an emergency generator and backup power. The letter also promised a new sewer main, house services and connections, and paving for sidewalks.

According to the letter, RJV Construction Corporation is set to handle the project.

Money for the project will be transferred from the Sewer Rehabilitation Fund.

"We start in the spring," O'Donnell told the City Council. "Hopefully by a year from now, we'll be out of there."

Union Congregational Church To Dedicate Puzzle In Memory Of Retired Police Officer John Andre

Union Congregational Church, 136 Rawson Rd., Wollaston, will dedicate a special puzzle in memory of retired Quincy Police Officer John Andre as part of the 10 a.m. worship service Sunday.

Andre was an active member of Union Congregational Church and had a special and unique ministry to children and youth, said Pastor Jack Swanson. "An artist par excellence, John ran the children's art class as part of the church's Tuesday School, a youth program for primary aged children which meets each week on Tuesday from 12:15 to 2 p.m."

According to Pastor Swanson, Andre had one rule for his art class. "There are no rules, you create the project as you go, your imagination will show you how."

Each week the children (and some adults) would produce a craft or picture based on a specific Bible verse or story. A special project was creating a Picture Bible, a work still in progress. The children's Tuesday School Bible is used on special occasions at Union Church and was read from at Andre's memorial service last July.

"As John became increasingly ill last fall, the children and adult members of the church worked on a special puzzle for John," Pastor Swanson said, "picturing a 1960's era policeman and a child; the child, with his pint-size police car that he could ride in next to him, was carefully examining a real police car with awe, while the officer looked on. Regrettably, the puzzle was not completed until shortly before John's death and he never got to see it," Pastor Swanson added.

As a tribute to Andre's memory, the completed puzzle has been professionally mounted, and will hang in the church's parlor in his memory. It will hang over a table used weekly for the Tuesday art group.

A coffee hour will follow the service.

Friends and former colleagues of Quincy Police Officer John Andre are invited to attend, as well as the public.

Quincy Preparedness Safety Fair Focus Saturday

The second annual Quincy Safety Fair will take place Saturday from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. at the Park and Recreational Complex in Merrymount Park.

This year, the fair will feature the city's first flu clinic of the year, an emergency exercise demonstration by the Quincy Fire Department and other first responders, a variety of emergency equipment and vehicles used by municipal, state and county government, and a wide variety of information on emergency preparedness. There will be a number of hand-outs pertaining to home emergency preparedness.

"Our Safety Fair was a great success last year and I hope that more Quincy residents join us this year in an effort to educate themselves on the best ways to prepare themselves and their families for any type of emergency situation," said Mayor William Phelan. "We have learned in recent history that a little preparedness can go a long way during an emergency situation and the time to prepare is prior to an event, not during."

Participating in this year's event will be the Quincy Emergency Management Agency, the Health Department, the Police Department, the Fire Department, the Department of Public Works, Norfolk County Sheriff's Office, Keyspan, State Street Corporation and others.

The city will provide a laminated safety instruction booklet with a range of helpful safety tips for the home and State Street will provide a child security package with coloring books, crayons and child identification kits.

The Fire Department will lead an array of first responder agencies in a decontamination exercise at 1 p.m., utilizing full emergency gear. There will be a number of fire engine and emergency equipment displayed by the fire department.

The Norfolk County Sheriff's Office will conduct a K-9 demonstration and will display their mobile command unit.

The Police Department and Quincy Emergency Management will display their emergency safety equipment.

"I want to thank our organizers and participants for putting together an event that is both informative and fun," Phelan said. "Young children will love the emergency vehicles, seniors can get their flu shots, and families can get all the information they need to make sure their family is prepared. There is a range of activities and information provided that make our Safety Fair a good way to spend the day."

For more information, call the Quincy Emergency Management Agency at 617-376-1105.

The case for consolidating your mortgage and home equity line into one loan right now

You had a great rate on your mortgage and didn't want to touch that. But there was something you needed or wanted money for. And adjustable home equity line rates were low-low-low. So you took one out. Now that line keeps adjusting up-up-up. Patrick Sure Fooled Me

Well, Deval Patrick sure fooled me.

Not on Election Day. But back before when he was still thinking of running.

PATRICK

A friend of his, Steve Harold, cousin of the late Paul Harold, brought Patrick by the office for a visit.

The Milton Democrat had not announced his candidacy but was still checking out the political climate.

We got to talking about the governor's race coming up and he was wondering what I thought about it.

REILLY

I was flattered he asked but I told him I thought he would have a tough time running against Atty. Gen. Tom Reilly.

Patrick, I reasoned, was an unknown newcomer while Reilly had been around awhile, was well known and had a job that brings a lot of exposure.

Patrick said he thought Massachusetts wanted a change and would welcome a new face.

We chatted some more and I wished him good luck. But as he was leaving, I told myself: "He's personable and seems like a nice guy. But he's a political unknown and he'll need a miracle to make it."

Boy, was I wrong.

A lot of other people didn't give him much chance back then, either. Reilly was the Democrat front runner then.

Patrick, however, began his rise with an ever expanding grassroots campaign.

He rose fast enough to win the Democratic September primary election over both Reilly and Chris Gabrieli.

And, of course, last week swept by Republican Lt. Gov. Kerry Healey, independent Christy Mihos and Green Rainbow Party candidate Grace Ross.

Patrick served in the Civil Rights Division of the Justice Department in the Clinton Administration but was making his first run for public office.

And in January he will become the first black governor in Massachusetts history.

You've got to give him credit.

His rise was a political skyrocket.

The question now: What kind of governor will he be?

QUINCY HAS NEVER run out of ballots at voting precincts like Boston did last Tuesday.

Boston actually had enough ballots but ran short at 30 precincts late in the day.

Boston's policy is to give each precinct enough ballots for 50 percent of the registered voters there.

When more than 50 percent of the voters turned out the precincts called City Hall for more.

Election Department drivers responding to the SOS from the 30 precincts ran into heavy traffic and police cruisers had to be called in to make the deliveries while voters cooled their heels.

QUINCY CITY CLERK Joseph Shea says a ballot is printed for every registered voter in a state, presidential or municipal election. Just in case that miracle election day comes when every registered voter actually votes.

SHEA

Quincy, for example, has 54,503 registered voters and had a ballot for each one of them and more.

Shea has a different approach than Boston.

He provides a ballot at each of Quincy's 30 precincts for each voter registered there. So there is no running out.

Fifty-four percent of the city's registered voters cast ballots last Tuesday.

"So," says Shea, "you throw away about half the ballots that were printed but not used and you might think, what a waste.

"But just think what an uproar there would be if people came to vote and there were no ballots for them."

"There were a few problems," Shea says. "We didn't get the machines until just before the election and we had little time for staff training. And there were a few faults with the machines themselves."

The machines are wheelchair accessible and have head phones, Braille, and other features to make it easier for the handicapped to vote.

"The bugs will be worked out," Shea says, "and these machines will be a fixture in future elections."

SHEA WASN'T TOO happy with supporters of same sex marriages distributing literature near the polling places.

No candidate supporters, campaign signs and literature are allowed within 150 feet of a polling place on election day.

But same sex marriage supporters were positioning themselves close to the precincts with signs and literature.

"We spent a good part of the day shooing them back to 150 feet," Shea says.

A couple supporters, he said, even pitched a tent 20 feet from the Beechwood Knoll School where Precincts 4 and 5 of Ward 5 vote.

"We had complaints from voters who said they were annoyed," Shea says.

The question of same sex marriage wasn't even on the ballot. Backers were seeking support to retain the right.

IN CASE YOU like to keep track of such things, Ward 1 topped the Quincy turnout with 58.5 percent.

Followed by Wards 5 and 6 with 55 percent, Ward 3 nearly 55 percent, Ward 4 nearly 50 percent and Ward 2 49 percent.

Top precincts honors went again to Ward 6, Precinct 5 at the Squantum School with 69.5 percent.

Animal Shelter Adopt-A-Thon Nov. 18

The "Home For The Holidays" Adopt-A-Thon to benefit the Quincy Animal Shelter (QAS), will be Saturday, Nov. 18 from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. at the shelter, 56 Broad Street.

The public is invited to visit the shelter to view cats, dogs and kittens available for adoption. Those who are interested may fill out applications to become owners. Animals available for adoption are up to date with spaying, neutering and vaccines, either by their previous owner, or through the shelter.

The event will feature a bake sale and raffles that will benefit the QAS, which is a volunteer-run, "no kill" shelter, that relies on public donations, said Sue Schroepfer, a volunteer. Baskets for animals and humans are among the featured raffle items.

"Finding good homes for the animals is our main priority," she said. "We don't get funding. We exist totally on donations from the public to provide the income we need for medical care and food for animals in our care."

Adoption fees for dogs and cats depend on the animal's age, breed and medical history.

QAS also features a "Seniors for Seniors" program which allows senior citizens, 60 years of age or older, to adopt cats and dogs six years or older at a minimum donation cost. Details are available on the shelter website: www.quincyanimalshelter.org.

QAS recently held a Fall Wine Tasting Benefit at the Adams Historical Academy.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS 1915 POSTCARD is a view of Manet Avenue in Houghs Neck looking north from near its intersection with Sea Street. The church in the right center was on the corner of Winthrop Avenue. First known as St. Francis-by-the-Sea, it was renamed Most Blessed Sacrament when the parish was established in 1917. This church was demolished soon after this picture was taken and a new church was built on Sea Street. The old Catholic Lyceum was in the house in front of and just to the right of the church. The trolley on the left was turning onto Babcock Street. For over 50 years trolleys traveled from Quincy Square to the end of Sea Street. The service was stopped in 1946 when busses were introduced. Kilroy Was There, Too

As we were walking into Bob's Coffee Shop in South Weymouth, we were delighted to see a Halloween painting on the large window. It wasn't just any picture, it featured "Kilroy." It was a picture of a cow, and the little guy with the long nose ("Chad") was peering over the back of the cow. It said "Kilroy Haunted Here," and the bottom of the picture was entitled "Cows on Parade" (based on the great, decorated life-size cows that were exhibited throughout Boston this year). It was one of many entries in a contest every year in Colombian Square for school kids.

Having dreamt for years of reviving Kilroy Was Here and then having worked with Discover Quincy, the USS Salem, Ron Adams of Broad Meadows Middle School, and The Quincy Sun over the last couple of years on numerous such activities, you can understand why we were so pleased to see it outside of Quincy.

A little investigative work revealed that the artist is Maretta Morovitz, a sixth grader at St. Fancis Xavier School in Weymouth. Maretta's Girl Scout troop was camping at the USS Salem while we were displaying and awarding prizes for the Kilroy Was Here photo contest last fall. She was interested enough in the story to send Kilroy tee shirts to her penpals in London, England, and Glasgow, Scotland.

She also gave one to her grandfather, Frank Colletta who served in the US Navy from 1945 to 1946. Maretta got to see the World War II monument in Washington, D.C., this year where she found the Kilroy engraving on the wall. Her mom, Nancy, shared this background info with us. Great job, Maretta!

Not widely known: "Chad," the little guy with the long nose, was graffiti found in England during World War II, accompanied by "Wot, no petrol?" or "Wot, no beer?" or anything else that was in short supply. It's not surprising that it later merged with the "Kilroy Was Here" used by James Kilroy at the shipyard and then adopted by sailors and soldiers- all this occurring around the same time and leading to the famous combination we're all so familiar with now: "Kilroy was here," plus the little guy Chad.

Veterans Day Keynote Speaker:

'Brave Men And Women In Uniform Our Most Potent Weapon In War'

Brave men and women in uniform were hailed at Quincy's Veterans Day observance as America's "most potent weapon in war."

Speaking at the World War I Doughboy Statue at Adams Academy from where he could see the house he grew up in Frazier said:

"We spend today remembering the men and women of our Armed Forces who through the centuries have come together to fight for a common cause."

"They've defended America when our borders, our people and our way of life have been threatened."

"Our most potent weapon in war, without a doubt is the brave men and women in uniform. They come from across America, from small towns and cities and from various backgrounds. They answered their nation's Call to Duty."

Asking veterans attending the ceremony to stand and be recognized, Frazier said: "Any morning we wake up on free land, it's because of men and women like these."

Frazier also recognized the families of veterans.

"It is not only the service member who answers the Call of Duty. Our family's service is marked by the unwavering support to their loved ones who are in harm's way."

"They may not carry a rifle on their shoulders, but they have carried the weight of worry. They carry that burden until their loved one returns home. Tragically, some never do. Whenever a service member falls in combat, it is the families who suffer most. Just as our veterans have made sacrifices, these families have been sacrifices as well."

KEYNOTE SPEAKER Lt. Col. Robert Frazier addresses the Veterans Day audience at Adams Academy.

"When we honor veterans, it is only right that we thank those family members and honor them for their sacrifices."

Mayor William Phelan, bringing the greetings of the city, said:

"Today is the day we call Veterans Day. But each and every day of our calendar we exercise our freedom we should thank our veterans from the fields of Lexington and Concord to the streets of Baghdad who have fought and died for us."

City Council President Doug Gutro praised Quincy's veterans.

"Quincy veterans," he said, "have a long and proud record of public service to the nation. The event of 9/11/2001 transformed our world in the ways each of us thinks, not only about national security, but personal security as well in subsequent events that called on our city's and our country's veterans to lead and sacrifice."

He asked those attending to remember Charles Caldwell who gave his life in Iraq and his family. Gutro was a classmate of his at North Quincy High School.

Parade Chairman Tom Stansbury thanked members of the Quincy based National Guard unit for their service. "Last year they were over in Iraq. They are here this morning."

Stansbury noted that "veterans are getting a little older" but the Veterans Day parade will go on.

"Today we see at every parade more and more Cub Scouts and Girl Scouts coming out to be with us to say thank you to the veterans. We appreciate them being here this morning with us. They are our future."

Henry "Hank" Bradley, parade co-chairman an Director of Veterans Services, said:

"It was great coming down the street and seeing so many people. Quincy has never let the veterans down."

Vincent Dolan, commander of the Quincy Veterans Council, welcomed and thanked those attending the parade and ceremony.

50 Especially Remembered

Flagpole Honoring Veterans Dedicated At Point Congregational

A flagpole honoring deceased veterans who were members of Quincy Point Congregational Church and others was dedicated Sunday.

The names of 50 veterans-including extended family members-were recognized during the ceremony, most of which was held in the sanctuary because of the rain.

But a flag, presented by James Chandler, who served 42 years in military service, was raised on the flagpole in front of the church by the North Quincy High School JROTC in the rain.

The names of the veterans were read by John "Jake" Comer, past National Commander of the American Legion and church member Robert Romeri, a veteran of the Vietnam War.

Comer and Ward 2 Councilor Daniel Raymondi were the guest speakers.

Memorial flags brought by members of the deceased veterans were blessed at the altar by Rev. Ann Suzedell, pastor, who also offered a prayer.

"It's the flag of the United States that binds us all together," Comer said, but noted:

"Our flag in our own country gets trampled on. Yet, in Russia I had a soldier come up to me and say he wished that the Russian people had the freedom that America has. He gave me his military cap as a gift."

"Over there they pay for their uniforms, I can only guess what he told his commander about the missing cap."

Comer added:

"Freedom is not free. When we hear, we forget. It's when we see that we remember. It's when we do, we understand."

Raymondi said:

"It is a day like today that makes me very proud to be a Quincy Pointer. Today is a day of remembrance, of reflection and thanksgiving. It s a day to remember the sacrifices of our veterans, especially those from this church community. Especially those from Quincy Point and the city of Quincy. Especially those who made the ultimate sacrifice."

"This is a special time in our history because once again we are asking our brave and not so young brave men and women to protect our freedoms-and in this war, our very way of life."

Pat Stout played an Armed Services Medley on the trumpet and Alyson Greer sang the National Anthem. Comer led the Pledge of Allegiance.

The 50 deceased veterans of all the branches of the armed services who were honored:

A Tribute To Jane Farrell-Smith

What Is A Great Teacher?

Mitch Albom wrote a best seller, "Tuesdays with Morrie" about his relationship with his teacher Morrie Schwartz.

He did not write about the academics he learned in class, but instead he wrote about what he learned from Morrie, with all his wisdom and life experiences, and that these life lessons have stayed with Mr. Albom throughout his life.

Recently the Bernazanni Elementary School in Quincy lost a very special and incredibly well loved teacher. Mrs. Jane Farrell-Smith of the second grade. Her focus was not primarily on academics, standardize testing, homework assignments, discipline and tardy records. Despite what may be "politically" correct, she understood when a boy hugged a girl, or heaven forbid, a teacher embraced a student. She would find time to sneak in some extra outdoor "fresh air" time during class, even for a few minutes, realizing that the children weren't given enough time to simply be children.

Academics, hard work, discipline, and exemplary student behavior are indeed important. However, like Morrie, Jane intuitively knew that life's lessons were more important and of course as a by product of her teaching style, her students did work hard, were disciplined and behaved fabulously.

Which life's lessons did they learn? We interviewed

some of her former students ranging from nine to 20 years old. These are some of the things they learned:

You can have fun learning! A president's rap song, a dinosaur dance, singing the 50 states, winning a world series, and bringing that excitement into the classroom. Imagine kids wanting to get up in the early morning to go to school? Jane's students did just that.

Confidence: How did Jane instill it? By recognizing and acknowledging that each and every child is special. That every child, not just the "advanced" is capable of greatness.

Commitment and Community: Jane's students knew they were connected to her, to each other, and to the school. You did not go to the yearly sock-hop to dance, you went to the sock-hop to dance with Mrs. Farrell-Smith, decked out in her shades and leather jacket. When she was spotted, you could hear the shrieks no matter how loudly the music was playing.

Respect for all living creatures: Her tenderness extended to all living creatures in her classroom whether the hamsters, snakes, rabbits or even the flies. (She used the fly swatters as "bubble wands", rather than harm any insects.)

Continuity: Once you were Mrs. Farrell-Smith's student you were always her student. Year after year former students would stop by to visit. A name or face was never forgotten and the former student was able to be a second grader again, even for only a moment. If a sibling had Mrs. Farrell-Smith, then you had Mrs. Farrell-Smith, since she embraced the entire family of each and every student.

Love: The students learned that only a person with tremendous capacity to love could do all of the above.

Dying so young: Jane continues to teach one of life's unfortunate truths. Sometimes death comes too soon, they have learned. Sometimes they don't get to say good-bye to someone they love dearly. Perhaps they have learned that in order to keep a person's memory alive, they must carry a piece of that person within them, something that they loved best about them, whether simply their sense of humor, or their ability to unconditionally love all and not to forget to live what they learned in their everyday lives.

If they do, they will teach others the lessons that their great teacher, taught them. These students will then not only be students, but become more like Jane, a great teacher to all around them.

Submitted by Sue and Anthony Falco, parents of three of Jane's students. Contributions from Isabella Falco, Kerry Phelan, Lauren Craig, Janet Powell, and several of Mrs. Farrell-Smith's colleagues.

We've got a nice rhythm going here.

Expertise, innovation and patient-friendly care are at the very heart of what a hospital can offer its community. At Milton Hospital, we offer it in abundance these days:

- our state-designated primary stroke service was recognized as one of the best in the state for speed and expertise
- a prestigious national consumer magazine reported that our Transitional Care Unit was one of the best in Massachusetts for the quality of care it provides to rehabilitate patients following a serious illness or injury
- the Radiology department offers same-day scheduling and quick results
- our affiliation with Beth Israel Deaconess Medical Center in Boston continues to make it possible for us to introduce clinical programs never offered in this area

Providing patients with new programs and advancements in care are the very lifeblood of a hospital...and it's happening regularly at Milton Hospital.

SPOTLIGHT ON HEALTH & FITNESS

FROM START TO FITNESS

Fitness Myths

The fitness world can be a confusing and intimidating place. Each day there seems to be another infomercial, magazine article or news report telling you what you should do or not do with your body. With the enormous amount of material available, it is important to know what is fact and what is fiction. Let's tackle the following fitness myths.

If I Lift Weights, I Will Bulk Up!

Not quite! Obtaining lean, strong, balanced and functional muscles through strength training should be a goal in your fitness routine, no matter the gender. For women, strength training not only facilitates the loss of non-essential body fat, but also helps prevent conditions such as osteoporosis.

With the proper technique and workout progressions, it is possible to develop lean, toned muscles without fear of "bulking up." Besides, the hormones that facilitate such growth aren't present in women in the same quantity as in men. So breathe a sigh of relief and hit the weights.

Doing Crunches Will Give Me "Flat Abs"

Oh, if this myth were only true. The desire for washboard abdominals has many people crunching themselves to disappointment. Achieving "flat abs" is a combination of a consistent progressive exercise program, proper nutrition and genetics.

Crunches, sit-ups and other types of exercises are designed to develop the strength, stability and overall function of your core muscles, and completing these exercises alone will not make them visible. You can have the strongest abdominal muscles in the world, but if they are hidden under body fat, you will not see them.

Put your focus on performing core exercises to promote stable and functional muscles that encourage a decrease in body fat and an increase in muscle strength, in addition to proper nutrition.

I'm Not Overweight, So I Don't Need to Exercise

Don't let the mirror fool you. Your external appearance does not represent your internal appearance. Keeping your heart, lungs, muscles and bones strong are extremely important. ALL women can be at risk for osteoporosis and need to have some type of weight-bearing exercises in their fitness routine.

Also, just because your weight might be OK does not mean you are within the appropriate range of body fat. Your body-fat percentage can be more significant than your weight. The risks of many conditions such as stroke, heart attack, diabetes and high blood pressure can be decreased through exercise. No one is exempt from exercising or being active.

Seek the advice of a medical or fitness professional if you have questions, and don't let these fitness myths keep you from reaching your goals

Health Hints

Tips To Help Families Shape Up and Fight Obesity

(NAPS)- On a scale of one to 10, obesity ranks uncomfortably high as a threat to the nation's health. Unfortunately, the rates of obesity in the United States continue to gain, with about one-third of the adults overweight and nearly another third obese. Obesity in both young people and adults is responsible for higher rates of diabetes, hypertension and other health problems.

While a big part of the problem is the amount of food put on families' plates, another part is not getting enough physical exercise. Although there are countless ways parents and youngsters can participate in activities together, it doesn't always happen.

To encourage families to engage in recreational activities and sports, a poster has been created called "20 Tips For Getting Your Family On Track." The poster-available in English and Spanish-is part of an ongoing partnership between Sweet'N Low and Shape Up America!, a not-for-profit organization that promotes physical activity and healthy weight management. The tips, which are easy to do and fun for the family, include:

- Plan cycling trips on safe trails by calling your bike club.
- Shoot some basketball hoops.
- Use a pedometer to count the number of steps taken each day (2,000 steps equals one mile).
- Jump rope-practice rhythms, rhymes and tricks.
- Try to always use the stairs.
- Schedule regular times for activity throughout the week.

Many are surprised about how much they can do to reverse the trend of obesity in America and to promote a healthy lifestyle for their families-one that balances food intake with physical activity.

To request a full-size, 18" by 24" poster, go online at www.sweetnlow.com/health/fittips.html or www.shapeup.org.

Both Web sites also provide a PDF version of the poster for downloading as well as 30 additional tips to help get your family in shape.

BISPHOSPHONATES AND JAW DAMAGE

Not only are the bone-building drugs known as bisphosphonates used to prevent osteoporosis, they are also administered intravenously to bone-cancer patients. The news on these drugs is that they have been linked to osteonecrosis ("dead" bone) of the jaw, which can lead to abscesses, foul-tasting discharge, loose teeth, and even exposed bone. It is important to note that only four percent of reported cases of osteonecrosis of the jaw have been linked to osteoporosis treatment with oral bisphosphonates. Because the intravenous drugs used to treat bone cancer are twelve times stronger, they pose the greater risk. Patients who are going to take these drugs should schedule extractions, dental implants, and other procedures three to four months prior to beginning treatment.

What kind of medications do you take? This informative column on bisphosphonates has been brought to you as a public service. We stress the importance of preventive dental care for the entire family. When was the last time you had your teeth checked by a professional? Call us now at 617-479-6220 and schedule an appointment. Your total emotional and physical well-being is as important to us as your teeth. We will do what is best for you and we will not compromise. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street. We offer the services of anesthesiology with a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Visit us on the web at www.quincydentist.com.

P.S. If you take oral bisphosphonates, do not panic. You are at low risk for osteonecrosis. However, be vigilant about getting dental exams and cleanings.

STERLING'S THREE school choruses sang God Bless America and other patriotic songs at the school assembly.

TOM STANSBURY

LOU VENTURELLI

At Three Assemblies

Sterling Middle School In Special Tribute To Veterans

By MIKAELA SLANEY

"Today is a day to pay tribute to the veterans, this is what Veterans Day is all about," Tom Stansbury told the crowd at a Veterans Day Celebration, Nov. 8 at Sterling Middle School.

Stansbury, member of the Morrisette Legion Post, assistant director of Veterans Services and Navy veteran of the Vietnam War, was a speaker at a remembrance ceremony at the school. Students honored current and past veterans with three ceremonies in the auditorium, that featured band and chorus performances, patriotic readings and dramatic skits.

Lou Venturelli, a Navy veteran, spoke on the topic of "courage." He told Sterling students that courage can be found in everyday situations. "You all have courage," he told them, "the question is... do you have the courage to do what you believe is right? You can do the right things every day."

Mike Draicchio, of the Norfolk County Sheriff's Office, and physical education teacher at the school, was master of ceremonies.

George DePaulo, senior custodian with 60 years of service at the closing of this school year, and decorated Army veteran of World War II was recognized for his achievements.

Other attending veterans included DePaulo, Arthur Rizzi, a former member of the Medical Corp. of the Korean War, and Mark Holleran, Marine veteran of the Gulf War.

The 7th and 8th Grade Chorus sang "My Country 'Tis of Thee," Sterling Middle School 6th Grade Chorus performed "Song of Peace," and "God Bless America," was performed by the Sterling Middle School Chorus.

Dave Buckley, band teacher, led the "Bugle Call," "Anchors Aweigh" and "March of the Army," performed by the Sterling Middle School Band. Seventh grade student Erin Richardson and 6th grade student Stephen Rodeck performed "Taps."

From Mass. Emergency Management Agency

Tips For Preparing For Power Outages

TIPS FOR HOMEOWNERS

The Massachusetts Emergency Management Agency (MEMA) offers the following tips for dealing with a possible power outage:

• Check flashlights and portable radios to ensure that they are working, and there are extra batteries. A radios an important source of weather and emergency information during a storm.

• Those who have a watter supply that is affected by power outages (such as a well-water pump system), should fill a bathtub and spare containers with water. Water in the tub should be used for sanitation purposes only, and not as drinking water. Pouring a pail of water from the tub directly into the bowl can flush a toilet.

• Set the refrigerator and freezer to their coldest settings. Remember to reset them back to normal once power is restored. During an outage, do not open the refirgerator or freezer door unnecessarily. Fod can stay cold in a half-packed refrigerator for up to 24 hours, and in a well-packed freezer for 48 hours.

• Those who have medication that requires refrigeration should check with their pharmacist for guidance on proper storage during an extended outage.

• In order to protect against possible voltage irregularities that can occur when power is restored, unplug all sensitive electronic equipment, including TVs, stereo, VCR, microwave oven, computer, cordless telephone, answering machine and garage door opener. Review the process for manually operating an electric garage door.

• Be extra cautions when going outside to inspect for damage after a storm. Downed or hanging electrical wires can be hidden by trees or debris, and could be live. Never attempt to touch or move downed lines, and keep children and pets away from them. Do not touch anything power lines are touching, such as tree branches or fences. Always assume a downed line is a live line. Call a utility company to report any outage-related problem.

Registry Of Deeds Holiday Food Drive

Register Bill O'Donnell announces the Annual Norfolk County Registry of Deeds Holiday Food Drive is underway through Monday, Dec. 22 at the Registry of Deeds, 649 High St., Dedham.

O'Donnell is asking for donations of nonperishable food items, which will be forwarded to area food pantries.

"Many Norfolk County residents continue to face hardship at this time of year, and food pantries need our help," O'Donnell said. "In this holiday season, I urge all citizens to remember the less fortunate and to be as generous as they can in contributing to this effort."

A donation bin has been set up in the lobby of the Registry building (which is open 8 a.m. to 5 p.m., Monday through Friday). Suggested items include cereals, canned vegetables, boxed or canned spaghetti, spaghetti sauces, coffee, and baby food.

Those unable to visit the Registry are urged to contribute directly to a food pantry in their community. A list of area food pantries is available at www.norfolkdeeds.org

Spend Energy On Saving Energy

(NAPS)- According to the U.S. Department of Energy, we spend more than $160 billion a year to heat, cool, light and live in our homes. Fortunately, you can save 20 to 30 percent on your household energy bill by making energy efficiency improvements.

Poor design and installation of heating, ventilation and air-conditioning equipment alone increases energy costs 10 to 30 percent. Proper sizing, design and instillation are usually the top three priorities for cutting energy bills.

Taking the time to understand where you can cut back on energy usage will save you money. IN order to determine the best improvements to make on your home to make it more energy efficient, the Office of Energy Efficiency and Renewable Energy recommends starting with a home energy audit. It will help you determine which parts of your home use the most energy.

You can conduct a simple home energy audit yourself or you can call an independent energy auditor for a more comprehensive examination. For insight into how to conduct your own energy audit, Lawerence Berkeley National Laboratory provides a Virtual Home Energy Advisor online at: http//hes.lbl.gov/.

Now may be a good time to make energy improvements in your home because depending on the equipment you select, you may be eligible for federal tax credits. The Energy Policy Act of 2005 provides tax credits as high as $300 to consumers who purchase qualified high-efficiency heating, cooling and water-heating equipment.

Some companies are even offering special promotions to save you even more. For example, consumers who purchase eligible heating and air-conditioning products from Johnson Controls' York brand may have a choice of cash rebates, special financing or an extended warranty plan.

The program offers customers a cash back rebate up to $1,500, special 12-month, no payment/same as cash financing or a 10-year parts and labor YORKCare Extended Warranty Plan on qualifying products.

To learn more, visit www.yorkupg.com or call (800) 910-YORK.

Protect Your Property From The Elements

(NAPS)- According to the Insurance Information Institute, losses from catastrophic winter storms have averaged $1.1 billion annually for the past 20 years, but there are steps you can take to keep your home out of such statistics.

Rough weather brings many threats to a home, so it's vital that homeowners take necessary precautions to protect the outer shell. Well-maintained windows, roofing and siding defend a home against the threats of moisture and winter elements, ensure that long-term integrity of the structure is not compromised and help keep energy costs in check.

Homeowners should consider:

Windows- Check for drafts. If you feel a draft, not only is cool air and moisture entering the home, warm air is escaping.

If you are in the market to replace windows, look for Energy Star-qualified vinyl replacement windows with at least a duel-paned, Low-E glass pack. The vinyl option requires less maintenance, and the Low-E coating helps retain heat in the home in winter and helps keep your home cooler in summer by reflecting the sun's rays away from the window.

Roofing- Make sure shingles are undamaged and the underlayment is water tight.

When replacing shingles, consider fiberglass for durability. Damage to shingles and the shingle underlayment can let moisture into the attic. Without proper ventilation, this moisture will linger, eventually ruining the insulation.

Homeowners can save up to 20 percent on energy costs by insulating the attic to the proper R-value, the standard rating to describe insulation effectiveness.

Siding- Patch or replace any cracks or flaws in siding.

Consider vinyl siding with foam backing. The vinyl provides a virtually maintenance-free exterior and the foam fills air space for insulation and better energy performance.

These home maintenance and efficiency measures can increase a house's life span. What's more, regular upkeep can add value to the property, ultimately increasing the return on investment.

For larger home improvement projects such as upgrading roofing, siding or windows, homeowners will likely want to arrange installation with a licensed professional rather than attempting to do it on his or her own. The Home Depot Home Services provides guaranteed installation for these and other home improvement projects. Visit homedepot.com/install or call (800) HOMEDEPOT to schedule a free in-home consultation with a license technician.

Chemical Fumes Can Cause Problems

Q. I had a strange reaction when I was painting my bathroom a few weeks ago. My eyelids got very red and itchy, and one swelled up and took two weeks to go down. Then, when I was replacing some tiles last week, my eyes itched and swelled again. What's going on? Am I allergic to something? — Tyler L., Virginia Beach, Va.

A. It's possible that you had an allergic reaction to something in the materials you were using — especially if the reactions occurred only while working with certain items. Even seemingly benign things like latex paint or tile grout contain chemicals and give off fumes that some people react to quite strongly.

Visit your doctor and explain what happened. He or she will try to pinpoint a cause, and might recommend that you visit an allergist for further testing. The doctor can also give comprehensive advice on preventing or treating allergic reactions.

For all my readers, remember that when working with any chemicals or solvents, good ventilation is important whether you have a reaction or not. Exposure to strong fumes can cloud one's judgment. In addition, many of the materials used in home improvement are flammable, and a buildup of fumes in an enclosed area can be very dangerous. Even sawing wood can put a do-it-yourselfer at risk from breathing in fine sawdust. A filter mask, safety goggles and sturdy gloves will limit exposure to chemicals and dust, and in the case of allergies, can minimize reactions.

Before starting any home-improvement or repair work, review the directions and warnings on the labels of tools and materials and take all recommended precautions.

Send questions or home-repair tips to homeguru2000@hotmail.com, or write This Is a Hammer, c/o King Features Weekly Service, P.O. Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475.

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Some changes might seem confusing at first, especially to an Aries whose impatience levels are pretty shaky this week. Take it one step at a time, Lamb, and soon all will be made clear.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) That difficult situation you've been dealing with continues to call for careful handling. Avoid quickly made choices that might not stand up when they're finally put to the test.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) You still have lots of evaluating to do before you can consider making a commitment. It's better to move cautiously than to risk stumbling into a major misunderstanding.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) A previously peevish partner offers to be more helpful with your problems. But remember: The final choice is yours. Be guided by what you feel is the right thing to do.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) As the Big Cat, you can sometimes be pretty rough on those you suspect of betrayal. The best advice is to pull in those claws and listen to the explanation. It might surprise you.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Your inner voice usually guides you well. But a note of caution: This is a period of mixed signals for you, so be careful you don't misunderstand the messages you're getting.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Cupid's call beckons both single Librans looking for a new love, as well as couples hoping to strengthen their relationships. A workplace problem is quickly resolved.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) It's been a hectic time for you, and you might want to take a break to restore both body and soul. You'll then be set to face new challenges later this month.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) It's a good idea to take a more conservative approach to your financial situation right now. Some plans made earlier this year might need readjusting.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) This is a fine time to move boldly into those new opportunities I promised would open up for you. Check them over, and then choose the best one for you.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Congratulations. Your self-assurance is growing stronger, and you should now feel more confident about making that long-deferred decision about a possible commitment.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) You're very close to reaching your goal. But be wary of distractions that can lure you off-course and leave you stranded far away from where you really want to be.

BORN THIS WEEK: You have an inner sight that helps you see into people's hearts. You would be an excellent psychologist or social worker.

OFF-DUTY AND ON-DUTY: On Oct. 27, at approximately 6:30 p.m., a man was driving westbound on Furnace Brook Parkway when he suffered a seizure, lost control of his pick-up truck and crashed head-on into a tree. Officer Paul Murphy, off-duty and enroute to the Cochrane fundraiser, came across the accident scene. He saw the cab of the truck filled with smoke and quickly asked spectators if they saw anyone get out of the truck.

With the engine area now in flames, Officer David Zupkofska arrived on scene and briefly spoke with Officer Murphy. Both officers went to the truck, but the doors were locked.

Seconds later, the truck become fully engulfed in flames.

The officers provided first aid to the victim until Fallon Ambulance arrived. The parents of the driver contacted me and are extremely grateful to those who came to the rescue and saved their son, who suffered severe burns.

Nice work!

HOUGHS NECK RESIDENTS ALERT: On Nov. 8, between the hours of 6:30 a.m. and 11:45 p.m., there were 14 reports of "breaking and entering into a motor vehicle." The reported incidents occurred on Bell, Edgewater, Turner, Winthrop, Bayview and Sea Street. These are just the incidents that were reported.

The common factor for each of these cars was that they were left unlocked. (Even though some insisted they were locked their doors, officers investigating found no sign of forced entry.) To make matters worse, valuable items were taken from the cars, such as a pocketbook left in plain view, a wallet in a glove compartment and a laptop computer on the seat. One victim even left her children's Social Security car in her purse!

Aside from monetary and sentimental losses, identity theft from personal information stolen is another concern. Be sure to lock your car doors and remove anything of value that is in plain sight. Even an empty box should be removed because it can be a temptation for a criminal to see what is in the box.

A Job Well Done

On Thursday, Nov. 2, at approximately 4 p.m., the Quincy Police Department Drug Control Unit set up surveillance at a specific location in West Quincy due to numerous complaints that drug deals were taking place in the neighborhood.

LT. DAN MINTON

The callers identified themselves but wished to remain anonymous due to fear of retaliation. The callers stated that the drug deals would take place between two vehicles at a specified location and time.

Approximately 45 minutes later, Detective William O'Brien observed a Nissan Sentra and a Mercury Sable come to a stop on West Street, then pull down a side street. The suspect vehicles then pulled up driver's side to driver's side and stopped.

The Nissan had one suspect and the Sable had two suspects. The Detective then observed suspect #1, a female driver in the Sable, reach through her open driver's side window and hand something to the sole occupant/male driver/suspect #3, who had his arm fully extended out his driver's window. The vehicle then drove away.

Based upon his training and experience, Detective O'Brien believed that a drug deal had just occurred and notified other members of the Drug Unit. Both vehicles were followed by detectives and then stopped.

The Sable stopped at a gas station pump on Willard Street. Detectives O'Brien and Ed Ryan pulled behind the Sable and Detective O'Brien approached the driver's side window. The Sable then began to leave the pump but Detective O'Brien identified himself and showed the driver his badge.

The detective then observed the driver, suspect #1, hand an object to her passenger/suspect #2, who then attempted to hide it between the seats. Detective Ryan assisted as they had the two occupants exit the vehicle.

Suspect #1 blurted out that she just bought a bag of cocaine from "Junior." Detective O'Brien found a small plastic bag of white powder on the seat and seized it as evidence.

Meanwhile, Detectives Bill Ward and Gerard O'Rourke, who were following the Nissan, learned from Detective O'Brien his findings, and then stopped the suspect car on Granite Street in Braintree. Detective O'Brien then responded to the scene and identified the driver of the Nissan as the suspect (#3) in the original transaction.

Braintree Officers Curtin and Ward arrived on scene to assist. Both suspect vehicles were towed and impounded for collection of evidence and civil seizure. Suspect #3 was searched and $1,000 was also seized.

Suspect #1 – 40 years old and suspect #2, 29 years old, both from Canton, were arrested and charged with "possession of Class B substance" and "conspiracy to violate the controlled substance laws." Suspect #2, a 32-year-old from Roxbury, was arrested and charged with "distribution of Class B substance" and "conspiracy to violate the controlled substance laws."

Nice work!

In conversation with Detective O'Rourke about this case, he told me that the Drug Unit worked closely with a neighbor where the drug transactions were occurring. He told me this person was not an informant – he/she was a concerned citizen who wanted more than the drug dealing stopped; he/she wanted the suspects caught!

Detective O'Rourke stated many citizens are reluctant to provide their identity, as was this particular citizen, for fear of retaliation. He said the Drug Unit likes to know the identity of the reporting citizen for "credibility purposes," and that there is not an ulterior motive behind an anonymous caller's information.

The Drug Unit always accepts information from people who wish to remain anonymous. This citizen, who did provide their identity, provided factual information that could be corroborated by surveillance and running license plates to determine the criminal records of the owners of the vehicles.

Detective O'Rourke said the citizen would not be needed for court and his/her identity would not be revealed.

It should also be noted that this citizen has directly accounted for seven arrests while cleaning up his/her neighborhood.

Chief Robert Crowley has also recognized this citizen for his/her efforts in "getting involved" to fight crime in the City of Quincy.

Presidents Stymied By Sandwich Defense, 14-10

By SEAN BRENNAN

The Quincy Presidents, playing their last regular season game before their Thanksgiving Day clash with North Quincy, fell to Sandwich High School last Friday night, 14-10. With the loss, the Presidents' record now stands at 2-7 overall, 1-7 in the Atlantic Coast League Conference.

In the game against Sandwich, Quincy, who was missing two of its offensive plugs in seniors Jim Aikens and Tom Hazelhurst due to injury, were forced to go back to the spread offense that they had abandoned earlier in the year. Without Hazelhurst, the team's leading rusher and its offensive dynamo the last two games, Quincy leaned on the arm of senior quarterback Matt Boyle to deliver the goods, but a stingy Sandwich defense limited the Presidents to zero points in the opening half, and stopped any chance for a momentum swing late in the third quarter with two huge defensive plays in their own endzone.

With 5:38 left in the third quarter and down 7-0, the Presidents got a break on a punt deep into Sandwich territory. The punt, which had deflected off of the Sandwich punt returner and rolled into the endzone, was recovered by another Sandwich player. The result of the botched play was a safety for the Presidents, and it gave Quincy two points and the ball back.

Now down 7-2, Quincy took the ensuing free kick all the way down to the Sandwich 14 yard line with the chance to punch in the go ahead score. On third down and 8, Boyle, using play-action, had senior Jared Tucker wide-open in the back of the endzone, but underthrew him. This missed opportunity brought up fourth down for the Presidents. On fourth down, Boyle went back to Tucker, but Sandwich's Joe Perry broke up the pass, ending the scoring threat.

"We had a lot of momentum, but I couldn't complete two passes in a row," Boyle said. "It probably would've put us back in the game. It was a lack of concentration."

After the Sandwich defense made two big plays, the Sandwich offense immediately shut the door on the Presidents with a back-breaking play of their own. Running back Brendon Kelliher took the first play from scrimmage after the two near misses by Quincy, 71 yards down the right sidelines for a touchdown run, and a 14-2 lead. Kelliher finished his night with 164 yards and two touchdowns.

Quincy's night did end on a positive note as Boyle drove his team down the field before finally finding Tucker for a 20-yard touchdown as time expired. The successful two-point conversion finished up the scoring at 14-10.

Without Hazelhurst running the ball, Boyle's arm was the only real offensive threat the Presidents had all night. He finished with 125 yards and one touchdown on 15 for 22 attempts. Tucker ended his night with the one score and four catches for 61 yards.

Quincy now has eleven days to prepare for their game against North Quincy on Thanksgiving Day. The Presidents will be looking to extend their streak of six straight wins over the Red Raiders. Quincy won last year's game in deciding fashion, 27-0, and have outscored North Quincy, 120-47, over the last six games.

SPORTS

North Bows To Plymouth S.

North Quincy, playing on the road last Friday night, lost to Plymouth South by a score of 43-15, but the team should be able to take some positives out of the loss as they prepare for the annual Thanksgiving Day game against Quincy on November 23rd.

The Red Raiders (1-9 overall, 1-7 in the Atlantic Coast League) had trouble all night long stopping the running game of Plymouth South's (7-3, 5-2 ACL) Brandon Coolidge who shredded the Raider defense for 250 yards on 21 carries. Coolidge scored three touchdowns.

In defeat, North Quincy's offense put up the their most points since a 32-0 win over Nauset High School on Oct. 20th, and in the process may have just set into motion a offensive game plan that could end Quincy High School's six game Thanksgiving Day winning streak.

The Red Raiders' first-team offense remained in the game even as Plymouth South continued to rack up the points, but this strategy was used because Head Coach Jim Connor wanted to keep his team's confidence up and because his team was scoring more than usually.

"That's why I wanted to leave the first-string in there," Connor said. "So they could gain a little confidence, but we could not stop them. Defensively, we have a lot of work to do."

The Red Raiders have put up just 47 points during their six game losing streak on Thanksgiving, while allowing 120 points to the Presidents. The final score of last year's game was 27-0 in favor of the Presidents.

RESPONDING TO PRESSURE

In this era of high gas prices, it pays to remember that some simple measures can have a relatively large positive impact. Simply put, maintaining proper tire inflation saves gas. By some estimates, under-inflated tires are responsible for wasting over 4 million gallons of fuel daily in the United States. With this in mind, the federal government has legislated that, by model year 2006, 20 percent of all new cars must have tire-pressure monitoring systems in place as standard equipment. By 2007, that percentage increases to 70 percent. One hundred-percent compliance is expected by 2008. In the meantime, if your vehicle does not have a tire-pressure system, check your tires' pressure on a regular basis.

There are many very simple measures that can be taken, such as proper tire inflation, to ensure that you get the most performance from the gas your put in your car. At LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO, we recommend many things: a tune up if necessary, checking your o2 sensors, even your exhaust can affect the performance you receive from gas. If you are worried about gas consumption, come to 258 Quincy Ave., E. Braintree, or call 781-843-1550. Open: Mon.-Fri. 6am-9pm, Sat. 7am-9pm, Sun. 9am-5pm.

Dick Flavin Receives Award From Red Sox Booster Club

QUINCY'S DICK FLAVIN (left) was recently honored by the BoSox Club, the official booster club of the Boston Red Sox. The author, motivational speaker and humorist received the Brad Jernegan Award during the club's annual meeting at the Quincy Marriott. At right is former BoSox Club President Bill Brooks.

The BoSox Club, the official booster club of the Boston Red Sox, recently honored author, motivational speaker and humorist Dick Flavin as this year's recipient of the Brad Jernegan Award. Flavin, a Quincy resident, was chosen for his continuing contributions to The BoSox Club and his life-long love for the Boston Red Sox.

The event to honor Flavin included appearances by Mike Dee, chief operating officer; Jed Hoyer, assistant general manager; and Jim Lonborg, '67 Cy Young award winner and Red Sox Hall of Fame pitcher.

Best-known by Red Sox fans for his performance of "Teddy at the Bat" in front of 25,000 fans during a Fenway Park memorial to the late Ted Williams, Flavin is a seven-time Emmy Award-winner for television writing and commentary, and is heralded as one of America's leading speakers and writers.

Flavin joins the likes of former Red Sox players Johnny Pesky and Dom Dimaggio, along with many other Red Sox enthusiasts, management and staff, as winners of the Brad Jernegan Award.

"The BoSox Club is pleased to bestow this honor upon Dick Flavin for his contributions to, and passion towards, Red Sox Nation," said Quincy's Ed Keohane, president of the BoSox Club. "While most of us know him best for 'Teddy at the Bat,' Dick's relationship with the team goes much deeper than that, and we are grateful for it."

The award is named in honor of the late Brad Jernegan, president of The BoSox Club from 1970-1971, and it acknowledges those who have made special contributions to the Red Sox.

The BoSox Club, originally founded in 1967, was formed to promote baseball at all levels and to assist the Boston Red Sox in community and charitable endeavors such as the Red Sox Foundation, the Jimmy Fund and New England baseball organizations.

Quincy Falls Just Short Of Volleyball Finals

By SEAN BRENNAN

The 10th seeded Quincy girls' volleyball team steamrolled through the first two rounds of the Division 1 Central/East tournament bracket, but fell short of a finals appearance after losing last Thursday night to third seeded Brookline High School, 3-0.

The Presidents, who finished the season at 13-9, reached the semifinals with two dominating performances in the first two rounds. Quincy easily dispatched of Boston English High School in the opening round, 3-0.

With that win, the Presidents had to travel back into Boston to take on second seeded Boston Latin Academy last Tuesday. The team displayed a level of confidence and focus throughout the match and won by a three game to none score. The only game that was somewhat close was the third and deciding game three. Quincy won game one, 25-16, and game two, 25-13, before being challenged in the third and final game before taking the game and match with a 25-18 win.

Leading the way in this quarterfinal match for the Presidents were junior captains Liz Bock (12 kills), Alicia Woodberry (23 assists, four aces, and four kills) and Marybeth Torphey. Classmate Katie Santon contributed at the outside hitter position with eight kills.

Head coach Jacqui Niosi said her team's ability to cover the court was a difference-maker.

"They looked a lot better defensively," Niosi said. "Running some more plays, Liz (Bock) was moving around, communicating, but our passes were there today so we could do that."

Quincy, who rode a 14-3 run after falling behind 8-6 in the second game to go up 20-11, and gain control of the match, needed to beat Brookline and have North Quincy win their semifinal match against Newton North to set up an all-city final. Unfortunately, for the Presidents and the Red Raiders, this would not be the year for either team. This season is the first time in at least 10 years that a Quincy high school team has failed to reach a girls' volleyball sectional final.

North Quincy Nearly Upsets Newton North

GIRLS' VOLLEYBALL

The Red Raiders came oh-so-close to puling off a major upset in the semifinals of the Division 1 Central/East postseason tournament last Thursday night against Newton North. The final score, 3-1 in favor of Newton North, was not indicative of just how close the match really was. The fifth seeded Raiders, who were coming off consecutive wins over Holliston and Cambridge Ridge and Latin, gave the Tigers all they could handle, and quieted a loud home crowd with a 25-21 win in the first game.

The Red Raiders began their night by beating the Tigers with a complete team effort in the first game. A kill by sophomore Kathleen Lynch made it 20-16 NQ, and after the Tigers stormed back to make the score 21-20, the two teams alternated points before NQ's Virginia Wong (13 kills) wrapped up the opening game with a kill.

"I was not really surprised because I knew that we could play that kind of volleyball," head coach Kerry Ginty said. "We have it in us, and we had seen glimmers recently. It happened to really come out in that first game, and unfortunately, it came and went over the rest of the night."

The second game saw the Tigers storm out to a 6-1 lead before North Quincy brought the score to 8-7, but Newton North held strong and went on to win the game 25-17 to even the match at game apiece.

The decisive third game started out well for the Red Raiders, and after a Wong kill made the score 16-8, the Raiders were in prime position to take a 2 games to 1 lead. At 20-14, North Quincy just needed to maintain control and finish their plays, but the Tigers had other ideas. The combination of Sarah Berkland, Hester Breen, Emily Levoy and Lily Brown took over the court and shut out North Quincy over the game's final dozen points, posting a 25-21 win.

"We had communications breakdowns in game three, but I also think they served really well, which threw us off," Ginty said. "Our back row would be amazing at times, an yet out defense would be awful at times. Consistency is what we needed."

The fourth game started out well for the Red Raiders who jumped out to a 4-1 lead, before Newton North knotted the score at 6-6. Another Wong kill made the score 21-16 Newton, but the Red Raiders could not finish around the net and lost the game and the semifinal match, 25-19.

The Red Raiders advanced to the semifinals after a 3-0 win over Cambridge Ridge and Latin last Tuesday. Wong posted eight kills and a block, and Della Croce (two aces) provided strong serving, leading the Raiders in a team effort, 25-15, 25-13 and 27-25.

North Quincy finished their season at 17-6, and although they will be losing a number of seniors, the team looks to be in good shape for next year.

"We have a lot of talent coming back," Ginty said. "I'm extremely happy we got this far, but the girls did all the work. Newton North is a great team, but I feel like we proved we were not overmatched at all."

UMass-Boston's Myles Berry Named Soccer Coach Of The Year

MYLES BERRY

Berry, in just his fourth season at the helm, led the Beacons to their highest overall and conference win total in seven years, posting an 11-7-1 mark, including a 4-3 record in LEC play. The season included a number of big victories, including a 1-0 double-overtime road decision to snap nationally-ranked Clark University's nine-game unbeaten streak in Worcester, MA on Oct. 4 and another key road win with a 2-1 double-overtime victory over Keene State College on Oct. 30 to put the Beacons into the conference playoffs, featuring the league's top four teams. The Beacons lost to Plymouth State in the first round of the LEC playoffs.

Prior to this season, the Beacons, who were selected eighth out of eight teams in the league's preseason coaches' poll, had not beaten a ranked team, advanced to the conference playoffs or registered double-digits in wins since 1999. Berry took over a program, which finished with a 3-13-2 record the year before he began, and after two respectable seasons, has guided the team to a 19-14-3 mark over the last two seasons.

Berry is also the Head Men's Lacrosse Coach for the Beacons and he becomes the first coach in LEC history to win the top coaching honors in two different sports, having been named the best lax coach three times, including this past spring to give him the award in both sports in the same calendar year.

North Quincy Golfers ACL North Division Co-Champs

The North Quincy High School golf team enjoyed another successful fall season on the links in 2006. The Red Raiders finished with a 13-3 overall record and a 7-1 record in the Atlantic Coast League North Division to finish as co-champions. The Red Raiders have finished first for the last three years.

The fall season began with wins in their first four matches, which included a win over Cape powerhouse Nauset High School, as well as a home victory over eventual co-champion, Marshfield.

A tough loss on the road by four strokes to Sandwich, last year's Division II champion, was followed by eight straight wins for the Red Raiders. North Quincy beat non-league opponents Bridgewater/Rayhnam and Scituate, as well as ACL league members Falmouth and Quincy during this winning streak.

The team's final regular season loss was to Dennis/Yarmouth, and for the season all of the team's losses were on the road.

Other victories included wins over Whitman/Hanson, Plymouth North and Plymouth South.

The team's 13-3 record qualified them for the State Tournament for the 9th time in the last 10 years. In the South Sectionals, which were held at Glenn Ellen Country Club in Millis, the Raiders finished 7th behind teams such as Needham, BC High and Barnstable.

The team was led by senior co-captains Rob McAloon and Peter Dolbec.

"Both of these guys have been with the program for four years," head coach Rick Hutchins said. "It has been a pleasure to coach them and to see them grow as golfers as well as young men."

McAloon and Dolbec were North Quincy's 1-2 punch, but they had help from fellow seniors Jon Drooks, Dan Reilly, Mikey Griffin and Chris Boyd.

"The key to the season was teamwork," Hutchins said. "One golfer does not win a match, and we played eight golfers in a match and their consistency was the story of our success."

McAloon and Dolbec were honored at season's end with the co-ACL Sportsmanship Award. McAloon, Dolbec and Drooks were all named to the ACL all star team.

Honorable mention awards went to Mikey Griffin and Dan Reilly.

The Red Raiders are also eligible for the MIAA award for academic achievement as all team members are honor roll students.

The team played its home matches at Presidents Golf Course.

"We would like to thank Mr. Don Small, head professional at Presidents, and his entire staff for all they do for our team, not only during the season, but also in the offseason," Hutchins said. "They are a part of our success."

"I would also like to thank all present, as well as past team members, for their contribution to the North Quincy golf team," Hutchins said. "Thanks to all the parents for their support."

Hutchins is retiring as head coach after 15 years with the North Quincy golf team.

North Quincy Senior Co-Captain Is A Three-Time All-Star And Top Student

Golf Standout Rob McAloon On Par For Bright Future

By SEAN BRENNAN

When it comes to the game of golf, North Quincy's Robert McAloon is at the top of the leaderboard.

McAloon, the Red Raiders' senior co-captain, four year varsity starter and three-time Atlantic Coast League all-star, is as good a golfer as you will find on the South Shore, and he is a better all-around talent than just about any other student-athlete in the city.

To look at his accomplishments on the course and in the classroom, it would not be surprising if McAloon had a very bright future ahead of him.

His golf achievements include a scoring average over the past two seasons of 37.5 for every nine holes of golf he plays, three appearances on the Junior National Tour and a junior club championship win at Presidents Golf Course in 2006, but his impressive credentials extend into the classroom as well.

McAloon is in the top 10% of his class, he is a certified Peer Mediator, an Academic Decathlon Team member, vice-president of the band, and an accomplished musician. He is applying to schools like Georgetown, New York University, UConn and Brown, not to mention schools like Army and Skidmore, who have been actively recruiting him to come to their school and play golf.

As any golfer out there knows, the game requires you to work hard and to practice diligently, and that is what McAloon has been doing ever since the first grade.

"My grandfather, when I was in the 1st grade, gave me a couple of clubs and a putter." McAloon said recently during a conversation at Presidents. "My dad and I used to go every Sunday to the local par-3 courses and practice and when I was in the 6th grade we got a membership at Furnace Brook. I would go everyday after school with a friend and play, and then we would play every weekend, and I guess it kind of just took off from there."

McAloon's game has progressed to the point where he consistently shoots in the high 70s to low 80s in high school and junior club tournaments, and this year he helped lead the North Quincy Red Raiders to 13-3 overall record and a 7-1 record in the Atlantic Coast League North Division. The team's 7-1 record in league play was good enough to earn them a spot as co-champions with Marshfield High School, and a first place finish in the league for the third consecutive year. McAloon's game also helped North to a seventh place finish in the South Sectionals at Glen Ellen Country Club in Millis, MA.

McAloon's biggest strength on the golf course is not his driving, although that is solid, but instead, it is his steady play in the short game that has enabled him to be so successful.

ROB McALOON, co-captain of the North Quincy golf team, is on top of his game both on the course and in the classroom.

"What kind of holds me back is that I don't drive the ball very far," McAloon said. "But I do hit it about 250 yards, down the middle, and I have a good short game and once I get on the green putting for birdie, I am going to make it."

His strong play has earned McAloon invitations to play in three Junior National events over the last couple of years. McAloon participated in the 2005 Newport National tournament, the U.S. Challenge Cup in Providence and the Wake Forest Showcase event down in North Carolina, but even with all of his achievements on the greens, McAloon is focused more on school and what lies ahead for him in the future.

"Golf is always something that allowed me to forget about things and have fun," McAloon said. "It is something that I enjoy and I would like to take it to the next level, but when it comes to college I am looking mostly at academics and what is best for my future and if I can go to a good school and walk on to the golf team that would just be a bonus."

With his strong academic and extracurricular background and his leadership on the course and off, McAloon is going to be a star in the years to come.

"Golf is the one sport that allows young men and women to find out who they are and develop as a person," Red Raider head coach Rick Hutchins said. "And this applies to Rob. The best thing I can say about Rob is that he is someone I would like to walk 18 holes with."

SCOTT DEWARE

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

To be able to say "Mine has been a helpful life," is probably the most satisfying statement anyone can make. And so many people are able to say just that. There are so many ways to be helpful, one to another. One does not have to be rich and donate large sums to worthy causes. Nor does one have to be poor from a life of unselfish service. Helpfulness knows no social class nor recognizes no religious distinctions. Helpfulness is simply an opening of the heart to the needs of others, and doing the little things that mean so much.

Have you ever been in trouble and had a person say to you in a helpful, considerate and friendly voice say, "I'll do my best for your, right away." those words, that mean care by someone, roll away the dark clouds and let the sunshine in. . .

Think about how much nicer life would be if more people would show more kindness, more consideration, more friendliness to each other. . .

Yes, a little more honest friendliness; a little more consideration; a little more kindness will, in general, make every one's day go a little bit better.

We are always pleased to hear from you about your comments concerning the thoughts you read here. . .

God called you home
A part of us went with you
You did not go alone
They say time heals all sorrow
And helps us to forget
But time so far has only proved
How much we miss you yet
Although we're not together now
We're really not apart
For in our thoughts and memories
You are always in our hearts.

Quincy UPS Store Teams With Toys For Tots

The Quincy UPS Store at 550 Adams St. has teamed up with the Marine Toys for Tots Foundation to help spread some holiday cheer for children.

Now through Dec. 23, the Quincy UPS Store is offering customers the opportunity to purchase Toys for Tots donation cards for $1 each. All proceeds support local Toys for Tots efforts.

The UPS Store is raising money for Toys for Tots because, with many Marines deployed around the world, it's logistically easier for Toys for Tots to reach more children by purchasing toys at deep discounts through partner companies. In addition to fundraising efforts, the UPS Store locations are collecting new, unwrapped toys, providing an additional opportunity for the community to help local children this holiday season.

"It is rewarding to know our efforts brought a smile to a local child's face through the gift of a toy," said Tom Bagley, owner of the Quincy UPS Store.

Oh, show me herin that you are my Mother. Oh, Mary, conceived without sin, pray for us who have recourse to thee (3X). Holy Mother, I place this cause in your hands (3X). Holy Spirit, you who solve all problems, light roads so that I can attain my goal. Vapor Source In House Explosion Still A Mystery to have them inspected."

Pettinelli said that the fire department had gone door to door checking on residents to ensure their protection following the explosion. He said that the Water Department tested surrounding areas every four hours following the explosion for volatile gases.

MWRA reportedly tested manholes on Charlesmount Avenue and Martensen Street, and determined a higher than usual concentration of "BTEX" compounds, (an explosive substance), but other results were considered normal.

The preliminary MWRA reports determined that there were no permitted "industries" connected to the Craig Street sewer system, and the MWRA team surveyed local gas stations, auto repair facilities and dry cleaners as a possible source.

MassDEP reports yielded similar results. They could identify chemicals in surrounding sewage, but investigative and testing efforts could not conclusively disclosed the source of the vapors that caused the explosion.

Though MassDEP reports listed several chemicals in the surrounding sewage system, but the volatile organic compounds (VOC's) were considered low, and were reportedly consistent with normal levels in sanitary sewage.

MassDEP reports concluded that if the volatile solvents weren't from within the home, then they may have migrated from the sanitary sewer system.

The reports suggested that a volatile, lighter-than-water liquid material may have traveled downstream from an undisclosed source, floating above the sewage. The reports said the material may have let off a gas which would have been dispensed intermittently into overlying spaces within the pipe.

The report suggests that a manhole on Martensen Street may have collected dense sewage material, allowing no space for the volatile liquid to continue floating above it on the way downstream, and resulted in the accumulation of volatile liquid and vapors, it said.

The MassDEP report suggested the monitoring of manholes and further reviews by MWRA. MassDEP also suggested reminding the public to maintain that their sewage and plumbing systems are kept to code.

Police reports from the explosion also gave inconclusive source details, but Trooper Michael Peters, of the Fire and Explosion Investigation Section, concluded that the explosion was accidental and caused by the ignition of vapors that had accumulated in the cellar through dry waste traps in the cellar bathroom, and the floor drain the laundry room.

City Council President Douglas Gutro agreed that the June 30 reports should have been circulated sooner.

"Councillor Raymondi has every right to be frustrated," he said, "(the reports) should have been sent to the City Council."

Under Raymondi's suggestion, investigations of the Craig Street explosion are to remain ongoing.

Sheriff Bellotti Receives AMVETS Service Award

The American Veterans (AMVETS) of Massachusetts recently honored Norfolk County Sheriff Michael G. Bellotti with the Legislative Pilgrim Award for exceptional service to the people of the Commonwealth.

"It's a great privilege to receive this award," Sheriff Bellotti said. "I strongly support our veterans and those who continue to serve our country. To receive a special award from the AMVETS means a great deal to me."

Sheriff Bellotti said that many of his own officers and supervisors at the Correctional Center in Dedham are veterans and reservists from all branches of the U.S. Military.

"Our veterans span four decades of service from Vietnam to our current efforts in Iraq and Afghanistan," the Sheriff said. "I'm proud of each and every one of them."

In addition to the Legislative Award, the Massachusetts AMVETS hand out their annual Pilgrim Awards in other categories, including

MICHAEL BELLOTTI

Public Service, Child Welfare, Community Service and others.

The awards are given to deserving people in their fields who through their own service have made a difference in the lives of the citizens of Massachusetts.

AMVETS is one of America's foremost veterans service organizations. Founded in 1944, there are more than 1,400 AMVETS posts nationwide with approximately 180,000 members.

AMVETS has a proud history of assisting veterans and sponsoring community programs such as blood drives, scholarships, youth leadership, and drug and alcohol awareness.

"To be recognized by a group that does so much good in the community is a real honor," Sheriff Bellotti said. "In the spirit of AMVETS' commitment to improving our quality of life, I have made it one of my goals as sheriff to reach out to the citizens of Norfolk County with effective programs for veterans, senior citizens and youth."

The Sheriff's Community Service Program for many years has provided free labor for renovation projects at veteran organizations such as local American Legion posts and others.

The Sheriff's Office also provides public safety services for seniors, such as the RUOK Program and Project Lifesaver. Additionally, Sheriff Bellotti offers peer pressure and substance abuse prevention education for Norfolk County youth.

For more information, contact the Sheriff's Office at 781-329-3705.

Seeks Council Approval

Phelan Proposes $1 Million Transfer To Help Tax Rate

Mayor William Phelan proposed a $1 million transfer from the city's Stabilization account to keep the Fiscal Year 2007 taxes down.

The measure was introduced to the City Council Monday evening.

Phelan has further pledged to transfer 50 percent of the city's Free Cash Reserve in to the Stabilization account once it is certified in the coming weeks to ensure that taxpayers are protected from future spikes in property tax bills.

"We are creating a long-term plan to help protect Quincy's taxpayers," said Phelan. "We are budgeting wisely, spending conservatively, and being aggressive in the collection of revenue to ensure that our taxpayers are not impacted by market factors beyond our control such as real estate values and cuts in state aid. The parts of the equation that we can't control, we will control in the interest of our taxpayers."

If the transfer is approved, the average single-family tax bill in Quincy will increase approximately two percent. The voters of Quincy also approved an additional one percent surcharge on this year's bill for the Community Preservation Act.

Phelan anticipates that the Excess Levy Capacity, the difference between what the state allows Quincy to raise through taxes and what is actually being paid by taxpayers, is going to be &8,272,561. This is the largest Excess Levy Capacity in the city's history.

"Excess Levy Capacity represents our understanding that we don't need to tax our taxpayers to the limit," said Phelan. "Just because state law says we can raise more taxes, it doesn't mean that we will. We are saving our taxpayers more than $8.2 million this year through sound fiscal planning. I will continue to work with the City Council and my administration in the years to come to ensure the long-term fiscal health of our city."

Phelan also indicated a hopefulness that the state's Local Aid figures will increase under the Patrick Administration.

"Deval Patrick promised during his campaign that he would work to restore Local Aid to cities and towns," added Phelan. "He expressed an understanding that was lacking from the Romney Administration that the State Aid cuts were directly tied to local property tax increases. We receive close to $4 million less from the state every year than we did in 2002. The additional state aid is a vital measure in protecting our taxpayers."

If the transfer is approved, the average single-family tax bill would have increased one percent in Fiscal Year 2005, zero percent in Fiscal Year 2006, and two percent in Fiscal Year 2007.

Phelan also pointed to an increased bond rating as further evidence that the city of Quincy is moving in the right financial direction.

Monahan New Building Inspector

Monahan has over 15 years of experience in the building and construction industry. He was chosen over a number of other candidates for his knowledge and expertise, but also his eagerness to be helpful and fair to the public.

Mike understands that despite our enforcement role of building and zoning regulations, our department is here to help and serve the residents of Quincy," said Director of Inspectional Services Jay Duca. "I believe he will be a great addition to the department."

Monahan resides in Wollaston with his wife Julie, and daughters Shayley and Michaela.

"I'm very excited and proud to be able to serve the residents of Quincy," Monahan said.

City Council Briefs For Nov. 13 Meeting

The City Council took the following actions at the Nov. 13 meeting:

• The unanimous acceptance of a $500 appropriation to Quincy Citizens Police Academy from Ward Three Stop & Shop Mitigation Fund.

• The unanimous acceptance of a gift of $1,500 to D.A.R.E. from CVS Corporation.

• The unanimous acceptance of a gift of $25 to Crime Prevention from Gershon Saxe and Elizabeth Scanlan.

Looking for an investment that's guaranteed to grow?

What's the main problem with stock market investments and mutual funds? Simple – you just can't be sure that your money will grow. In fact, you can't even be sure that your principal won't shrink. And while no one would deny that market-based investments should at least be considered as part of a diversified investment plan, sometimes you have money you don't want to put at risk in any way. Maybe it's money you're going to need soon. Maybe it's your IRA or Roth IRA. Maybe you're a conservative saver who simply wants investments that are guaranteed to grow. We understand. Which is why we don't sell stocks. We don't sell mutual funds. We don't sell annuities. Colonial Federal is a community bank providing competitive-rate options for today's conservative saver. If you're looking for a safe investment that's 100% guaranteed to grow, come see us. JFK And The Secret Service

It's been 46 years now and it still bothers me.

Was the Secret Service doing its job the night of Nov. 10, 1960 in Hyannisport? And, in Dallas Nov. 22, 1963 three years later?

That night in Hyannisport I was standing in the living room of former Ambassador Joseph Kennedy's home in the Kennedy compound waiting for the President elect to appear.

Where were the Secret Service I asked myself. I wasn't even supposed to be there but no one seemed to notice or care.

Word was that some 18 Secret Service agents had moved in swiftly to protect the next President of the United States after Richard Nixon conceded in one of the closest Presidential elections.

But if they were around the house-inside or outside-that night, they were invisible. They weren't checking on me, or anyone else.

I've written this story before. But on the 43rd anniversary of JFK's assassination, I think it's worth another look.

Let's first go back to Nov. 10, 1960.

I was a Boston Traveler reporter covering the election with press headquarters set up in the National Guard Armory in Hyannis. Working with me were Dave Farrell of the Boston Herald and photographer Frank Kelly who was taking photos for both papers.

We waited at the armory election night checking the returns in the see-saw battle until Nixon conceded in the early morning.

The President-elect we were informed would hold a press conference in the armory later that morning. Out of it came such headlines as:

"Hoover, Dulles To Stay", "Ike Asks JFK Meet Him Soon On Takeover"... "Kennedy Says Election Repudiates No One."

The whole Kennedy clan seemed to be there: Jacqueline, 31, radiant and expecting John John in a few weeks; parents Joseph and Rose Kennedy; brothers Bobby with wife Ethel, Ted, sisters Eunice Shriver, Jean Smith, Pat Lawford and in the background, brother in-law Peter Lawford.

Kennedy made a brief victory statement that was a hint of the theme of his coming Inaugural Address:

"The election may have been a close one. But I think there is a general agreement by all of our citizens that the supreme national effort will be needed in the years ahead to move this country safely through the 1960's."

(Ask not what your country can do for you. Ask what you can do for your country)

Word was passed that Kennedy would host an informal, off-the record party for the press in his father's home that night. It was for the press that had traveled with him during the campaign.

But three party crashers-myself, Farrell and Kelly, were there, too. We agreed, it was too good to miss and weren't going to miss it.

The bus to take the press into the Kennedy compound was parked outside the armory. We stepped aboard. No one questioned us. No one asked to see our press credentials. We rode inside the compound and walked into Joseph Kennedy's home. No one checked on us.

Maybe anyone could have gotten aboard that bus that night. Maybe even someone like Lee Harvey Oswald.

None of the Kennedy's were in sight when we arrived so the invited members of the press and the three party crashers started browsing around.

On the wall were framed letters written by President Franklin Delano Roosevelt to Ambassador Kennedy.

On the fireplace mantle was a model of the USS Joseph P. Kennedy, Jr. the destroyer named after the oldest son who was lost on a dangerous World War II mission he volunteered for. He had planned a political career.

The living room connected with the dining room. On the dining room table was a punch bowl and cups. Someone said to help ourselves. So we did and wandered back into the living room.

I was returning my cup and was the only one in the dining room when a screen door swung open and in stepped John F. Kennedy.

He walked over to me and we shook hands. "Congratulations Mr. President," I said. It wasn't correct protocol. He was still Senator Kennedy. But he seemed to like being called "Mr. President" and smiled.

We were alone for a few moments. The other reporters spotted him and we were soon surrounded.

Kennedy looked tired from the strain of the campaign and the agonizing hours when the election seemed like it could go either way.

One reporter asked him what he thought made the final difference.

"He (Nixon) stayed around too long in the South," Kennedy replied. (Stayed wasn't the exact word he used.)

Soon other members of the family joined us: Jacqueline, Rose, Bobby, Ted, sisters Eunice, Jean and Pat, brother in-law Sargent Shriver. Joseph Kennedy was no where to be seen.

Kennedy reveled he was flying to Palm Springs, Fla. the next day to relax and "maybe play a little golf."

"But don't mention golf," he laughed.

He didn't want the country to think it was getting another golfer for President after Dwight Eisenhower.

I got to chatting with Rose Kennedy who wanted to know about Quincy born Presidents John and John Quincy Adams and Abigail. I told her as much as I knew and said I would ask Quincy historian William Edars to send her more information. (He did).

Someone produced a number of Christmas gift wrapped bottles of bourbon, whiskey and scotch from under a cabinet in the kitchen.

And, then a sight you couldn't forget: the next President of the United States pouring drinks for the press.

It was a night to fondly remember and cherish.

The next day, the Kennedy family flew out of Barnstable Airport aboard the family plane "Caroline" named for daughter Caroline who looked like a young Shirley Temple back then.

I got one more chance to talk with Kennedy before the plane took off.

"Good luck, Mr. President," I said to him again.

"Thank you," he replied, breaking into a grin at being called "Mr. President" for the second time.

I later told Farrell and Kelly that someday I would write the story about how we crashed the Kennedy compound. But not until Kennedy was out of office. Which I figured would be eight years because he surely would be re-elected to a second term.

It still bothers me each anniversary of his death as I remember telling them:

"I'm going to write how we got by the Secret Service that night."

And, kiddingly added:

"And I'm going to write about how I could have shot the President of the United States over the punch bowl in the dining room of his father's house."

But who could have imagined back then the tragedy that waited in Dallas?

I just can't help wondering about the Secret Service that night in Hyannisport. And, that day in Dallas.

It has nagged at me all these years.

And, always will.

Houghs Neck Environmentalist Lectures On Alternative Energy

Houghs Neck environmentalist P. J. Foley returned to his alma mater, Quincy High School, the other day to share with students his knowledge of alternative energy sources in Quincy.

He held a 90-minute seminar for a Contemporary Issues class of seniors that has been studying the problems and solutions related to the topic of global warming.

Among other things, the students learned about a year-long project to collect wind data from three locations in Quincy, to be measured in computer chips and sent to UMass-Amherst.

It may lead to Quincy one day generating electricity from wind turbines.

"Mr. Foley did a great job instructing my students about complex choices for alternative energy sources here in Quincy," said Joan Innis, the teacher.

"His enthusiasm spread around my classroom and his presentation was a very positive experience for all."

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A RARE real photo postcard showing the famous German airship Hindenburg cruising over Quincy Square on October 9, 1936. On that day, the huge zeppelin, known as the pride of the Third Reich, was carrying 81 VIP's on what was called a "Billion Dollar Party" that began early in the morning at the Lakehurst Naval Air Station in New Jersey. The special 10-hour excursion cruised over all the major cities in New England and then over New York City on its return. Three airplanes filled with members of the press accompanied the ship as it flew over Quincy. Quincy photographer Alan Pierce, who had his studio in the Adams Building on the lower left of this view, took this photo just after noon from the belfry of the First Parish Church. In May of the next year, this hydrogen-filled zeppelin was arriving at Lakehurst from Europe when it was destroyed in a burst of flames on its approach for docking. The German captain of the Hindenburg, who was flying over Quincy in the above view, was killed in the explosion along with 34 of the 97 crew-members and passengers. This horrific accident marked the end of the commercial use of airships. To contact Tom Galvin, e-mail tmgalvin@verizon.net.

Thanks For The Memories, Squantum Storms Football Team

It's been a long four years, but an enjoyable four years watching the Squantum Storms Youth Football team finally get the recognition they deserve.

The Squantum Storms football team lost in the semifinals to the Quincy Elks in a game where they left their heart and soul on the field. For players taht played this game for the past four years, like Kyle McKay, Mike Morrison Jr and Bobby Lawless and the likes of Mike Curran, Kerek Graham, Mike Feeney and the others who helped the Storms to a division title and their best finish in 10 years or more.

The coaching of Hugh McPhee and Mike Killilea helped solidify the hard work and team effort to make this years team a special one.

The players of this year's team will be missed but not forgotten, as a team that never gave up. We'll be looking forward to their endeavors for the next four years in high school sports.

Thanks for the memories.

In Praise Of James Baker

The Democratic victories Nov. 7 elevated James Baker and Lee Hamilton to the center of the diplomatic stage.

James Baker and the Iraq Study Group are expected to give advice to President Bush as to how best to solve the problem of Iraq and how to stop unnecessary blood shed.

Baker already told ABC television some weeks ago, that: "In my view, it is appeasement to talk to your enemies." That approach would reject all other options circulating around Washington, D.C.

Among our adversaries it is essential to talk to Osama bin Laden, Saddam Hussein and the President of Syria as well as the President of Iran. Three of the above mentioned leaders have already offered to talk to President Bush, but all three were rejected by him.

James Baker deserves the highest praise in every language on earth for his advice. Only peace would send all soldiers back to their families.

Comedian-Hypnotist At Quincy College Fundraiser

The Gamma Beta Phi Honor and Service Society at Quincy College will host Gary Conrad, a nationally-acclaimed comedian/hypnotist, Tuesday, Nov. 28 from 7:30 to 9 p.m. at the Quincy High School Auditorium.

The event is part of the honor and service society's year-long scholarship fundraiser. Proceeds from the event will be used for scholarships for outstanding student leaders at Quincy High School, North Quincy High School, and for members of Gamma Beta Phi at Quincy College.

Joseph Bradley, executive director of College and Community Development, noted "The Gamma Beta Phi Society's motto is 'helping people help others,' and who better to help than outstanding high school leaders with academic potential."

Conrad has entertained audiences from Alaska to New York with his unique brand of hypnosis.

"We want people in the audience to be jealous of the people on stage," he said. Conrad's foray into hypnotism began in the 1980's. After stints as both a stockbroker and shipping extraordinaire in New York City, he viewed hypnosis as a way to better train for bodybuilding competitions. Conrad's studies included time in England, and ultimately led to employment in a clinical setting before putting an act on the road. Since then, he has performed over 400 shows a year.

Conrad's reputation as a skillful and entertaining hypnotist has led to numerous appearances on radio and television stations, late night talk shows including Saturday Night Live, and top-ranked comedy clubs across the nation.

Tickets for the show are $10 each and may be purchased by calling Janet McKeen in the Office of College and Community Development at 617-984-1647 or in-person at Temple Hall, 102, 27 Temple St. Tickets will also be sold at the door if available.

Marie's Kitchen

BY MARIE D'OLIMPIO

Nancy's Spicy Pumpkin Cake

It was our granddaughter's 9th birthday and since she plays the guitar, her mother Nancy made a cake shaped like a guitar.

It had a white cream cheese frosting and chocolate printing. We all thought it was either a chocolate or white cake.

As it was being sliced, we were wrong on both counts. It turned out to be a spicy pumpkin cake and one I will make for Thanksgiving Day.

SPICY PUMPKIN CAKE

1 cup sugar
1 cup vegetable oil
16 oz. pumpkin (unsweetened)
2 cups flour
2 teaspoons baking powder
2 teaspoons cloves
2 teaspoons nutmeg
2 teaspoons allspice
1 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon baking soda

Mix the egg, sugar, oil and pumpkin together. Add the dry ingredients and beat for 2 minutes. Bake in a 350-degree oven for 35 minutes or until toothpick or knife comes out clean.

CREAM CHEESE FROSTING

1 ounce package cream cheese
5 tablespoons butter
1 teaspoon vanilla
2 cups powdered sugar

Mix the cream cheese and butter until blended. Add the vanilla and the powdered sugar gradually until well-blended.

P.S. For extra stuffing place in lightly sprayed muffin tins and bake in a 350-degree oven for 25 minutes.

HAPPY THANKSGIVING!

Bay State Services Offers Free Counseling To Those With Alcoholism

The Family Project at Bay State Community Services in Quincy offers free counseling for individuals with alcoholism and their family members.

The Family Project is a research study to find out whether adding family counseling to one-on-one recovery counseling leads to more sobriety for individuals with alcohol problems. The study is being conducted by researchers and clinicians at Harvard Medical School and Bay State Community Services. Counseling is provided free of charge by licensed, masters-level therapists.

To see whether adding family counseling to one-on-one counseling increases sobriety rates, half of the participants in the program are randomly assigned to receive free family counseling and one-on-one counseling. The other half are randomly assigned to receive free one-on-one counseling, but do not receive family counseling. Treatment includes 24 counseling sessions over 12 weeks for all participants in the study.

Daurice Cox, PsyD, Director of Clinical Services at Bay State Community Services, said she is pleased that Bay State can offer this opportunity to patients and their family members. The Family Projects, she said, is an innovative treatment offered to individuals with alcoholism by seeing whether family counseling might be an important form of treatment.

In addition to receiving treatment free of charge, participants in the Family Project complete interviews before and after treatment and at three and six months later. These interviews are meant to document improvement in sobriety and in family relationships.

For more information, call the Family Project At Bay State Community Services at 617-694-2602.

Stop & Shop Launches 'Food For Friends' Drive

The Quincy-based Stop & Shop Supermarket Company has launched its 17th annual "Food for Friends" program to raise over $1 million for more than 300 local hunger relief organizations throughout the Northeast.

As part of the campaign, which runs through Thursday, Nov. 30, all Stop & Shop stores will sell paper turkeys at checkout for $1 each. The turkeys can be personalized by each customer and will be displayed throughout the store. One hundred percent of the funds raised will be donated to the local hunger relief organizations.

"Stop & Shop customers have always come to aid those in need," said Bill Holmes, EVP of Operations for Stop & Shop. "It's very rewarding and humbling for us to do our part in supporting hunger relief through this annual tradition.

"The statistics on hunger in our country are staggering. More than 20 million Americans can't afford enough food to meet their basic needs. More shocking is that 13 million of these are children. This is unacceptable, and as one of the largest grocers in the Northeast, it's our responsibility to do something to food those who need our help," he said.

Each Stop & Shop store "adopts" a local food pantry for the Food for Friends program, donating 60 percent of the funds raised at the store, including a $500 a company match, to the pantry.

2,500 Attend City Public Safety Fair

An estimate of more than 2,500 people attended the second annual City of Quincy Public Safety Fair Saturday at the Park and Recreation Complex.

More than 700 flu shots were administered by the Quincy Health Department to Quincy residents.

Also featured at the Safety Fair was a live mock decontamination drill led by the Quincy Fire Department with multiple first-responder agencies participating.

Attendees received a number of helpful informational packages on how to prepare the family and home for any kind of emergency.

Participating in the public safety fair were the Quincy Fire Department, the Quincy Police Department, Quincy Health Department, Quincy Public Works Department, Quincy Emergency Management Agency, Norfolk County Sheriff's Office, Keyspan, National Grid, State Street Corporation, the American Red Cross, and the Salvation Army.

"I want to thank all of our participants for their work in putting together a great event," said Mayor William Phelan. "there was a wide range of helpful information. The children loved seeing the fire engines and emergency vehicles, and the flu shots helped hundreds of people. I hope to continue our success next year."

The event was started by Phelan last year after hearing from numerous residents concerned about emergency planning in the aftermath of Hurricane Katrina.

Squantum School Raises $678 For UNICEF

The Squantum School fifth grade class recently collected $678 for UNICEF, an organization that supports developing countries.

Participating students used orange UNICEF boxes to collect donations for the "Kids Helping Kids" program while tick-or-treating for Halloween. Preceding the collection, fifth grade students made up skits and presented them to classrooms to raise awareness for their cause. Follow-up activities included math calculations based on how UNICEF spends funding.

"Not only did kids learn something about community service, but the teacher also tied in lessons that supported our math and writing goals, because they did a tremendous amount of work." said Donald Houghton, principal of Squantum School.

Back From Iraq

Rev. Harding Says 'Give Troops The Credit'

THE CROWD of nearly 300 parishioners, family members, friends, city and state officials attended the "Welcome Home Reception" for Rev. William Harding at the Bethany Congregational Church Social Hall.

"The most important thing though is to remember our soldiers," said Rev. William Harding, pastor of Bethany Congregational Church.

Although he was being honored, Rev. Harding, credited the troops at his "Welcome Home Reception," Sunday morning at the church.

The reception celebrated his recent return from a 14 month stay in Iraq as an Army Chaplain. The Bethany Congregational Church Social Hall was packed with nearly 300 parishioners, family members, friends, city and state officials who attended the event to welcome Rev. Harding home.

REV. WILLIAM HARDING, pastor of Bethany Congregational Church, spoke of his 14 month stay in Iraq, where he served as an Army Chaplain. Rev. Harding received a City Council citation, a Certificate of Recognition from Mayor William Phelan, and a certificate of Congressional Recognition from Congressman William Delahunt.

While in Iraq, Rev. Harding visited orphans and families. He conducted Sunday services at Scania Chapel in Iraq, writing 70 sermons and leading 60 Bible studies, according to a narrative from his superior. The narrative also credited him for briefing more than 1,200 soldiers during his stay.

Rev. Harding also served in Kosovo in 2001. He served as Pastor of Bethany Church for over 10 years, and as the ministry in several Congregational churches, including Braintree.

Rev. Harding, said "All of these individuals are giving so much in Iraq and Afghanistan. They are in harm's way. You would be proud of each and every one of them in what they do and how they do it, with the heat, rain and mud, the way that they reach out to children.

"The people in Iraq are just like you and me," he said. "They love their families as we love our families. The most difficult thing is to see the separation and the problems they face. We see the individual soldiers there reaching out helping them get their freedom back, and they do want freedom. Talking through interpreters, I learned that they want their freedoms.

"We may only tell you the bad things, but I'm here to tell you some of the good things! I want to tell you about the children and the adults that love their families just like we do. They love God, their God, and their Muslim faith. They are committed to one another.

"I got to know a lot of soldiers and their families back home. There were difficult days when soldiers were killed. These soldiers did wonderful things. Sharing their love and devotion to their families and friends, but also to the people in Iraq.

"One of the joys that I had was the church service. We had church every day of the week. The chapel was open seven days a week, 24 hours a day. We had free room in the chapel, everything there was free. Many of the items were donated from Quincy and from it's churches... from Bethany!

"Their biggest concern was for their families back home. My biggest concern was dealing with their worry about you here at home. I just want to thank you all, my wife Carol, for your support... I've only been home a few days, but I haven't really grasped all that I've been going through, but I do know that you were supporting me and all other soldiers. This city of Quincy is just fantastic," said Rev. Harding.

Mayor William Phelan presented Rev. Harding with a Certificate of Recognition, and said "your dedication and service is matched only in our appreciation and gratitude for your willingness to place yourself in harm's way in the service of others. Your call to duty and to the Lord and to our country is admired by your community."

Ward 1 Councillor Leo Kelly read a citation on behalf of the City Council recognizing Rev. Harding for "a life-time of devotion, kindness and compassion."

"It is a privilege to honor you today and welcome you back and thank you not only for your sacrifices in Iraq, but what you have done for us here in the city of Quincy," said Kelly.

"We thank God for (Rev. Harding) returning back to us and his family," said Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymondi. "His leaving us was a little different. He didn't go on vacation, take a sabbatical or leave, no trips for professional development. He put himself in harm's way. It's a day to remember and reflect."

"Thank you for your service, not only to the city but to our nation," said Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin. "I believe Rev. Harding has continued a long tradition of several hundreds of years of stepping to the forefront, and helping to preserve and protect the freedoms that we are able to enjoy here in Quincy and Across the nation. I can think of no greater privilege as an elected official than welcoming you back and thanking God for your good health."

"Truly, here is a person that has performed both jobs extremely wall, (serving God and country). I am happy to welcome him back, I look forward to working with (him) in the community, said state Senator Michael Morrissey.

Rev. Harding received a certificate of Congressional Recognition from Congressman William Delahunt, thanking Rev. Harding for his "courage and dedication as a member of the United States Army." Senator Edward Kennedy also sent a letter of thanks and welcome.

Winn Bettinson, master of ceremonies, read a poem thanking the Lord for keeping Rev. Harding safe.

"We are very proud of you... You went over (to Iraq) knowing what a dangerous situation it was. You showed great courage doing that," said Rev. Gary Smothers, associate pastor of Bethany Congregational Church. "You showed great commitment to the troops you ministered to."

Bishop Lincoln Wright, Mount Calvery Worship and Praise Ministry, also thanked the Lord for his safe return, and welcomed Rev. Harding on behalf of New Mount Calvery.

"We have never for a moment at New Mount Calvery, ceased longing for the sight of your presence among us once again," said Bishop Wright. "Today I rejoice not only because you came back to us safely, but I rejoice in the fact that I know you. A person of good character, integrity, and one who has served well on the battlefields of Iraq representing the God in whom we trust."

Also speaking was Gean McCarty, past president of Quincy Kiwanis Club.

Music was provided by the Bethany Church Choir, the New Mount Calvery Worship, and Praise Ministry.

Rev. Harding has also worked with the South Shore Congregational Youth Conference to organize a Christian summer camp that has hosted thousands of junior and senior high school students from the Greater Quincy area. He also conducts nursing home services and works in many programs helping seniors and those in need in the community.

Rev. Harding is helping to send children with critical wounds to American hospitals for care. To donate to the project, visit www.iraqichildrensproject.com

Delahunt To Host Adoption Forum Nov. 28

Congressman Bill Delahunt will host a forum Tuesday, Nov. 28, that will focus on the nation's adoption policies and practices.

The forum will take place from 5:30 to 9 p.m. at the John F. Kennedy Library and Museum, Colombia Point, Boston. Refreshments will be served from 5:30 to 6:30 p.m. Admission is free, but attendees are asked to RSVP to the Adoption Institute by calling 617-332-8944.

Topics will include: examining the historic shifts in all types of adoptions, impact of international and public adoptions on the American Family emerging policies and practices, controversies and issues, and examination of radical changes in domestic infant adoption and their implications.

WILLIAM DELAHUNT

As a member of the House International Relations Committee, Delahunt has long supported changes to existing federal law that would make it easier for families to adopt children from overseas. The Congressman is an adoptive parent himself; his youngest daughter came to the U.S. from Vietnam as part of Operation Baby Lift.

Delahunt authorized the Child Citizenship Act that was signed into law by President Bill Clinton. Under the law, foreign-born adoptees are automatically granted U.S. citizenship upon completion of the adoption. One the day the statute went into effect, more than 250,000 children became U.S. citizens.

Flooding Relief Seen For Carlisle Street

By MIKAELA SLANEY

The City Council recently accepted an appropriation of $583,735.60 for the Carlisle Street Sewer Improvement Project.

The project will reportedly eliminate chronic sewage backup in approximately 20 Carlisle Street basements, with the construction of a sewer pump station.

Public Works Commissioner Stephen O'Donnell requested the appropriation in a recent letter to Mayor William Phelan.

O'Donnell said in the letter that the pump station will be one of the first in the city to be equipped with an emergency generator and backup power. The letter also promised a new sewer main, house services and connections, and paving for sidewalks.

According to the letter, RJV Construction Corporation is set to handle the project.

Money for the project will be transferred from the Sewer Rehabilitation Fund.

"We start in the spring," O'Donnell told the City Council. "Hopefully by a year from now, we'll be out of there."

Kevin Ryan Featured In Wal-Mart Cookbook

Just in time for the Thanksgiving feast, resident Kevin C. Ryan's recipe for oatmeal cookies made the 2007 Wal-Mart Family Cookbook, now available at Wal-Mart stores.

Ryan's full-page recipe is featured on page 87. Each recipe is accompanied by a full-color photograph of the prepared dish, and a brief story about why it is special to the winning associate.

A panel of professional home economists selected recipes from thousands of Wal-Mart associates across the country to create a collection of "family-tested favorites." Each recipe was reportedly tested and tasted by a professional panel of judges.

Private Funeral Services For Sean L. Barry Former Quincy College President

SEAN BARRY

Funeral services for Sean L. Barry, 42, former president of Quincy College, who died suddenly in his home Nov. 16 will be private.

An autopsy performed last Friday found no indications of trauma or other signs of foul play, David Traub of Norfolk County William Keating's office said.

The cause and manner of death were listed as undetermined pending the outcome of toxicology and possibly other medical tests, Traub said.

Born in Boston, Mr. Barry was raised in Quincy where he was a lifelong resident. He graduated from St. Ann's School in Wollaston and then Don Bosco Technical High School in Boston.

He continued his education at Ohio Wesleyan University, graduating in 1989. He then began graduate studies at American University and was awarded a Master of Arts in Journalism in 1991.

Following receipt of his master's degree, Mr. Barry embarked on a career in education by accepting a position at Quincy College. He taught and served as the college's director of Institutional Advancement before being appointed president of the school in 2000.

Mr. Barry was the youngest college president in New England, modernized college operations with innovations in student services, a return to community relations and campaign to enhance the image of Quincy College. His leadership resulted in record enrollments and new financial stability for which he was recognized by his peers as an expert in community college student recruitment and retention.

Mr. Barry continued to teach classes throughout his tenure as president to maintain connections with countless students. Whether it was speaking at commencement, helping students select courses or serving hot dogs on opening day of his beloved Red Sox, Mr. Barry thrived on his personal contributions and the lasting traditions he introduced at Quincy College.

Mr. Barry also proved his commitment to education in the political arena when he ran for School Committee. He was elected in 1993 and was re-elected to serve on that body before retiring from public life to focus on the success of the college.

Mr. Barry was the son of Jeanne F. (Luizzi) Barry and the late Paul J. Barry. In addition to his mother, he is survived by two brothers, Paul J. Barry, Jr. of Alexandria, VA., and Christopher A. Barry, Sr., of Hingham and a sister Doreen F. Wallace of Oak Hill, VA.

Donations in his memory may be made to the Quincy Crisis Center, 282 Billings Rd. Quincy, MA. 02171.

Funeral arrangements are by the Dennis Sweeney Funeral Home, 74 Elm St., Quincy.

8 Quincy Students Win Conway Halloween Coloring Contest

Eight Quincy elementary school students have $25 to spend at Barnes and Noble Bookstores after winning a Halloween poster-coloring contest sponsored by Jack Conway & Co. Realtors.

Some 133 entries were received from students in all of the Quincy elementary schools throughout the month of October, and Conway agents on Halloween completed judging.

"It was a very difficult contest to judge," said Renee Czajkowski. "All of the entries were excellent, there are some very talented youngsters in our schools."

The posters consisted of various Halloween scenes.

The contest was open to all Quincy schoolchildren ages four through 12. " Initially we were only going to give away three gift cards, but due to the large number of entries, we decided to award children in each age category," said office manager Diane Furness.

The Quincy Schools supported the contest saying it was a great way to promote reading and literacy. The winning posters are on display at the Conway office, 253 Beale Street in Wollaston.

The Jack Conway Quincy office is very active in the community. Earlier this year agents participated in the Quincy Medical Center Walk for Cancer, The August Moon Festival, and the South Quincy Italian Festival. The office is also a regular participant in the annual Quincy Christmas Festival Parade, and has won awards for their parade float many times in the past.

The Jack Conway Co. is celebrating its 50th Anniversary as the largest independently owned real estate company in Massachusetts. There are 45 offices from Boston to the South Shore, South Coast, and Cape Cod. The firm also runs Conway Financial Services, a mortgage company.

Decorating Mistakes To Avoid

(NAPS)- Decorator and HGTV designer Karl Lohnes has a list of the most often-made decorating blunders. Do these seem familiar?

1) Leaving windows for last. Window fashions create pleasing illusions of depth or height, and studies show the quality of natural light in a space affects moods and health. One popular option, Silhouette window shadings, which feature soft fabric vanes between sheer panels, diffuse and soften light and let you direct it up and down.

2) Purchasing new furniture before measuring the room. Spend time in the room, instead of using a presale floor plan or picture. Have the window treatments in place early to protect furnishings from UV rays. One option for large slider windows is a new Cadence MotifSoft Vertical Blinds with the first and only curved, soft-fabric louver.

3) Buying area rugs too small. Area rugs should reveal only 12 to 16 inches of floor. Furniture should ground the rug.

4) Choosing wall colors that are too pale. The larger the room, the more depth a color needs. To enhance the effect, use a matching or complementary window fashion. Silhouette window shadings in fabric from the Matisse Collection, the first fabric with colored vanes, enrich the color impact.

5) Hanging artwork to high. The bottom of the art should be eight to 10 inches above the furniture tops.

6) Highlighting wimpy trims and moldings. Paint trims three inches or smaller the same color as the wall to avoid a "racing stripe effect." You can even cover trim with vertical window fashion, such as Luminette Privacy Sheers, mounted outside the window frame from ceiling to floor.

7) Buying too many small accessories. Hold off on trendy accessories for a year or two and you could save enough for a substantial piece of furniture.

8) Scattering your collectibles. If displaying collectibles in a sunny spot, choose a window fashion that will protect them from panels, Silhouette shadings are among the few that offer generous protection against UV rays while allowing for light and a view.

9) Having more than one focal point. If it's the window, it will visually influence the rest of the room. Duette honeycomb shades with the top-down/bottom-up feature create appealing visual patterns. They soften light while lowering energy bills.

10) Getting it all done in a day. When you buy all the decor in a day, it looks it. It's more fun to "build" the look.

Concessions Greet Homebuyers

(NAPS) When visiting open houses these days, homebuyers may be greeted by something they haven't seen in a very long time: a variety of concessions from the sellers.

Residential real estate has shifted in many areas across the nation from sellers' markets to buyers' markets, so people with "For Sale" signs in front of their homes have had to change their tactics to attract buyers. Rather than simply waiting behind the sign for buyers to knock on the door, many sellers are now offering buyers something besides just the opportunity to purchase their home.

With increased inventory, new-home developers and builders are especially determined to attract buyers any way they can. Many are offering upgrades on finishes, flooring and appliances. One Florida builder even sweetened the deal with an inground swimming pool.

Concessions to buyers, however, aren't limited to bonuses on the home itself. Some sellers are offering unrelated extras, such as travel and merchandise. Concessions are also being worked into the settlement, with prepaid utilities, closing costs, even mortgage payments being laid out on the bargaining table. Some concessions are the deal itself, with builders and developers offering to sell the buyer's existing home or even trade for it.

Finally, sellers are more willing to talk about a good old-fashioned price reduction.

Regardless of the concession itself, the greater lesson for buyers is that they can now ask sellers for things they would have turned a deaf ear to before the market shifted. First-time buyers are at a special advantage, unencumbered by the contingency of selling an existing property to take advantage of today's concession-driven market.

To get the most out of their home purchase, whether negotiating concessions in a buyers' market or negotiating the road hazards through a tough sellers' market, homebuyers can always benefit from working with a real estate professional who will keep their best interests the top priority.

Realtors who have earned the Accredited Buyer's Representative (ABR) designation have taken special training from the Real Estate Buyer's Agent Council (REBAC) to help them guide buyers through a successful home purchase, in any market.

The ABC's Of Finding The Right Mortgage

(NAPS) Home ownership is at an all-time high, yet in a recent survey of U.S. consumers commissioned by the HSBC Center for Consumer Advocacy, 73 percent said they have limited or no knowledge about the mortgage process.

In addition, the majority spend two weeks or less researching options mortgages, the most significant purchase many people make. Here are some things to consider before seeking a mortgage:

Assess credit. Lenders take borrowing records and existing debt into account when offering a mortgage. Ensure credit history is accurate. Obtain credit information. People are entitled to one free credit report per year from each of the three national reporting agencies: Equifax, TransUnion and Experian. Go to www.annualcreditreport.com to request a free report. Review reports and have any errors corrected.

Bolster credit scores. Take the additional step of paying the nominal fee to get credit scores when requesting a credit report. A strong credit score, usually associated with a rating of 700 or above, will help attain more favorable loan terms. Paying attention to credit ratings well in advance of the mortgage process gives time to boost and preserve ratings. Pay bills on time and pay down balances to improve and maintain credit ratings. Aim to keep balances to at least 50 percent or less of available credit.

Consider financial situations. Take a close look at finances and decide if there is enough saved for a down payment, which is typically 10 to 20 percent of the total cost of the home. If there is enough, determine if the rest can be borrowed with a mortgage.

Examine income and debt, two factors lenders will evaluate, along with credit reports and score. As a general rule, no more than 28 percent of income should go toward the total house payment (principal, interest, taxes and insurance). Also, remember to take into account the expenses of running the new home.

For those who haven't saved 10 percent for a downpayment may still have options. Those who can come up with just three percent or even list may be able to find a mortgage. Low and moderate-income consumers may qualify through the Community Reinvestment Act, which requires some banks to offer mortgages to people with incomes below what is normally required. First-time buyers may also be eligible for some breaks.

To research options check the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development website: www.hud.gov.

Discover the best type of mortgage. After Explore various mortgage options to see what's best. Talk to someone who is trusted with financial matters to aid in the process. Mortgage choices may include fixed-rate, adjustable-rate or hybrid mortgages with different terms. There are many factors to decide which mortgage is best.

Research lender options. Dedicate some time here. Finding the right mortgage should be as important as finding the right home. Compile a list of potential mortgage lender or brokers and contact a number of them online or in person to compare the style of mortgage, interest rates, terms and all related costs. Some choose to apply with more than one lender. If that's the case, concentrate on applications within a fairly short time frame, say two weeks, so the multiple requests for credit reports don't hurt the credit score.

Find resources. Discover more about the home ownership process and find other financial educational resources at www.YourMoneyCounts.com.

Does Your Home Smell Stale?

Q. As I prepare our small apartment for winter, I find myself dreading the upcoming months. Every year, our living areas, except for the kitchen, take on an increasingly stale odor that I cannot seem to eradicate until springtime, when I can open all the windows again. Any suggestions? — Katie Y., Minneapolis

A. Small spaces can be difficult to ventilate adequately in the wintertime, so you have to be both disciplined and creative in finding ways to keep the apartment's air fresh even on the coldest days. Clutter and dust are two big culprits in the fresh-air wars, but be sure to check for some other causes of a stale environment.

Rodents — including mice, squirrels and other mammals — tend to burrow into whatever spaces are available to them and build nests, sometimes behind exterior walls, in crawlspaces beneath the home, between floors or inside the attic. While they don't "mess" in their living areas, they aren't nearly as clean as humans, and as winter passes, the funk from these nests can increase and send a scent I fondly call "eau d'hamster cage" wafting through the house. Look for signs of rodent infestation around the building exterior (and interior) and contact the landlord to implement pest-control measures before the snowdrifts build up.

Proper ventilation in the kitchen and bathroom are also important. Bathrooms must have a vent fan installed to carry away steam vapor and reduce humidity; if a fan is not in place or is not operational, contact the landlord. Kitchens should have a hood and vent fan installed above the stove to carry away smoke and some cooking odors. Clean the vent fans in both rooms at least twice a year to make sure they operate efficiently.

Change the filters in forced-air heaters every single month during winter. If you have floor registers, open them and vacuum clean with the extension tool each month.

As I noted above, clutter and dust can really make an environment stale. Dust can also trigger allergic reactions, which makes life that much more miserable. Declutter your apartment, getting rid of items you haven't used or worn in more than two years. Place unused "keeper" items, records or furniture in storage. Don't let laundry or mail pile up.

Run a feather duster over shelves and furniture every three days, starting at the highest point. Fluff all pillows and chair cushions. Vacuum immediately after. To keep a room bright and fresh, open curtains during the day and turn on more lights at night.

Spirit Of America Fife And Drum Corps Making First Appearance

The Spirit of America Fife and Drum Corps, making its first appearance in the Christmas Parade Sunday, provides a "living history lesson" by playing on wooden keyless fifes and rope tension drums, with uniforms which are historically authentic replications of those worn by the U.S. Infantry in the War of 1812.

Members spent four years researching them at more than 25 institutions, including the Smithsonian, the U.S. Army Military History Institute, and the National Archives.

Based in Orleans, the site of a notable skirmish with the British during the War of 1812, the Spirit of America Fife and Drum Corps builds on its local history, honoring the courage and vigilance of Americans who fought in that war.

The Spirit of America Fife and Drum Corps has marched in parades and musters throughout New England since 1980, playing marches, reels and jigs from the Revolutionary War through the War of 1812. Today, the Corps is comprised of youth members of Spirit of America Band, the 2006 World Champions of the World Association of Marching Show Bands.

Marines To Collect Toys For Tots

U.S. Marine Reservists will again collect Toys for Tots during Quincy's Christmas Parade Sunday.

The custom of collecting and distributing toys for needy children began on a nation-wide basis 58 years ago and local Marine reservists will be marching in Quincy's parade to receive donations.

Since the call-up of Marine reservists during the Iraq War, the need to donate to the Toys for Tots program this year is the greatest it has ever been.

Last year the Toys for Tots program provided more than 13.2 million toys to an estimated 6.1 million needy children. In Massachusetts, more than 40,000 toys were distributed, about 111,000 of them to children in the Greater Boston-Quincy area alone.

In the Quincy area, the Toys for Tots program is directed by the 1st Battalion, 25th Marines with the cooperation of civilians and former Marines.

To donate, the public is invited to bring new, unwrapped, non-violent toys to the parade where they will be picked up by the Marines and placed in trucks passing along the three-mile Hancock Street marching route.

The Quincy Festival Committee members, organizers of the 54th Quincy Christmas Parade, are hopeful that this year's spectators will show the same "Semper Fidelis" spirit they have shown in the past years by rallying to the cause of the Marines Toys for Tots program.

Quincy Medical Center, Caryn's Corner Partner In New Gift Shop At QMC

Quincy Medical Center has partnered with Caryn Smith, owner of the Caryn's Corner boutique, 695 Adams St. in Quincy, to manage the new Gift Shop at Quincy Medical Center.

In addition to the standard hospital gift shop fare of stuffed animals, greeting cards and magazines, the shop offers artisan jewelry, fashionable accessories and unique floral arrangements designed by local vendor – European Floral Design.

The shop also is finalizing plans to become an agent of the Massachusetts State Lottery, selling lottery and "scratch to win" tickets.

"New merchandise is arriving every day, and we continue to explore new product lines and plan special events such as trunk shows that would be of interest to our customers," Smith said.

A percentage of the shop's sales will be donated to the Quincy Medical Center Auxiliary, a volunteer fundraising committee that has raised more than $1 million in support of Quincy Medical Center's advanced, high quality clinical programs and services.

The shop, located within the medical center's first floor, A-Wing lobby, adjacent to Dunkin' Donuts, is open from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m., Monday through Friday, and from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m., on Saturdays.

Quincy Medical Center is a 232-bed acute care community-teaching hospital providing South Shore residents with comprehensive medical and surgical services. The medical center's Alliance for Quality with Boston Medical Center (BMC), formed in 1999, brings academic medicine to the community. At Quincy Medical Center, physicians from Boston Medical Center direct the departments of medicine, surgery, psychiatry, anesthesia and emergency medicine. Additionally, physicians from BMC who are board-certified in a range of medical and surgical specialties work with community physicians to ensure the continuity of patient care.

FOOT NOTES

by Joel Chariton, D.P.M.
Diplomate, American Board of Podiatric Surgery
Diplomate, American Board of Podiatric Orthopedics

LUMPS OR BUMPS ON YOUR FEET

There are many reasons why individuals develop lumps or bumps on the soles of their feet. They may develop, for example, on the bottom of the big toe if the toe's joint suffers limited mobility and cannot bend upward (therefore removing pressure) while walking or running. An extra bone or piece of cartilage may also cause a bump in this area. On the ball of the toe, the metatarsal bones (the long bones behind the toe) may become misaligned and cause an uneven distribution of weight across the area and a protrusion of one or more bones. Calluses or thickening often occur at the site. Plantar warts or benign cysts may also cause lumps on the ball of the foot.

When lumps and bumps and other foot problems keep your feet's complex parts from working together properly to allow you to walk in comfort, it's time to seek a podiatrist's attention for diagnosis and treatment. As a physician who specializes in foot care for men, women, and children, a podiatrist's extensive training provide the experience to treat a full range of foot and ankle disorders. Have your feet got you down? Call us at 781-986-3668, for an appointment for comprehensive foot care. We're located at 999 North Main Street, in the MEDICAL OFFICE BUILDING, with office hours also available at the Quincy Medical Center and Milton Medical Building.

HINT: Nodular masses that develop on the arch of the foot are called plantar fibromas.

First All-Asian Speaking Senior Citizen Police Academy

QUINCY POLICE CRIME Prevention Unit recently sponsored the Asian Senior Citizen Police Academy, where more than 50 seniors graduated from the four-week program. Mayor William Phelan and Chief Robert Crowley join the graduates in the celebration.

If you were driving your car and pulled over by the police, most likely you would immediately stop, stay in your car and wait for the officer to come up to your window – that's how motorists react here.

In China, failing to exit the vehicle and walk back to the police officer is a sign of disrespect!

In an effort to make the transition from the Asian to American culture, the Quincy Police Department's Crime Prevention Unit recently held a four-week Senior Citizen Police Academy in Cantonese and Mandarin languages. The program was held at the Wollaston Lutheran Church's Senior Center for three hours each week and covered numerous topics by various community leaders.

The purpose of the program was to educate the seniors about motor vehicle laws, criminal law, city ordinances, fire prevention, public transit safety, immigration laws, self-defense and services available through South Shore Elder Services.

For the past few years, the Quincy Police Department has provided frequent seminars through a police department translator. However, says Crime Prevention Lt. Dan Minton, "Much can be lost in the translation.

"The seminar would go on and on and the seniors would have to wait for the information to be translated, so we decided to eliminate the middle-man – often me or another English-speaking officer, and have the same message delivered in a much more effective and efficient manner."

A secondary, but equally important reason for the seminar was to continue to build on the relationships between Quincy Police and the Asian community in Quincy.

Hi Thai, the Quincy Police Department's Asian Community Liaison, said many Asian seniors are afraid of police uniforms because of the danger they represent to them in communist China.

"This program shows the Asian community that the police are there to help," Thai said. Seniors, he added, learned much about services available in their community and look forward to next year's academy.

The Quincy Fire Department presented information on exiting from a burning building, how to stay low on the flood during a fire, extinguishing a fire on your clothing and the importance of having carbon monoxide and smoke detectors.

From this academy, 55 seniors graduated. Organizers anticipate next year's class will increase.

On graduation day, Officers Kent Yee and Greg Marr brought the class outside to an waiting Fallon Ambulance. The officers and EMTs explained the steps when someone is transported by ambulance. Fallon Ambulance Technicians Calvin White and Kevin Hefferman showed off much of the medical equipment and allowed all the seniors to walk through the ambulance.

One student acted as a volunteer and the EMTs showed the class how they take blood pressure, provide oxygen and strap a patient down safely on a stretcher for transporting. This presentation alleviated many concerns of the seniors.

Officer Kent Yee, the program's director, said, "It was a good experience for the police and the Asian community. Everyone wins. The program showed the department's outreach to them and lets them know about a wide range of resources."

After the tour, Mayor William Phelan and Police Chief Robert Crowley greeted the graduates in the hall. Phelan spoke of the importance of this program and assured the seniors that new courses would be added for next year's academy.

Through an interpreter, the mayor told the audience that the police department is in the process of hiring three additional police officers who will be fluent in either Cantonese or Mandarin. The audience applauded on the news.

Chief Crowley congratulated the seniors on their commitment and graduation from the program.

"The large turnout of seniors is a credit to Quincy's Asian community. They are excellent citizens and strive to be an integral part of day-to-day life in this city.

"One can only imagine the struggles they have gone through and we hope that programs such as this will only make adjustments easier," the chief added.

Crowley also told the audience that they have made some new friends in the law enforcement community and should feel comfortable to contact them over any issue, reaffirming the theme of the program that the police in this country are there to serve and protect.

After receiving their diploma from Phelan, many students made comments to the mayor on the value of the program. Birry Wong and Ann Wong thanked the mayor and chief for the program. They said that they would pass the valuable information on to their children and friends. They especially liked the fire department's presentation and the comments on having at least two exits in a home.

Wong was happy to hear that the city will be hiring additional Asian-language speaking officers.

Wind Sun Ng, another graduate, liked learning about the city ordinances so that they would now know the laws, too.

Sun Tak Chan said the program is very good for the senior citizens because they are getting laws first hand from the right people.

Duk Jan Wood said the entire program was interesting, especially when Fallon Ambulance EMTs showed them the ambulance equipment.

"This program was very successful and I will get more people to be a part of this program," said Lai Shem Wong. She also said she will go home and tell her family.

Ting Chi Tse liked having the program in Cantonese and understood the laws and information much better now.

Maria Wong said she has a much better understanding of not giving out personal information to everyone who requests it.

The Quincy Police Department Crime Prevention Unit recognizes the following businesses for their support of the program: Dunkin' Donuts, Cathay Pacific, Norfolk Electric Company, Asian American Services Association, Inc., Crown Royal Bakery and the Wollaston Lutheran Church.

In addition to this academy, the Quincy Police Crime Prevention Unit runs Senior Citizen Police Academy Programs, in English, at 10 senior citizen complexes throughout the city each year.

Weight Doesn't Always Reflect Health

Q. My friend feels she does not need to exercise because she feels comfortable with her weight. I try to explain to her that just because her weight is fine does not mean she is healthy. What can I say to back up my argument?

A. Your friend is just one of many people who use their weight as a measure of their fitness level or health. It is important to remember, however, that weight refers to the total weight of your body including muscles, bones, organs, fat and water. The scale gives a total number in pounds but does not separate how much of your body is made up of each component.

The following categories can help identify where you stand and possibly give you the motivation to include exercise in your lifestyle.

Overweight but not obese. It IS possible to have a higher weight than recommended yet not be obese. People with this body frame tend to be athletic and/or muscular and have a normal or low percentage of body fat, although by the scales standards they are overweight. Body builders may be included in this group.

Underweight and lean. People with this body type have a thin appearance and by weight charts are categorized as underweight. They range on the lower end of the body fat chart, but are very healthy. Endurance athletes fit into this category.

Average healthy weight. This is the happy medium between maintaining a healthy average weight and body-fat percentage while maintaining lean body mass.

Overweight and obese. Visually, this group appears heavy, with a soft (non-muscular) body type, and are overweight and obese from excessive amounts of body fat mass and non-proportionate lean body mass.

Obese but not overweight. Yes, someone can actually be obese and not overweight. This group often believes they are healthy because of their weight; however, they are considered obese because of the amount of fat mass on their body in relation to their lean body mass. Although the elderly often fall into this category due to inactivity, changes in lifestyle and loss of lean mass, there are also much younger people in this group who use their weight as an excuse to not exercise or eat properly.

No matter what category you find yourself in, it is important to live a healthy lifestyle that includes proper nutrition and exercise.

Always consult a physician before beginning an exercise program. Tips For Entertaining
Avoid Food Fiascos During Festivities

(NAPS)- According to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, there are more than 76 million cases of food-borne illness in the United States each year. Hosting parties and family gatherings is a time to enjoy loved ones, but between greeting guests, taking coats and handing out drinks, food preparation can get lost in the shuffle. To prevent food poisoning when entertaining, use measurement tools to ensure that foods are cooked thoroughly and stored correctly. Follow these food safety tips to help ensure happy and healthy guests:

Safe Cooking

Undercooked meat and poultry are common causes of food poisoning. These foods should be cooked to an internal temperature high enough to destroy any harmful bacteria that may exist in the food. Although many believe that meat color can be used to determine if foods are completely cooked, color and texture indicators are unreliable. Using a food thermometer is the only sure way to know if food has reached a high enough temperature to destroy food-bourne bacteria. Companies such as Taylor Precision Products emphasize the importance of food safety by providing educational information and USDA guidelines on all of their packaging. NSF-certified instruments like Taylor's TempRite thermometers, available at Wal-Mart, ensure that every dish is cooked correctly.

The USDA recommends cooking ground beef mixtures to 160 F on a meat thermometer. However, whole muscle meats, such as steaks and roasts, may be cooked from 140 F-170 F, depending on doneness preference. Poultry should reach a safe minimum internal temperature of 165 F throughout.

Cooling and Storing

Hosts typically prepare too much food for their event and storing leftovers in the refrigerator and freezer is a common end-of-party ritual. For safety, it is important to verify the temperature of refrigerators should remain a temperature no higher than 40 F and frozen foods will remain protected when the freezer remains at 0 F. Taylor's TempRite Freezer-Refrigerator thermometer helps monitor these temperatures, providing an accurate reading from 30 F to 90 F that can be critical in the event of a power outage. When the power resumes, if the refrigerator is 40 F or colder and the freezer is still colder than 40 F, then the food is safe.

No matter the number of people or the occasion, the main goal of any party is to relax and have fun. By following important safety guidelines and using the proper tools, cooking can be a piece of cake. For more food safety tips, visit www.taylorusa.com.

Dental Health News: What Is Dry Mouth?

(NAPS)- What is dry mouth?

Dry mouth is the feeling of not having enough saliva, or spit, in your mouth. If you have dry mouth all or most of the time, you know it can be uncomfortable and may even cause problems with chewing, swallowing or speaking.

Who is likely to have dry mouth?

While anyone can have dry mouth, older adults are commonly affected by it, say dental researchers at the National Institutes of Health (NIH). It's not because of the aging process itself, they say, but because older adults are more likely to take medications or have diseases or conditions that can lead to reduced salivary flow. Medications for high blood pressure, depression and urinary incontinence-and several others-can cause the salivary glands to make less saliva. Additionally, older adults may be more likely to have diseases such as diabetes, which can cause dry mouth. Certain cancer treatments can also affect the salivary glands. Head and neck radiation therapy can cause the glands to produce little or no saliva. Chemotherapy may cause the salivary glands to produce thicker saliva, which makes the mouth feel dry and sticky.

If you think you have dry mouth, the dental experts at NIH advise you to see your doctor or dentist about what you might do to get relief.

How is dry mouth treated?

Dry mouth treatment depends on what is causing the problem. Be sure to see your doctor or dentist to try to find out the reason for your dry mouth and which treatment might be helpful. Treatment may be simple as changing your medication or its dosage. Your doctor or dentist might also suggest a medication that can help stimulate saliva flow or advise you to use artificial saliva to help keep your mouth wet.

In addition to treatments suggested by your doctor or dentist, here are some things you can do at home:

Sip water or sugarless drinks throughout the day.

Avoid drinks with caffeine, since caffeine can dry out the mouth.

Chew sugarless gum or hard candy to stimulate saliva flow.

Avoid using tobacco and alcohol, since both dry out the mouth.

Use a humidifier at night.

STEPS TO AVERT GUM DISEASE, BAD BREATH

No one wants bleeding gums or bad breath. Fortunately, a new study finds that it is relatively easy to kill both of these birds with one stone. In fact, just two weeks of flossing, coupled with regular tooth brushing, was found to be all it took to reduce bleeding gums and bad breath. These findings are based on a comparison of brushing and flossing habits exhibited by 51 sets of twins who were between ages 12 and 21. One group brushed their teeth and tongues daily while the other group added flossing twice a day. At the end of two weeks, the group that flossed in addition to brushing had a 38-percent reduction in gum bleeding and less bad breath.

Good oral hygiene at home is essential to help keep periodontal disease and bad breath from becoming more serious or recurring. You don't have to lose teeth to periodontal disease. Brush, clean between your teeth, eat a balanced diet, and schedule regular dental visits for a lifetime of healthy smiles. Always feel free to discuss your dental concerns with us. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street, where we practice general dentistry. You can trust the health of your teeth to our extensive training and experience. Our concern is your comfort and confident – our goal is to help you preserve your natural teeth for a lifetime. Please call 617-479-6220 to schedule an appointment. We offer the services of anesthesiology with a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Visit us on the web at www.quincydentist.com.

P.S. Bad breath and gum disease are often the first sign of poor oral health, which may lead to further gum (periodontal) problems.

The Health of Your Feet

(NAPS)- If you think dry, flaky skin on your feet is nothing to worry about, think again.

Dry skin can be more than a minor annoyance, especially for people with diabetes. Of the 16 million Americans with diabetes, 25 percent will develop clinical signs of xerosis, or extremely dry skin on the heels of their feet. One reason is that diabetes causes reduced perspiration, especially with the skin on the feet.

The skin on xerotic heels is perpetually prone to cracking and scaling. Thankfully, the most common of foot problems for diabetics can be remedied with a little extra care and attention.

Manage your diabetes:

Make healthy lifestyle choices to help keep your blood glucose (sugar), blood pressure, and cholesterol close to normal. Doing so may help prevent or delay diabetes-related foot problems as well as eye and kidney disease.

Check your feet every day:

You may have serious foot problems, but feel no pain. Check your feet for cuts, sores, red spots, swelling, and infected toenails. Find a time (evening is best) to check your feet each day. Make checking your feet part of your everyday routine.

Use appropriate products:

Although most people apply body lotions to dry, cracked feet, these moisturizers are not designed for skin on feet, which is almost three to five thicker than skin on the rest of the body. When it comes to treating diabetic skin, experts recommend using an intensive moisturizer to heal and protect skin.

One such moisturizer is dermatologist-recommended Eucerin Plus Intensive Repair Foot Creme, which is clinically proven to smooth and restore feet in just two weeks. With a unique combination of gentile exfoliators and effective moisturizers, it quickly helps heal rough skin and cracked heels.

Trim your toenails:

An ingrown nail is not only unsightly, it can even make walking painful. Trim toenails straight across and smooth them with a nail file; do not cut into the corners of your toenail. Aside from improper trimming, a nail that curves too much or excessive pressure from tight shoes is usually to blame.

People with diabetes must be aware of how to prevent foot problems before they occur, to recognize problems early and to seek the right treatment when problems do occur. Although treatment for diabetic foot problems has improved, a little extra attention remains the best way to prevent problems.

A Job Well Done

On Monday, Nov. 13, at approximately 1:00 a.m., Officer John McGovern was dispatched to 99 Myrtle Street to investigate a burglar alarm that went off. While enroute to the office building, the officer learned that the alarm company was reporting that there was a person claiming to be an employee without the code for the alarm.

LT. DAN MINTON

As Officer McGovern approached the building, he observed a male (suspect) in an adjacent parking lot. Since there are not many people out and about in that area at that time, he turned around and drove toward the suspect, who then fled into the parking garage of 99 Myrtle Street. As Officer McGovern drove over to the entrance to the garage, he called for assistance, then spotted the suspect hiding behind a dump truck just outside the entrance of the garage. The suspect then fled into the garage.

Officer McGovern, believing that the suspect's behavior made him a threat, commanded the suspect to emerge from his hiding place with his hands visible. Officer McGovern held his position and scanned the garage with his flashlight for the suspect to no avail.

Officers Patrick Folan and Christopher McDermott arrived and after reiterating instructions to give up, the officers, with weapons drawn, entered the darkened garage. Using their training and experience, the officers were able to locate and corner the suspect, who was hiding behind a low wall inside the garage.

The officers instructed the suspect to lie down on the ground with his hands visible. The suspect refused to comply with the orders and this escalated the concern the officers had for their safety.

Officer McGovern, concerned that the suspect was not cooperating and could be armed, sprayed the suspect with "Oleoresin Capsicum" (layman term = mace) and then apprehended the suspect. Fallon Ambulance washed the suspect's eyes out. The suspect claimed that he was an employee and had set off the alarm.

Officer McGovern linked all the events of the incident together- that the suspect set the alarm off, he fled from the police, hid from the police, failed to obey verbal commands, woke many neighbors up from their sleep and created a reckless and potentially hazardous situation.

The suspect, a 41 year old Quincy man, was placed under arrest for "Disorderly Conduct". There was no sign of a break into the company.

Communications Operator Greg Hartnett contacted the owner of the company and learned that the suspect would have been there at that time of night/morning. The owner said that he did not want to pursue any charges, and would question his employee when he returns to work.

In this case, the officers applied their training and were able to apprehend the suspect without anyone getting seriously hurt. This incident is an example of how police work is so unpredictable, and a simple case of an alarm going off, with an employee on scene, can quickly change and turn into a potentially harmful situation to both the suspect and the police officers.

Nice work!

North Quincy Red Raiders vs. Quincy Presidents

'We Must Play A Sound, Fundamental Game' Says Raiders Coach Jim Connor

North Quincy Hoping To Snap 7-Game Skid

BY SEAN BRENNAN

Football is a physical hard-hitting sport, but for the North Quincy Red Raiders and first-year head coach Jim Connor, this Thursday's annual Thanksgiving Day game is going to come down to mental preparation.

North Quincy enters the game with a 1-9 record overall, and a 1-7 record in Atlantic Coast League play, but for the Red Raiders the past is the past, and the only game that matters is the next one. Looking to end Quincy High School's seven game winning streak, North will lean heavily on its seniors and a bevy of talented underclassmen when they kickoff at 10:00 a.m. at Veterans' Memorial Stadium.

"If we want a chance to win against Quincy then we are going to have to be mentally prepared for whatever it is they throw at us," Connor said. "Our team needs to play a sound, fundamental game if we want to walk away with a win. We have to eliminate turnovers and cause some of our own, we need to take care of the football, and we need to tackle. Our last game was over a week and a half ago against Plymouth South, and we took the bye week to get back to the basics. We worked on technique and are hopeful that the extra practice will result in a sound football game. "

The Red Raiders have had difficulty all season long stopping the run and cutting down on opposing teams gaining major yards on the ground, but if the defensive line and linebackers can contain Quincy's run game then North should be in good shape. The team's defensive backfield has not been tested all that much this season. This is a direct result of the inability at times from stopping the run, and opposing teams have not really had to throw on the Raiders, but that could change come Thursday if Quincy decides its best option to score points and move down the field is to spread out the offense and throw.

"We need to be aware of all of the skill players that Quincy has," Connor said. "Their offense really appeals to their skill players. They are athletic at the wide receiver, quarterback and running back positions. I not sure what kind of game plan they are going to use. It could be mainly a running attack, or they could spread the field with multiple receivers and drop back into the shotgun position and throw. It could go either way, and we need to be ready to adjust to what it is they use."

North Quincy will be challenged either way versus Quincy as the Presidents have a handful of very talented offensive weapons in quarterback Matt Boyle and running backs/receivers Tom Hazelhurst and Jared Tucker. According to Connor, the Presidents' record of 2-7 is not what it seems, and he has tried to instill in his team that Quincy will be just as hungry to leave the Vet with a win as his team will be.

"Mathematically speaking, who we played and who they have played, the scores are similar," Connor said.

North Quincy Red Raiders vs. Quincy Presidents

Presidents Will Use 'Multiple Formations On Offense' Says Coach Bob Noble

Quincy Looks To Keep Holiday Streak Alive

By SEAN BRENNAN

The Quincy Presidents have had a lot to be thankful for the last seven times they have taken the field at Veterans' Memorial Stadium for the annual Thanksgiving Day game against North Quincy High School. Quincy, under the guidance of head coach Bob Noble, has won seven straight Turkey Day games, including last year's 14-0 victory.

This year's Presidents team had high hopes once again for a big season, but things did not go according to plan. Quincy's record stands at 2-7 overall, and 1-7 in the Atlantic Coast League, but Noble's teams have feared pretty well in this game, and he doesn't expect this year to be any different.

"This game is a rare and unique experience," Noble said. "It is as big as it gets in the city of Quincy. It is a heated environment, and with there being no boundaries that decide which school a kid has to go to, we have had brothers playing against each other in years past and neighbors lining up across from one another. This game, and who wins and loses will be something these kids may talk about 50 years from now. For many of the seniors it will be the last organized football game they ever have a chance to play in."

The Presidents will have a hungry challenger in the North Quincy Red Raiders, but with a roster that is filled with players who have won here before and know what it takes to get the job done, Quincy should be in a good position to make it eight wins in a row.

The Presidents have a couple of different ways that they can use to move the ball up and down the field, and with seniors at all the skill positions, their game plan is more than likely to conform to what the Raider defense shows them.

PRESIDENTS 2006 SCORING LEADERS

Players	TD	(Rsh)	(Rec)	(Def)	X2	PAT	Pts.
Hazelhurst, Tom	8	6	2	0	0	0	48
Tucker, Jared	3	0	3	0	0	0	18

Arredondo, Diego	1	1	0	0	0	0	6
Arredondo, Camillo	1	1	0	0	0	0	6

"We are going to approach this game with intention of being successful," Noble said. "We will not have a set game plan offensively. We will try to attack at their weakness, whatever that may be. We have multiple formations that we use on offense, and will not lock into any specific aspect of that."

Quincy began the season using a shotgun, spread offense that focused on spreading out the whole field and finding open receivers or setting up blocking schemes that found holes for the running game. As the season progressed, and injuries to key players occurred, the Presidents altered their style to a more run first offense.

"We began the year running the spread, no-huddle offense, but by mid-season things changed," Noble said. "We have our injured players back, and now we have different choices."

Senior captain and quarterback Matt Boyle, who will be starting his second Turkey Day game, has the makeup of a great signal caller. He has five touchdown passes this season, and he displayed just how strong of an arm he has during a near-miss comeback against Falmouth High School on Sept. 22nd. Boyle, with his team down 16-7 with just over two minutes to play, threw a beautiful touchdown strike to fellow senior Tom Hazelhurst to bring Quincy within three points. The team lost 16-13, but Boyle's skills were on display.

Hazelhurst has been Quincy's best offensive threat, bar-none. He has rushed for six touchdowns, including a four touchdown explosion against Nauset High School, and he has also caught two TD passes. After missing the last two games due to injury, Hazelhurst should be a player to watch tomorrow.

Three other seniors; Jared Tucker, Camillo Arredondo and Jim Aikens, who along with Hazelhurt have been starters for three years, will be looked upon for leadership. Tucker has been on the receiving end of three Matt Boyle touchdown passes this year, while Arredondo was recently named as a first-team all-league selection by the other ACL coaches. Arredondo was tied for the most votes at the linebacker position.

"This is nothing new for the seniors and captains," Noble said. "They have all experienced this game before, and I am positive that they will all lead like they are supposed to lead."

North Quincy Red Raiders vs. Quincy Presidents

Raiders Hope To Snap Skid

The Red Raiders have not won a Thanksgiving Day game since a 21-6 victory way back in 1998, and his kids understand just how big this game is in the city of Quincy, but Connor is confident that his team will be able to eliminate any nerves they may have, and play a smart, mentally prepared game come Thursday.

"The kids know the history of the game. Many of them have had brothers play in the game before, but we are here to turn the page on the past and focus on this game," Connor said. "I have tried not to preach to them about the Thanksgiving Day game. It is a big game, but I have tried to be a calming voice, and remind them that it is just a high school football game. If we can go out there and play a good fundamental game we will be fine."

Connor and his staff will need to lean on the seniors to take the underclassmen under their wings and help keep the whole team under control.

Leading the offense for North will be senior QB Shaun McBrien. McBrien has been sporadic at times this season, but he does have five touchdown passes to go along with two rushing touchdowns. Seniors Dave Guerriero, Alex Tragellis and Mike Jay head a receiving core that can quickly put points on the board. Guerriero, who is also the team's kicker, goes into his final high school game with one receiving TD and one rushing TD on the year. Tragellis enters the Turkey Day game with three receiving touchdowns. Seniors are a fixture on the offensive line for North Quincy as well, and if McBrien has any chance against a fast and athletic Quincy defense, then they will need to win the battle in the trenches. Nick Gizzarelli, Phil Kelly, Roger Cufaude, Benn Johnson-Tate and Nick Poli will be responsible for opening holes for the running backs and allowing McBrien to drop back to find the open receivers.

The Raiders are not short on talent when it comes to their underclassmen, and many of them should play an integral part on both the offensive and defensive side of the ball. Junior running back Terrence Sibley is the team's most explosive player. Sibley has four rushing touchdowns this year, and he had a monster game against Nauset High School. Sibley finished that game with 116 yards on 12 carries, and had a highlight reel run of 69-yards for a touchdown in the victory. Junior Danny Jackson is a star on offense and defense. He has chipped in with two rushing touchdowns for North Quincy, and has played solidly at defensive back. Others looking to make an impact will be juniors Dennis Martin (1TD) and Jon Cahill (2 TDs).

"Because of our seniors, the last week has been our best week of practice all season," Connor said. "The seniors (who have yet to win on Thanksgiving) want to leave the underclassmen with something to build on for next year, and a win would do just that. The underclassmen are geared to match the seniors and they want to give the seniors a gift. That gift is a win."

Connor, who is in his first season as head coach, knew that he had a major rebuilding project on his hands when he accepted the job, but he is proud of his players for the discipline they have shown and the progresses they have made. North Quincy was recently awarded the ACL Sportsmanship award by the league's coaches, but the best achievement for his team is that not one student-athlete was ever academically ineligible all season long.

"I had a plan when I took over the program. Step 1 was to make sure that discipline and academics were at the top of that plan," Connor said. "I wanted to start from scratch. No more being late for practice, no more outside distractions, but more importantly being better prepared mentally. The kids have responded and the cards started to fall. They have bought into the system, and although the overall record may not be where we want it to be, they are executing on the field and off. The Sportsmanship Award is a reflection of where our program is and where it is heading in the future. It is a sign to me that these kids are growing up and becoming men."

Tomorrow when the pregame ceremonies are done, and the opening whistle blows, the North Quincy Red Raiders will be ready to play, and not just for their fans and their school, but for each other.

Seven years is way too long for any team to go home on Thanksgiving still hungry for more.

North Quincy Red Raiders vs. Quincy Presidents

Noble, in his years coaching at Quincy, has seen players who may not have been the star, shine in this game, and that is something that will not catch him off guard if it happens again this year.

"Sometimes it the kid you least expect that steps up and contributes," he said. "Last year, Brian Smith who was a senior who didn't start, made a game-turning play on an attempted onside kick. You expect your stars to contribute, but sometimes it is that kid you least expect who makes a key play."

Offensively there are a couple of starters on offense who may have a chance to standout this year. Besides Boyle at quarterback and Hazelhurst at running back, Quincy will institute a three receiver/one tight end set to start the game. Seniors Alex Chan and Anthony Gilbody with start alongside senior Camillo Arredondo at receiver, and junior Diego Arredondo will start at tight end.

Defensively, the Presidents will be led by Arredondo. Quincy plays a number of their offensive players on the defensive side of the ball. You can expect to see Hazelhurst, Tucker, and juniors Joe Reggiannini, Diego Arredondo and Zack Olhson attacking the Red Raiders when they have the ball.

If the Presidents hope to slow down North Quincy they will have to come up with defensive game plan to stop Shaun McBrien, Terrence Sibley and the rest of the Raider offense.

"For us to be successful we are going to have to stop their running game," Noble said. "If we can take away that, and have their team focus on throwing the ball, it may benefit us. But McBrien is a good quarterback, and Dave Guerriero is multi-talented and he has made some great catches for them. Sibley is also a good back and very dangerous."

The Presidents and Noble had aspirations and goals that were not met this year, but a win on Thanksgiving will go a long way from turning an otherwise disappointing season around.

"Everyone goes through down periods. It is part of football, but we can't and don't dwell on it," Noble said. "If you dwell on losing, you start to act and play like losers. It is never discussed. We go to work and try to get it right. Winning and losing can be habit forming, and we have had good couple of years, and have been successful in this game for seven straight."

"Around here (Quincy) there is so much emphasis placed on this game. We need to keep it in perspective, but I know for the seniors it is a big deal. It is their last time playing in this rivalry. Quincy has been fortunate to win seven in a row. A win would soften the blow."

Since the series began back in 1933, no school had won more than five games in a row on Thanksgiving until this current streak by the Presidents. If they can win tomorrow, Quincy will have topped the previous best of five wins in a row set by the 1933-1937 Red Raiders and the 1954-1958 Presidents.

Over the last seven years, a win for the Quincy Presidents on Thanksgiving Day has been gravy.

The Quincy Presidents' Camillo Arredondo was recently selected by the coaches of the Atlantic Coast League to its 1st-team all-ACL post-season team.

Arredondo, a senior captain, was chosen by the coaches for his extraordinary play at the linebacker position. Arredondo was tied for the most votes at the linebacker position with a player from Marshfield.

Arredondo led the Presidents in tackles and he also sees time on the offensive side of the ball. He had a three game stretch against Marshfield, Dennis-Yarmouth and Nauset High Schools were he recorded 42 tackles.

North Quincy's Terrence Sibley, Quincy's Tom Hazelhurst Leading Scorers

The Quincy Presidents and the North Quincy Red Raiders head into tomorrow's 74th annual Thanksgiving Day game with high aspirations. Quincy will be looking to push its winning streak to eight straight games, while the Red Raiders will be aiming for the school's first Thanksgiving Day win since 1998.

The Presidents' scoring leader in 2006 is senior running back Tom Hazelhurst. Hazelhurst leads the team with 8 touchdowns and two receiving scores for a total of 48 points. Jared Tucker has scored three times for a total of 18 points.

North Quincy's Terrence Sibley leads the Raiders with four rushing touchdowns and 24 total points. Dave Guerriero has contributed two touchdowns, one rushing and one receiving, and has also kicked 10 extra points for a total of 22 total points.

Senior quarterbacks Matt Boyle (Quincy) and Shaun McBrien (NQ) have each thrown five touchdowns. McBrien has also chipped in with two rushing scores, while Boyle has one rushing TD.

It'll Be Veteran Coach Versus A Rookie

Tomorrow at the 74th annual Thanksgiving Day game there will be a 7-time Turkey Day veteran coach on one sideline, and a first-time rookie coach on the other.

Noble, who is in his eighth year, is a perfect 7-0 on Thanksgiving. He has been part of the Quincy coaching staff since 1985. Noble teaches social studies Quincy High School.

Connor, who will be coaching in his first Thanksgiving Day game, is a 2003 graduate of Boston College. He played 4 years for the B.C. Eagles and was an offensive linemen and a long snapper.

SNAKES ON CARS

Many vehicles are equipped with a single drive belt that is used to drive multiple accessories (alternator, water pump, air conditioning compressor, etc.) instead of having a separate belt drive each accessory. This so-called "serpentine" belt gets it name from the way it snakes around the various pulleys. The advantage of having the serpentine belt is that it is simpler and generally easier to replace than the multiple belts in older vehicles. However, if the serpentine belt were to fail, there would be an interruption in power to all accessories driven be the belt, including some critical ones. Thus, it is very important to regularly check the condition of this important belt and replace it when recommended.

Serpentine belts are depended on for many of the accessories, including crucial ones such as power steering. With this in mind the professional mechanics at LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO, located at 258 Quincy Ave., E. Braintree, recommend that your routinely have your vehicle's belt(s) inspected to prevent complete belt failure. We are your local source for propane for grills, motor homes, and converted vehicles. Questions? Call 781-843-1550.

HINT: A screeching noise coming from beneath the hood of your vehicle may be a sign of a loose belt

On 5-1 Vote, But Keenan Calls Proposal 'Flawed'

$400 Rebate For Qualified Seniors Takes Step Ahead

By MIKAELA SLANEY

The mayor's proposal to grant $400 rebates to qualified senior homeowners took another step toward reality at Monday night's City Council Finance Committee meeting.

The Neighborhood Stabilization Fund which would help seniors on a fixed income and facing rising costs to remain in their homes, was approved on a 5 to 1 vote.

Lone dissenter was Chairman John Keenan who called it "a severely fundamentally flawed piece of legislation... I respect the spirit and where it comes from, I just don't think it works. It's too simple an approach, and it doesn't serve who it should."

Keenan suggested that senior citizens look into other underutilized funding programs.

Mayor William Phelan's Neighborhood Stabilization Fund assists residents 62 years of age and older who have lived in their homes for 20 years or longer.

The grants would be 90 percent of available funding per year, divided by the number of qualified individuals. But the grant is not to exceed $500, and under new amendments, shall be no less than $400 in the first year.

Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymondi made the motion to accept the order, saying that it would help a group of people who need it.

"There is no perfect piece of legislation," Raymondi said. "Will this benefit them? Yes."

Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin and Ward 1 Councillor Leo Kelly agreed with Raymondi, saying despite possible flaws, the legislation should be pushed through. Ward 6 Councillor Brian McNamee said he could understand Keenan's concerns, but voted favorably for the order.

Keenan expressed doubts as to whether the funding would be provided exclusively to seniors who need it.

City Issues New 'Good Neighbor Guide'

Mayor William Phelan announces that every household in Quincy will receive the city's new "Good Neighbor Guide", an informational booklet on the city ordinances that affect the quality of life in the neighborhoods.

Residents should receive the booklet in the mail next week, he said.

Compiled by the Office of Constituent Services, and in conjunction with the new Code Enforcement Officer, the guide provides information on trash disposal ordinances, noise ordinances, parking, building regulations, driving, public peace and welfare, shopping carriages, dumpster regulations, and other subjects.

"As the City focuses in stricter regulation of the quality of life ordinances with our new Code Enforcement Officer, we thought it important to launch a corresponding educational campaign so that residents are aware of the ordinances that protect our neighborhoods," said Phelan. "I believe that we can make substantial improvements in our neighborhoods through education and enforcement."

Part of the city's "Neighborhood First" campaign, the common sense tips are provided in both English and Chinese.

Quincy recently hired its first Code Enforcement Officer to focus strictly on enforcing the city ordinances that impact the quality of life. Kenneth Burke, a veteran parking control officer, was hired last month and works in the Inspectional Services Department.

"Code enforcement was one of the needs identified as a priority by residents in our 'Neighborhoods First' survey results," Phelan said. "With our educational campaign backed by an enforcement officer, we can make substantial gains in this area."

He said guidelines could include senior citizens who have ample money saved up, those who have paid off their homes, and couples where both are working.

"Certainly there are senior citizens who should have it," he said. "This legislation doesn't single them out, and they may only get it once."

Keenan also expressed concerns over the lack of a designated funding source, which ironically may lead to a higher taxation. "We're raising taxes to give it back to them, and those who don't need it," he said.

One possible funding source mentioned at the meeting would draw upon compensation from Quincy College for the exclusive use of city-owned Saville Hall.

Keenan said this source may yield a variable amount.

The criteria to qualify for funding are as follows:

• The individual must at least 62 years of age as of Jan. 1. Keenan said this may not be fair to those who are slightly shy of that age, but still longtime residents of Quincy with a fixed income.

• He or she must be the owner and occupant of a residential property of three units or less.

• He or she must have owned the property for at least 20 years prior to Jan. 1. Keenan said this also may not be fair to owners who are a few months shy of the cut off date.

• The owner must be current in his or her real estate tax obligations or has entered into a tax deferral agreement. Keenan said this guideline would keep the money from owners who may need it most.

• Only one co-owner per property is eligible for participation.

Keenan also suggested that the fund would cause additional tax forms, which may force senior citizens to have taxes done professionally for an additional charge.

Phelan previously proposed the ordinance in January of 2005 and it was passed in the following April, but did not sign it after discrepancies. Phelan reintroduced the Stabilization Fund in March of 2006, but it died in committee, said Kelly.

The adjustable rate mortgage that got you into your house might not be the right loan for you now

A fixed rate mortgage is a locked-in sure thing. No more getting panicky about rising interest rates or dealing with annual adjustments that make your original "great rate" not so great after all. With a fixed rate, you get stability and an absolute guarantee of what your principal & interest payment will be next month, next year and until the day you pay it off. Taxes, water & sewer and the cost of living generally only keep going up. But your monthly principal & interest payment can stay the same for the next 30 years. And with fixed rates still near historic lows, you may even be able to lower your payment or take out some cash. People who switch to a fixed rate are glad they did! Is switching right for you? A Legend Closes His Landmark

Last Saturday, after a surprise farewell party given by his family and attended by friends and customers, he locked the door at 381 Washington St. and walked away into retirement.

The shop has been a landmark since 1948 and Chick a legend in it.

"I feel very, very sad," he says. "But it's time to go. It's been a great run."

Chick, who will turn 80 next April, estimates he has given some 29,000 – maybe 30,000 – haircuts during that run, starting when the price was 50 cents.

Did all the standing bother his feet?

"No," he says. "But it has done a job on my right shoulder from raising my right arm all these years."

The shoulder pains so much that he is scheduled to enter South Shore Hospital today (Thursday) for surgery.

The shop was a popular gathering point for long-time friends who got an update on the political scene with their haircut.

Now and then a well-known would stop by. Like Arizona Congressman Morris Udall when he was running for president in 1976. Udall was impressed by Chick and asked him if he would like to be a Congressional barber. Chick was flattered but politely said, "No." He didn't want to leave Quincy.

Chick had a wide range of regular customers. One of his favorites was Rabbi Jacob Mann of Beth Israel Synagogue.

"He used to tell me to be a businessman and not give things away," he muses.

The Papile family is a symbol of "The Greatest Generation."

Raffael and Lucia Papile, who were next door neighbors in Torre dei Passeri, Italy, were married in Quincy in 1906. He was 21 and she 17.

Raffael, who came to Quincy first, proposed to her by mail and sent her a boat ticket. Shrewdly, a one-way passage.

They raised 15 children – a 16th died at an early age – struggled through the Great Depression and saw seven of their sons patriotically go off to World War II.

Chick was one of them, serving as a fireman first class aboard the cruiser Little Rock and the battleship Tennessee and an ocean rescue tug.

Brothers Albert and George also served in the Navy, Jim in the Coast Guard, Leo in the Marines and Bill and Angelo in the Army – all overseas.

All seven came home safely.

The other children:

Alfonzo, Helen, Mary, Sadie, Gloria, Amelia, John and Edward. Jim's twin, Jenny, died at an early age.

Bill became a city councillor, Mary, assistant city treasurer, Jim, a city assessor, Leo, an MDC police officer; John, a member of the Quincy Board of Registrars and superintendent of the Milton Post Office; and Alfonzo, a member of the Quincy Housing Authority Board.

Only Chick, Jim and Gloria survive.

Raffael and Lucia had a large garden of vegetables to help feed the family during the depression. With 15 children, they ate in shifts.

Raffael had a deep sense of pride. He told Lucia to stay away from the welfare office. He would take care of his family. And, he did, finding road jobs and working on WPA projects.

And Chick recalls his mother telling the children: "You learn English. How am I going to learn it if you don't?"

They loved Quincy so much they gave it to Leo as his middle name. And whenever someone asked Leo what the Q. stood for, he would tell them: "It's Q for Quincy and I'm proud of it."

Chick went to barber school on the GI Bill and went on to own his own shop and became chairman of the state barber licensing board. An active Democrat, he served on the state legislative redistricting commission for Norfolk County.

Chick and his wife, the former Anna Baresi who died in June, 2003, raised four children of their own:

Ralph, a Wall Street bond analyst; Michael, a partner in a Boston merger and acquisition advisory firm; Lucia, a Medford assistant school principal; and Laura, a registered nurse. There are six grandchildren.

"It was fortunate that my parents came to Quincy," Chick says. "God gave us a good life here and the city provided us with a wonderful opportunity."

And, he adds humbly:

"You know, when I hear God Bless America, I cry."

CHICK'S BARBERSHOP, a Quincy Point landmark for 58 years, is now closed. Chick Papile (here) locked the door Saturday.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS AN early 1920s postcard view of Wollaston Boulevard looking north from Sachem Street. The seawall had not yet been built. The current upgrading of the boulevard includes narrowing the roadway but not so much as shown here. The present overhead streelight fixtures will not be changed but it would have been nice if they could have been replaced with something along the lines of the old gas fixture on this corner. The publisher, to show some sign of life in this view, added the automobile on the left to the postcard. To contact Tom Galvin, e-mail tmgalvin@verizon.net.

Dangerous Crossing For North Quincy High Students

My child started 9th grade at North Quincy High School in September. It never occurred to me how dangerous it was to cross Hancock or Squantum Street before or after school because I never paid attention.

In the past few months I have waited to pick up my teenager in the McDonald's parking lot. I watched the students crossing Hancock Street and I was scared to death that one of them was going to get hit. There is nothing indicating there is a school there. There are no crossing guards and there are no police. I understand this is high school, but drivers don't pay attention and neither do high school students.

In September I wrote to the School Committee, the City Councilors and the Mayor's office about how dangerous it is around NQHS. This morning my worst fear was almost realized. My teenager was crossing with a group of other students in the crosswalk on Squantum Street when an elderly driver went right through. My child had to jump out of the way or else I would be writing this from the hospital instead of my home. It was inches! We did not get the license plate because it happened so fast.

I know the NQHS PAC has been trying to resolve this issue for years. Is it going to take some teenager getting killed to get someone up NQHS for a lousy 15 minutes in the morning and afternoon? I'm sick of the City of Quincy stalling about this issue. Do something about it!

Wants City To Hire Professional Traffic Engineer

Dear Mayor Phelan:

A serious question: "Why is the city of Quincy without the professional service of a traffic engineer?"

There are many questions I could ask, like "What is the population of the city? How many cars, trucks, fire engines, ambulances, police cars etc. travel through Quincy each day? How safe are the pedestrians from motorists traveling or walking through and across street corners?

The motorists are a challenge to these pedestrians, and the motorists are a challenge to themselves. There is little respect shown by either one. I believe this condition can be improved with a traffic engineer. Why is there not a traffic engineer in this city?

I recently have asked of several City Councillors: ask the mayor was the answer. Several years ago, I remember having talks with a traffic engineer, his name escapes me, but several items were discussed and rectified. These items were concerning parking at the stadium and left-hand turns. I do not know why the left-hand turns signs were eliminated at my corners. Parking at the stadium has improved. Left-hand turns are a frightful experience. One-way streets should be added, but who knows where?

Reason the number of vehicles on your streets today compared with the vehicles several years ago. The figures would amaze you. A traffic engineer is the person that can shuffle traveling on your streets from hour to hour that will amaze you, it takes a little planning and understanding.

The study will take time and over a period of time. The effects of the study will affect desired results painlessly through education. There will be talks of being inconvenienced because of patterns of change; however, prior to enforcement, much explanation by the press and other forms of communication will be offered.

Parking on streets can be changed for angle parking rather than conventional side wheels on curb. This would be most convenient if practiced at several spots in the City Hall area, stadium and large shopping areas, after research of increased parking spaces are made available. This will be done through hourly study of travel habits of motorists that take place every single day through "your" city.

I respectfully suggest a professional be secured to improve traffic conditions immediately.

The concert will feature Dick Johnson, legendary jazz clarinetist, saxophonist, and leader of the Artie Shaw Orchestra.

Johnson has over 50 years of experience in the world of jazz. From his early beginning practicing the clarinet for over four hours a day aboard a U.S. Navy ship (1944 - 1946) to playing at Presidential Inaugurals for both Reagan (1984) and Bush (1988), Johnson has seen it all. He enjoyed playing short stints with Benny Goodman who named Dick Johnson one of his favorite clarinet players.

Giving Tree Program To Benefit Headstart Underway

The 11th annual Giving Tree Program, a holiday gift collection campaign, is underway.

The program benefits infants and preschoolers in the local Headstart program servicing families from Quincy, Weymouth, Braintree and Hull.

Participating businesses put up a small Giving Tree and customers select an ornament from the tree, which contains a special gift request from a specific child. They are asked to purchase and wrap the gift, using the ornament as a gift tag, and then to return the wrapped gift to any Giving Tree location.

Gift requests range from hats and mittens to games, trucks, dolls and even bikes.

"The generosity of the people who have participated over the last 11 years has yielded an estimated $10,000 in gifts each year. More importantly, it's brought so many smiles to so many little faces, and hope to their struggling families," said program coordinator Debbie Logan.

1000 Southern Artery (residents only); Bank of Canton, 275 Quincy Ave.; Braintree Cooperative Bank, both branches on Washington St. in Quincy; Curves for Women, 550 Adams St., Quincy; Hancock TV & Appliance, 115 Franklin St., Quincy; Harbor Express, 739 Washington St. (at the Fore River Bridge); Olindy's Bowling Lanes, 170 Quincy Ave., Quincy; River Bay Club, 99 Brackett St., Quincy; Villa Rosa Restaurant, 705 Adams St., Quincy; and Weber Dodge, 315 Lincoln St. (Route 3A), in Hingham.

Logan also expressed special thanks to the employees of Quincy Mutual for their participation.

The program continues through Sunday, Dec. 17.

'Hanging Of The Greens' At United Methodist Church

Quincy Community United Methodist Church, 40 Beale St., Wollaston, will hold its second annual Hanging of the Greens Sunday at the 10:30 a.m. workshop service.

"Evergreens have a very long symbolic history," said Rev. Dr. Jarek-Glidden, pastor, "and since ancient times they have represented life and rebirth. This was especially true in those areas of the world where the winter months were long, dark, and cold. The church adapted this ancient symbol and gave it new meaning, teaching that evergreens represent eternal life.

"At some point in time, someone literally brought evergreens into a church building, but precisely how and when that happened, we just don't know. Such developments are much more complex than they might seem. Over time, decorating churches became a tradition, and evolved into the Hanging of the Greens."

The Hanging of the Greens service at Quincy Community Methodist Church combines readings from scriptures and songs, and was written by Rev. Dr. Jarek-Glidden. The real focus of the service, he pointed out, is participation. Before the service begins, everyone is invited to help decorate the sanctuary with greenery. Then, at a certain point in the ceremony, the volunteers are asked to carry out their part of the decorating.

"The decorating is informal and lots of fun," said Rev. Dr. Jarek-Glidden, "and that makes the Hanging of the Greens a great service for families and kids."

For more information, call the church office at 617-793-3319.

Nominations Coming In For Sun 'Citizen Of Year'

Nominations are coming in for The Quincy Sun's 22nd annual "Citizen of the Year" award.

Established in 1985, the award recognizes an individual for outstanding community service or a special achievement.

Last year, George White, a 40-year member of the Quincy Christmas Festival Committee – including 25 years as committee chairman – was honored for bringing holiday joy to many thousands of all ages.

White was selected for the honor from among 35 nominees submitted by Quincy Sun readers. A panel of judges representing a cross-section of the community made the final decision.

Again this year, Sun readers may nominate the person they feel is the most deserving of the award.

A nomination ballot to help the selection process appears below in this week's issue of The Quincy Sun.

After nominations close Sunday, Dec. 31, a judging panel will be selected to make the final choice from nominations submitted.

If you know someone you would like to see recognized with the 2006 award, fill out the ballot and mail it to:

The Quincy Sun
Attn: Citizen of the Year
1372 Hancock St.
Quincy, MA 02169

Ballots can also be dropped off at The Sun office at the above address by Dec. 31.

Those submitting nominations should identify themselves. They can also attach to the ballot a letter detailing the reason for their nomination.

Nominees can be someone in elective office, a member of an appointed board, a clergy member, a teacher or school administrator, a police or firefighter, someone in the business community, a sports figure or an "unsung" neighbor or friend who has given freely of his or her time to a worthy project or cause.

Those nominated in the past are eligible to be nominated again this year. Since this is not a popularity contest, each nominee has an equal chance of being selected regardless of the number of nominations received. Anyone nominated just once has the same chance of being the award recipient.

The name of the winner will be announced in The Quincy Sun in January.

Quincy 2000, Bank Of Canton Provide $150,000 Expansion Loan To Fridgedoor

Quincy 2000 Collaborative and The Bank of Canton recently partnered to provide a $150,000 expansion loan to Fridgedoor, Inc., a retailer/wholesaler of novelty magnets, magnetic supplies and custom magnets.

Through the City of Quincy's Community Development Block Grant program Quincy 2000 provided a low interest $50,000 loan to help leverage a $100,000 business loan provided by the Bank of Canton.

"We are pleased to be a financing partner with Quincy 2000 and help expand and further diversify the economic base in the City of Quincy", said John McCarthy, vice president at The Bank of Canton.

Established in 1997, Fridgedoor designs custom Mojo Magnet sets and novelty magnets which are sold at wholesale to promotional product distributors in the US and Europe.

The business loan will enable the company to purchase printing, laminating, cutting and doming equipment to produce products locally rather than through venders in other parts of the US and overseas.

"The new equipment will increase revenues and margins, as well as reduce turn around time on orders", said company president Christopher Gwynn.

"This is a great opportunity for Quincy 2000 to help an established Quincy business expand operations and create jobs in the City," said Dennis Harrington, director of Planning for the City of Quincy.

The loan also helped the company recently move from a home-office environment to a 6000 SF warehouse/distribution space located at 65 School St., which includes a retail outlet store.

"It is rare to be able to help a local company establish manufacturing services here in the city as compared to the many competitive manufacturing options overseas" said Sean Galvin, President & Chairman of Quincy 2000 Collaborative.

For information on the business financing services available at Quincy 2000 Collaborative visit www.Quincy2000.org or stop by their offices at 1250 Hancock Street, Suite 127N in Quincy Center.

Sealing Drafts Can Help Homeowners Save Money

(NAPS) A growing number of homeowners are finding that a modest investment in time and effort can pay real dividends when it comes to reducing energy costs.

According to the Environmental Protection Agency, air leakage can account for anywhere from 25 percent to 40 percent of the energy used for heating and cooling a typical home. That's why experts say a $25 investment in four tubes of a home sealant to seal up drafts and leaks in a home could result in hundreds of dollars of energy savings.

"Proper sealing is a low cost, one afternoon investment that will pay for itself in years of reduced energy costs and increased comfort," said Jeff Davis, general manager of GESA, the maker of GE Silicone II.

To make sealing easier and more effective, here are a few tips:

• Look for gaps, cracks or leaks around the window and door frames, in the attic and basement, anywhere building materials join, and any areas where the walls are penetrated, such as electrical and plumbing fixtures. Look for daylight that's visible through cracks around window and door frames.

• Use lighted incense sticks to locate the source of leaks. Air drafts will cause the plume of smoke to waver or flow in the direction of air leakage. As an alternative to using incense smoke, use a dampened hand. Drafts of air will feel cool on damp skin.

• While there are a variety of sealant options, silicone sealants, such as GE Silicone II, are thought to provide the best seal against water and the elements because they don't shrink or crack and they remain flexible. Additionally, they can be used indoors or out. Paintable silicones, such as GE Silicone II XST, provide the benefits of a silicone sealant for applications that require painting.

• In addition to reducing energy leaks, some sealants contain ingredients to control other household risk factors, such as unhealthy and unsightly mold and mildew.

• Make sure that the sealing surface is clean and well-prepared. Clean any dust or dirt particles with water. Do not use soap. Use a knife to remove any remnants of old caulk. After removing most of the old caulk with a blade, clean any remaining residue with a mild abrasive or rubbing alcohol.

More information on how to properly seal a home, including windows, doors, kitchens, bathrooms, basements and other areas, can be found online at www.gesealants.com.

Minimize Drywall Project Mess

(NAPS) Whether hiring a professional to complete drywall installation, or doing it without professional help, the mess that comes along with this type of project is all but inevitable, but there are ways to improve drywall cleaning.

There are several steps that can be taken to reduce the dust that results from installing drywall, so as to not be cleaning it for weeks after the project is completed.

First, mark where the construction zone begins and ends so that the mess doesn't migrate into the rest of the home. Put up plastic sheeting in doorways or over vents in the work areas. Move whatever belongings possible out of the room or drape them with cloths. Also, cover floors in and leading to and from the renovation area. Use plastic or heavy drop cloths, and tape them down if necessary.

Cut drywall and any other lumber and trim outside or in the garage if it's cold out. This keeps as much mess as possible out of the house. Also, mix joint compound outside.

Sending the joint compound, also known as the "mud" that fills the gaps between the drywall, creates dust. A growing number of DIYers, contractors and remodelers are reducing this cloud of airborne dust by using a new product called Sheetrock® brand dust control joint compound from USG, the same company that makes Sheetrock gypsum panels. It goes on like regular joint compound but binds up fine residue during sanding to form particles that fall straight to the floor in a heavy dust instead of clouding the air. As a result, the work goes quicker and cleans up faster.

When sanding the drywall mud, use an open-screen sandpaper so that the dust does not build up in the grit like it does with regular sandpaper, but instead falls out of the screen. If the mud is already smooth, wet sand it with a sponge instead of dry sanding. Make sure to clean the sponge frequently.

After applying tape to the wall over the joint compound, clean up any bits of tape that may have fallen on the floor during the job.

Vacuum or sweep the construction area at the end of each day to control the mess. This keeps dust from being tracked into other areas of the house or from circulating in the air.

By following these tips, you can have a cleaner house during the next drywall project and lessen the disruption to everyday life during the renovation.

For more information, visit www.downwithdust.com or call (800) USG-4-YOU.

Whirlpool Tub Is Easy to Maintain

Q: We recently purchased a house that features a whirlpool-style tub in the master bath. One of the jets isn't working. How can I fix this so the whirlpool works properly? — Lee W., Plano, Texas

A: The most likely cause is a blockage of the jet nozzle. Over time, hair, soap scum and oils can build up behind the nozzle and reduce or restrict water flow. This is fairly easy to remedy.

First, unscrew the nozzle by hand, removing it completely from the nook in which it rests. (If you have difficulty loosening the nozzle, a tool called a hydrojet wrench can be purchased, either from the manufacturer or at a bath hardware store, to grip and remove the nozzle without damaging it.) Remove buildup inside the nozzle by hand, then use a soft brush or cloth dipped in a mixture of warm water and mild detergent (dish soap, for example) to thoroughly clean it.

Before reinstalling, you may want to run a little heat-proof grease (available in the plumbing section of the store) around the O-rings at the end of the nozzle to prolong their service life. If the O-rings are damaged or deteriorated, or if the nozzle is cracked, purchase replacement rings or a complete replacement nozzle from the manufacturer or a dealer. Once the nozzle is reinstalled, be sure that it aims away from nearby intake screens.

Whirlpool tubs will last longer and need less professional maintenance if they are cared for properly. Never use abrasive cleaners to scrub the basin or fixtures; tough stains can be removed by dabbing on rubbing alcohol or paint thinner and rinsing after a few minutes. Don't use chemical drain openers to clear the drain.

Each month, flush the system by filling the tub with warm water and adding two teaspoons of powdered dishwasher detergent, then running the whirlpool for about 20 minutes. Rinse by repeating the process with clean, cold water.

Jack Conway Receives Chamber Volunteerism Award

Randolph Jack Conway, chairman of Jack Conway & Co. Realtors has received The Forrest I. Neal Jr. Award for Volunteerism from The South Shore Chamber of Commerce at their 2006 Annual Meeting at The Lantana in Randolph.

The award is given each year to an individual who best exemplifies the spirit of genuine concern for the South Shore, which Forrest I. Neal Jr. epitomized.

"This is a great honor for me" said Conway. "I'm very grateful to the Chamber for selecting me for this distinguished award, its a great reflection on our company's commitment to the South Shore."

Sen. Edward Kennedy was the keynote speaker at the luncheon and while praising Conway for his award also joked, "I hope this doesn't mean Jack, that you're considering a run for U.S. Senate!"

Conway's wife Patricia and other members of the company were also in attendance to congratulate Conway.

Jack Conway & Co. is celebrating its 50th Anniversary as the largest independently owned real estate company in Massachusetts.

Home Buyers Find Favorable Conditions As Prices Soften

After three consecutive summers of steady home sales and price growth, the residential real estate market in Massachusetts experienced a healthy correction in sales and selling prices during the third quarter of 2006, according to a recent report issued by the Massachusetts Association of Realtors® (MAR).

While demand has eased, the more moderate sales pace and softening in selling prices, combined with today's higher inventory levels and a steady drop in mortgage rates in recent months, has helped boost affordability levels in the Bay State and usher in one of the strongest buyers markets in years, say MAR officials.

The Realtors® report specifically shows that 11,650 detached single-family homes were sold across Massachusetts in the third quarter of 2006, a decline of 23.4 percent from the comparable quarter last year when 15,211 homes were sold. It's the sixth consecutive quarter that activity in the single-family home market has declined from the same period one year earlier, and this year's third quarter sales volume is the lowest for a summer quarter in more than a decade, dating back to July-September 1995 when 11,373 homes sold. Sales of condominiums also decreased sharply this past summer, sliding 22.3 percent, from a third quarter record high of 7,124 units sold from July-September 2005 to 5,538 condos sold in the same three-month period this year.

Regionally, in the third quarter, sales of detached single-family homes fell in all areas of the state from the same period last year, with sales declining 16-20 percent in greater Boston and western Massachusetts; 25 percent in Barnstable and Worcester Counties, the South Shore, and northeastern Massachusetts; and 40 percent in the Greater Fall River-New Bedford area. In the condominium market, sales also declined in every region over the past year, with activity down 12-16 percent on the South Shore and western Mass.; 20 percent in greater Boston and Worcester County; and roughly 30 percent or more in all other areas.

The reality is the sales pace during the boom years from 2003-2005 was unsustainable and unhealthy for the housing market, according to Realtors®, whereas the current climate reflects more normal activity and favorable conditions for buyers.

With sellers continuing to outnumber buyers in the current market, selling prices for single-family homes and condos fell modestly this past summer, the MAR report found. The statewide median selling price for detached single-family homes decreased 4.9 percent, from a record high quarterly median price of $370,000 in the 2005 third quarter to $352,000 in the same quarter this year. It's the third consecutive quarter that the median selling price has declined on an annualized basis, and the third quarter price drop of approximately five percent is the largest year-to-year price decline in over a decade, dating back to the first quarter of 1993 when the statewide selling price of detached homes fell 5.5 percent over the comparable quarter in 1992.

Prices also retreated in the condominium market last quarter, with the statewide median selling price for condos slipping 2.5 percent, from an all-time high median price of $282,000 in the third quarter last year to $275,000 in the third quarter of 2006. Notably, this marks the first year-to-year quarterly decline in condo prices in more than seven years, dating back to the fourth quarter of 1998 when the statewide selling price for condos dipped 0.2 percent from the same quarter a year earlier.

On a regional basis, selling prices in the detached single-family home market were flat over the past year in western Massachusetts, inching up 0.7 percent, but slid two percent in Greater Boston and on the south coast, 3-4 percent in Barnstable and Worcester Counties, and 5-6 percent in the Northeast and South Shore regions. Median selling prices for condos also lost ground in most regions, but improved 25 percent on the South Coast and a modest 1-2 percent in Cape Cod and western Mass.

Sales and price data from the MAR report reflects transactions occurring through Realtor®-affiliated multiple listing services in the Commonwealth, and account for approximately 80 percent of all real estate sales in Massachusetts.

A Job Well Done

On Saturday, Nov. 11, at approximately 4:20 a.m., Officer Ken Wood and Sergeant Joseph Lencki were dispatched to an Elm St. apartment on a report of an attempted suicide. As the officers entered the building, they heard noises coming from the second floor. As they walked up, they observed numerous empty beer cans on the steps and in the hall.

LT. DAN MINTON

A man (suspect) stepped out of a second floor apartment and said, "He's downstairs" and led the officers to the victim's apartment. The officers learned that the victim was attempting to kill himself using a knife.

They entered the apartment cautiously, identified themselves and located the victim on his bed, bleeding from the wrist and holding a knife in his hand. As soon as the victim spotted the police officers, he began yelling and swearing from them to leave, stating, "I just want to die – just leave me alone." The victim then put the knife to his throat and stated, "Get the %&*@ out of here or I'll slit my throat."

Officer Wood told the suspect, who led the officers to the victim, to leave the room because he was antagonizing the victim. After being told to leave several times, the suspect began yelling at the victim, claiming he wood talk him out of killing himself.

The situation then took a sudden change for the worse.

The victim, yelling back, became extremely agitated, dug the knife deeper into his neck and screamed, "Get the %&*@ out – I'm gonna kill myself."

Due to the rapid change in the situation and the volatility of both men in the room, Sgt. Lencki used pepper spray into the facial area of the victim and then subdued him to get the knife away. The suspect, without any warning or indication, then attacked Sgt. Lencki from behind, striking him in the face and back.

Officer Wood grabbed the suspect and was struck in the face as he brought the suspect down to the floor, with the help of Quincy firefighters, who were there to provide medical assistance. After a brief struggle, the suspect was handcuffed.

Meanwhile, Sgt. Lencki, with the help of another firefighter, was able to extract the knife and handcuff the victim for this safety, until Fallon Ambulance arrived.

The victim, a 25-year-old Quincy resident, was transported to Quincy Medical Center for psychological evaluation.

The suspect, a 31-year-old Quincy resident, was charged with two counts of "assault and battery on a police officer," and one count of "disorderly conduct."

On behalf of the officers involved and the Quincy Police Department, I would like to thank Lt. Kevin O'Connor and Firefighters Paul Moody and Danny Duncan for their assistance in this incident.

Rotator Cuff Injury Sidelines Golfer

Q. My husband recently injured his rotator cuff and has had to stay away from playing golf. How can he condition his rotator cuff muscles to prevent this from happening again once he is injury-free?

A. The rotator cuff is a group of four muscles and their tendons that are responsible for connecting the upper arm and shoulder blade. This group of muscles also helps to lift your arm up over your head and also rotate it toward and away from your body.

Rotator cuff injuries can vary from tendonitis and bursitis to tears. Each causes different degrees of limitations and discomfort. The causes can be from normal wear and tear, a sudden fall where you use your arms to break your fall, heavy lifting, poor posture or repeated stress upon the shoulder joint, such as when playing golf.

Repetitive stress on the shoulder joint results in many of the rotator cuff injuries that golfers experience. Although golfers may find these injuries to be very common among golfers, they can take steps to lower the risk. Here are some tips to help your husband stay injury-free.

• Stay fit. Keeping your whole body strong, functional and flexible will prepare you for the demands that golf places on the body while playing or practicing. The stronger and more stable the muscles and joints of your shoulder, back, arms, hips and legs, the better control you'll have. These are prime areas for overuse injuries.

• Warm Up! Golfers often overlook the importance of warming up. Take a few minutes to elevate your heart rate. This will loosen up your muscles and joints. A light jog will do. Complete a stretching routine that loosens the muscles from your neck, shoulders, back, forearms, wrists, lower back, legs and calf. Take 20 to 30 seconds for each stretch, and repeat two or three times. This may take some time to complete, but it will take much longer to recover from an injury.

• Develop proper swing mechanics. Take lessons if needed. Poor mechanics over time can also lead to rotator cuff injuries.

• Listen to your body. When your body is tired or weak, take that as a warning to get some rest. Lack of rest or fatigue makes you more susceptible to injuries, so heed your body's warning.

Tips To Reduce The Spread Of Germs

(NAPS) Most people do not realize the many ways they can encounter viruses and bacteria on a daily basis that may cause colds, flu and other respiratory infections. While there are no ways to prevent or cure the common cold or flu, it is possible to help reduce the likelihood of getting sick by limiting the transmission of germs that may cause infection.

More than 1 billion colds are contracted by children and adults each year in the U.S. and approximately 36,000 deaths and more than 200,000 hospitalizations are attributed to flu annually. According to the National Institutes of Health, the common cold is a leading cause of doctor visits and missed days from school and work.

Cold and flu viruses are spread person to person by respiratory droplets through coughing or sneezing and exchange of secretions of the nose or mouth. Healthy adults are able to spread the flu virus one day before symptoms appear and up to seven days after becoming sick, so it's possible to give someone the flu before you even know you are sick. Avoiding the spread of viruses that cause colds or flu is particularly important since these viruses do not respond well to antibiotics.

According to Dr. Neil Schachter, author of "The Good Doctor's Guide to Colds & Flu," "My patients are always searching for answers on how to reduce their risks and their families' risk of contracting colds and flu. One of the easiest ways is by having key products on hand to help reduce the spread of germs that cause infection all in one place, including hand-sanitizing gels and wipes."

While colds and flu are contagious and cannot be prevented or cures, use of certain products, such as hand-sanitizing gels and wipes, masks, gloves, and individual thermometers for each member of the family, may be helpful in limiting transmission of germs that may cause infection. These essential items are available in convenient, single kits such as the Nexcare Health Preparedness Kit of Go-Pak, which are ideal for the home, purse or travel.

Studies show that frequent hand washing and use of alcohol-based hand sanitizers can help limit the spread of germs. Covering the mouth when coughing or sneezing with disposable tissues or masks can also help prevent the spread of germs to others.

The Nexcare Health Preparedness Kit and Go-Pak are available nationally at selected drugstores, mass merchandise retailers and other stores.

For more information about the Nexcare Health Preparedness Kit and Go-Pak or to obtain Dr. Schachter's tips on healthy habits to help reduce the spread of germs, visit the Nexcare website: www.nexcare.com.

Healthy Eating Tips For Infants And Toddlers

(NAPS) Feeding is one of a parent's most important jobs. It helps children grow healthy and strong. But meal and snack times also give parents a chance to help their children feel important and loved; understood and respected; and learn to trust that others will care for them.

Here are some tips about how to nurture a child's overall healthy development through feeding from the experts at ZERO TO THREE, a nonprofit child development organization:

• Remember: Meals are about more than food. They are a time to connect with the child. Talk with him or her and don't let him or her eat alone.

• Create routines around mealtime. Routines help children feel loved and secure. Some say blessings or share experiences from the day before each meal.

• Establish regular meal and snack times beginning when the child is nine to 12 months old. This helps children learn to link their feelings of hunger with eating at regular times across the day.

• Offer three to four healthy food choices at each meal, among those the child likes. Research shows that children will choose a healthy diet when they are offered a selection of healthy foods.

• Don't force the baby or toddler to eat. This often results in children refusing the food and eating less.

• Offer a healthy snack between meals if the child seams hungry so if the child doesn't eat much at a meal, the child doesn't have to wait long to eat again.

• Limit juice to no more than four to six ounces a day. Juice has lots of sugar. Add water to the juice or offer fresh fruit instead.

• Be flexible about letting little ones get up from the table when they are done. Babies and toddlers can't sit for long. Plan for three meals a day of about 10 to 20 minutes and two to three snacks of about five to 15 minutes.

• Don't give up on new foods. A child may have to be offered a new food 10 to 15 times before eating it. Encourage the child to touch the new food, lick and taste it. Let the child see you eating it.

• Turn off the TV (computers, etc.) at mealtimes. The television can distract children from eating and takes time away from talking as a family.

• If concerned about the child's weight or activity level, talk to a health care provider.

COMIN' THROUGH!

Parents typically notice that babies start pushing their first teeth through their gum lines between 4 and 7 months of age. The first teeth to appear usually are the two bottom front teeth (the central incisors), followed by 4-8 weeks later by the 4 front upper teeth (the central and lateral incisors). Teething is marked by increased drooling and the desire to chew on things. For most babies, teething is painless; others may experience brief periods of irritability. Some may seem cranky for weeks, experiencing crying episodes and disrupted sleeping/eating patterns. Chewing on a cold washcloth, straight from the freezer, may help to alleviate any pain. While teething can be uncomfortable, protracted irritability should prompt a call to the pediatrician.

This informative column has been brought to you in the interest of better dental health. Our goal is to help our patients reach their own unique and highest level of oral health. Presidents Best North 10-7 For 8th Straight Thanksgiving Win

Quincy Better By A Field Goal

By SEAN BRENNAN

At a rain-soaked and wind-blown Veterans' Memorial Stadium last Thursday, the Quincy Presidents extended their Thanksgiving Day winning streak to eight games in a row with an exciting, down-to-the wire victory over the Red Raiders of North Quincy, 10-7.

The 74th edition of the Turkey Day game saw two teams, from one city, battle it out for the full four quarters, and although Quincy escaped with the win, the Red Raiders showed true grit and determination.

The turning point in the game happened late in the fourth quarter. North Quincy had the ball and a 7-3 lead deep inside their own territory, but facing a third and long, senior quarterback Shaun McBrien faded back in the pocket and had junior wideout Dennis Martin open in the flat. McBrien, who was being pressured by a strong President defensive front, just missed connecting with Martin for the first down, and the Red Raiders were forced to punt the ball away.

Martin, who doubles as a receiver and the team's punter, took the punt snap with 3:36 remaining in the game, and with the way that the Red Raider defense had been playing all game, North just needed to get the ball out of their own zone, but Quincy's special teams and head coach Bob Noble had other ideas.

"We felt from watching film (of North Quincy's punt team) that there was an opportunity there, and it couldn't have come at a better time," Noble said. "We put the punt-block play on to go after it, and we were very fortunate that we got it. It was great that a pair of seniors, Pat Austin and Josh Berry, made the turnaround play of this game"

The Presidents brought the house on the snap, and senior Pat Austin, who came from the left side untouched, swatted Martin's punt attempt into the field turf where it was recovered at the North Quincy 12 yard line by senior Josh Berry.

With the momentum now on their side, and their supportive fans cheering them on, the Presidents wasted little time on offense. On the first play from scrimmage after the blocked punt, senior quarterback Matt Boyle (now an impressive 2-0 as a starter on Thanksgiving) used play-action to freeze the Red Raider defensive backs, rolled to his right and found senior Alex Chan in the back of the endzone for the touchdown. Chan, playing the role of the hero, fought off coverage, the driving rain and the slick field turf to make a spectacular catch while sliding on his knees. Diego Arredondo's point after attempt was good and Quincy went back on top 10-7.

"It's unbelievable. I couldn't believe I caught it," Chan said after the game. "I'm so happy. When we ran the play, and I saw the ball coming to me, I knew it was over if I caught it."

North Quincy would get the ball back two more times after Chan's touchdown catch, but they could get no closer than the Quincy 40 yard line. The Red Raiders had one last chance with just under one minute left in the game, but a McBrien hail mary pass fell incomplete, and Quincy escaped with the victory.

"My kids performed well, especially our all-senior offensive line," NQ head coach Jim Connor said. "Playing in this game, a rivalry game and Thanksgiving Day game with all the distractions we were there to prove that we belonged and I feel like we did just that. Our seniors played great, and the game showed me that our program and our kids have really grown up this season."

The game began with a lengthy 14-play drive by the Presidents offense. Quincy drove the ball down the field using up almost the entire first quarter, and the workhorse for Quincy on this drive was senior running back Tom Hazelhurst. Halzelhurst, who ran the ball 15 times for 68 yards in the opening half, continually fought for tough yards on the drive, but the North Quincy defense bent but did not break. The Presidents got all the way down into the North Quincy redzone, but could not convert on third and long.

The Presidents, now facing a fourth and long, brought on their kicking team to try and attempt a 29 yard field goal. Junior Diego Arredondo's kick found its way through the driving rain and wind to give Quincy the early 3-0 lead with 2:06 left in the first quarter.

The field goal would be the only score the Presidents could muster until the late punt block set up the winning score in the waning minutes of the game. Quincy was hurt all game long by offside and false start penalties, and a solid performance from the Red Raider defense.

North Quincy, behind the running of junior Terrence Sibley (20 carries, 95 yards), took its next drive deep into Quincy territory. On the drive, the Red Raiders faced a fourth and one on their side of midfield and went for it. Sibley took the hand-off from McBrien and sprinted 29 yards down the right sideline for a huge first down.

"Going for it there on fourth down, we just had confidence in our offensive line," Connor said. "The game was quickly becoming a time of possession game and we needed to hold on to the ball. Sibley was running hard, and I just had a sense that we could make it there."

With an opportunity to take the lead and put the Presidents on their heels, the Red Raiders called two straight pass plays on third and fourth down. The first pass, intended for senior Mike Jay, was broken up on a hard hit from

Presidents Prevail In 'Little Turkey Day Game'

JAYVEE FOOTBALL

The contest known as the "Little Turkey Day Game" took place on Nov. 18 at Veterans' Memorial Stadium. The Quincy Presidents' and North Quincy Red Raiders' jayvee squads took to the field turf to decide which school would leave with the 2006 "Little Turkey Day" victory.

The Presidents defeated North Quincy 16-14 in a well played game that came down to the final half minute of play.

After a scoreless first quarter, the Presidents struck first on a Max Devoe 6 yard touchdown run. Devoe also scored on the two-point conversion attempt to give Quincy the early 8-0 lead.

The Red Raiders quickly evened the score at 8-8 when quarterback Mario Darshi connected with Adam Tragellis for a 25 yard touchdown pass. North Quincy's Ethan Thomas added the two-point conversion and the score was tied at eight.

Quincy quarterback Matt Mottola put the Presidents on the scoreboard just before the end of the first-half with a 12 yard touchdown pass to wide receiver Pat Fernandez. Devoe made the score 16-8 with another successful two-point conversion run.

The Red Raiders' defense prevented Quincy from scoring in the second half, and the North Quincy offense closed the scoring gap in the fourth quarter when Thomas scored on a third down and goal from the 1-yard line. North tried to even the score at 16-16 with a two-point conversion try, but the Quincy defense did not allow them in the endzone.

The Red Raiders had one more chance to take the lead with less than a minute to go in the game. North Quincy drove all the way down to the Quincy 30-yard line, but a strong defensive stand by the Presidents' Paul Oldham, Sean Gray, Zach Manning and Paul Carson forced the Red Raiders to turn the ball over on downs.

Mottola, Devoe, Fernandez, along with Mark Gilbody, Andy Papile and Anthony Raddutz all played well for the Presidents. Quincy had a lot of success in the game due to their offensive line. Taylor Radcliffe, EJ Lewis, John Parry, Tony Nguyen and Mike Andrews protected the quarterback and open holes all game long for the running game.

HARD LESSONS

Some people put off routine automobile maintenance because they think it is too inconvenient to give up the use of their cars for the day. Others skip scheduled maintenance because they do not want to spend money on their cars if nothing is obviously wrong. The thinking of this former group of procrastinators usually changes when a worn radiator hose leaves them stranded at night on an interstate highway. Now, that is an inconvenience! As for the spendthrifts, they may reassess their values when failure to check the engine's oil level leads to a costly engine overhaul. The sad truth is that our highways are dotted with cars pulled over to the breakdown lane, and repair shops are filled with neglected cars. This is a hard way to learn that preventive auto maintenance helps avert big problems.

QUINCY'S ALEX CHAN'S sliding, fourth quarter touchdown catch was the difference on the scoreboard in the 74th annual Thanksgiving Day game. Chan also contributed two bonecrushing hits in the defensive backfield. Quincy Sun Photos/Robert Noble

SOMEWHERE AMONG THIS PILE OF BODIES, North Quincy's Shaun McBrien sneaks into the endzone. McBrien's score gave the Red Raiders a 7-3 lead.

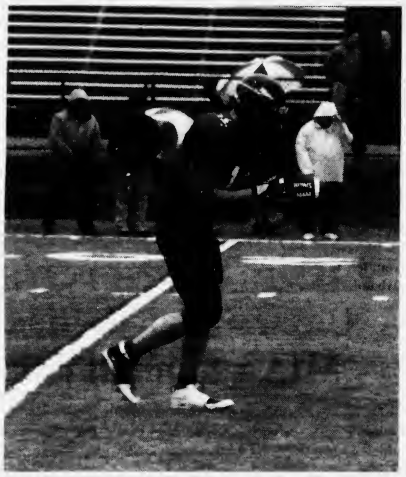
Alex Chan (the first of two for Chan on the day). On fourth down, McBrien dropped back in the pocket, looked to his right and then back to his left, and heaved a pass in the direction of senior Dave Guerriero. Unfortunately for McBrien and Guerriero, the pass got caught up in the wind and ended up in the arms of Quincy's Ted Walsh for an interception in the endzone.

The Presidents had a chance to put more points on the board before the half, but at the end of a long run, senior Camillo Arredondo was stripped of the ball at the North Quincy 25-yard line. North Quincy's Alex Tragellis pounced on the loose ball, and the Red Raiders took a knee, ending the opening half down 3-0.



NORTH QUINCY'S DENNIS MARTIN'S punt attempt late in the fourth quarter was blocked by Quincy's Pat Austin. The big special teams play led to the go-ahead touchdown by the Presidents.

The third quarter saw both defenses hold tight. North Quincy got the ball to begin the half, but Camillo Arredondo made up for his fumble at the end of the first half with a big interception stopping the Red Raiders' drive. Arredondo returned the ball all the way back to the North Quincy 24-yard line, but the offense could do nothing with the great field position.

The play of the defense after Arredondo's pick seemed to light a fire on the North Quincy sidelines, and McBrien and the offense used this to their advantage late in the third quarter and at the beginning of the fourth quarter. The Raiders' eight play scoring drive was accented by a 33-yard run by Guerriero down the left side. After two runs by Sibley and Guerriero brought the ball to the mouth of the goal line to begin the fourth quarter, McBrien called his own number and snuck through a crease on the offensive line for a two-yard touchdown. The successful extra point not only gave the Raiders the lead at 7-3, but it was also the first time in thirteen Thanksgiving Day quarters that a North Quincy team had found the endzone.

Trailing for the first time all day, the Presidents took their next possession and went three and out. This trend continued for both teams for the majority of the final quarter, and after Quincy punted the ball back to North with five minutes remaining, their season and their winning streak was in serious jeopardy.

The one thing that the Presidents had going for them was their experience and the fact that they had won so many times before on Thanksgiving. Their defense made the stops when they needed too most, their special teams came up with a huge play, and the offense and Boyle came through in the clutch. As a result, Quincy hoisted the trophy for the eighth straight year.

"To be honest, in the second half North Quincy outplayed us, " Noble said. "We dominated in the first half, controlled play, but we were a little frustrated, but give them credit, North Quincy played extremely well. This is a testament to our kids and coaches, who didn't stop playing because they knew the game was not over when we went behind, and to win eight in a row, sometimes you have to be lucky."

North Quincy and head coach Jim Connor were obviously upset with the outcome of the game, but the Red Raiders, according to Connor have every right to be proud off the way they played.

"It was very emotional in the locker room after the game," Connor said. "I didn't prepare a speech. I thought our defensive effort was our best of the year, and we showed that we belonged in this game. The heart and discipline we played with should help set the foundation for years to come."

For fans of this 74 year old rivalry, the 2006 edition lived up to the hype of a Thanksgiving Day game, and for the Quincy Presidents and head coach Bob Noble it meant one more Turkey Day dinner they can enjoy as city champions.

THE PRESIDENTS' DIEGO ARREDONDO successfully kicks a point after attempt. Arredondo's kick made the score 10-7. He also connected on a 29-yard field goal in the first quarter to give Quincy an early 3-0 lead.

QUINCY'S TOM HAZELHURST (17) takes a hand-off from quarterback Matt Boyle.

NORTH QUINCY'S DAVE GUERRIERO (37) runs with the ball. Terrence Sibley (42) and McBrien (7) follow the play.

Redstockings Win Tournament

The Quincy Redstockings, a 14 and under local baseball team, recently participated in and won the Tripe Crown Sports Fall River 14 and Under baseball tournament. The tournament included teams from New York, Connecticut and Massachusetts.

Winning this Triple Crown Sports Fall River tournament qualified the Redstockings for the National Fall Tournament in St. Augustine, Florida.

The Redstockings, behind a complete team effort, later played in and swept the Dan Duquette Labor Day Super Series Tournament in September.

While allowing just four runs and scoring thirty-eight, the Redstockings beat the Lake Shore Braves (Kirkland, Quebec), the Bellingham Bashers (Mass.), and the Columbia County Patriots (Albany, NY), and as a result, qualified for the National Winter Tournament in Phoenix, AZ at the end of December.

For Some Kids In Quincy, Soccer Is TOPS

Every Sunday, for six recent weeks, Malcolm McNeil and Robin Franceschini have met at the soccer fields at Quarry Hills just before noon.

Together, they roll out 20 or so soccer balls, set up orange cones and eight Pugg soccer goals, and within minutes, the empty field is transformed into a truly special soccer venue. As quickly as Malcolm and Robin roll out the balls, they are gathered in by the waiting feet of the eager players in Quincy's TOP Soccer program.

TOPSoccer is a community-based training and team placement program for young athletes, designed to bring the opportunity of learning and playing soccer to any boy or girl, ages 5 to 16, who has a mental, physical or educational disability.

McNeil brought the program to Quincy – one of only twelve communities in the entire state to offer it – in order to help young athletes with disabilities to become valued and successful members of the Mass Youth Soccer (MYSA) and Quincy Youth Soccer League (QYSL) family.

"I had concluded my time as president of Quincy Youth, and when I saw MYSA offering the program, I thought it would be great to get it started in our community," says McNeil.

And start it, he has.

In only its second year, the program has already almost doubled in size.

The first field at Quarry Hills was filled each of the Sundays with orange cones, smiling children of all ages and sizes, and their supportive parents along the sidelines.

Following one hour of drills led by Franceschini, a game is played – one where everyone is a winner. Each week, various coaches have assisted: Rich O'Hara, Quincy Youth soccer's president; Don Martin, the Quincy High girls' coach (and a mainstay of Quincy Youth Soccer) among them.

And what McNeil finds most gratifying, is the large number of "junior" coaches: middle school and high school players who have participated in the Quincy Youth program, and are now giving back by helping at TOPSoccer.

"I love coming every Sunday," says Franceschini. "The best part is all the smiling faces: the parents, the coaches, and – most of all – the kids. It is so rewarding for me to be part of this program, one I know is going to only get bigger and better each year."

Sterling Players Attend Coaching Clinic

Bob Noble, Quincy High School's varsity football coach, took a day out of his usual practice schedule to look to his team's future.

Noble, assistant coach Bill Reardon, and the Presidents' five varsity captains: Matt Boyle, Camillo Arredondo, Tom Hazelhurst, Charlie McGee and James Aikens, traveled down to the Sterling Middle School to help kick off the school's Flag Football season.

Coach Noble put the 35 Sterling players through a series of drills that were meant to teach proper stances, catching and handoff techniques and running postures. As the captains ran the drills, Noble and Reardon walked around giving tips, correcting form and offering well-deserved praise to these future high school players.

The Sterling players practiced coming up from stances on defense and running precise routes on offense with help from the five captains. Players also went through a drill to help them learn to "cover the points" when holding a football while the coaches tried to knock the ball out of their arms.

"The players were very helpful in teaching me how to carry the ball," 8th grader Tyshaun Peete said. "Thanks to the help of the Quincy captains it is so much easier to do a 3-point stance now that I have learned how to do it correctly."

Coach Noble finished the clinic by talking to the student-athletes about leadership both on the field and in the classroom. He encouraged them to do well in their academics so that they could pursue their dreams of playing high school football and potentially down the road, college football opportunities.

SCOTT DEWARE

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

Anger is a human trait. It has been a part of man since the beginning of time and since it is a natural emotion, anyone can get angry at times. Many references to anger and wrath are seen in the Bible.

It is a mental agitation, however, that should be controlled because it can be harmful. Any doctor will tell you anger causes blood pressures to go up. Release of uncontrolled anger can only give temporary satisfaction and that is certainly a high price to pay for probable shame and regret.

No one can completely extinguish anger. It is as natural as tenderness, sorrow, fear or joy. Because anger takes a heavy toll in mind and body, moderation is needed as a matter of self-concern. Jefferson once said, "When angry, count to ten before you speak; if very angry, count a hundred."

It was a good rule to live by in his time... It still is!

Quincy Asian Resources Meeting Wednesday

Quincy Asian Resources, Inc. (QARI) was scheduled to hold its annual meeting Wednesday, Nov. 29 at 6:30 p.m. in the Community Room of the Thomas Crane Public Library, Washington St., Quincy Center.

The event serves as the agency's yearly organizational meeting. The agenda included elections for the Board of Directors and officers and a presentation of the 2006 Annual Report.

Lorraine Tse, Abby Nguyen and Diana Ong were nominated for the Board of Directors. They join current board members Richard Hung, Paul Shaw, David Zou, Tackey Chan, Gene Lee, Ji Li Noiseux, Sheri Adlin, Jim Chen, Esther Lee, Jannie Mark, Frank Poon, Joseph Reardon, Beth Ann Strollo and Wan Wu.

Also recognized was Donna Thach, the organization's full-time Americorps*VISTA volunteer of last year, for her contributions to QARI - in particular for organizing QARI's first-ever youth conference. The conference introduced 80 Asian high school students to various career options. Ten of the students helped plan the event, gaining leadership skills and the aid of mentoring in the process.

Founded in 2001, Quincy Asian Resources, Inc.'s mission is to foster and promote the development of the social, cultural, economic and civic lives of Asian Americans to benefit the entire community. The services QARI provides include: low cost ESOL, citizenship, and computer classes; free multilingual information and referral services to connect those seeking public services and educational programs with the appropriate parties; and August Moon Festival and Lunar New Year Festival celebrations, to foster greater understanding of Asian culture in the community as a whole.

All services are augmented by the assistance of volunteers, who provide tutoring for our ESOL students, classroom assistance, translation work, and festival planning.

"Oh, most beautiful flower of Mt. Carmel, Fruitful vine, splendor of heaven, Blessed Mother of the Son of God, Immaculate Virgin, assist me in my necessity. Oh, Star of the Sea, help me and show me, herin you are my Mother. Oh, Holy Mary, Mother of God, Queen of Heaven and Earth! Oh, Mary, conceived without sin, pray for us who have recourse to thee (3X). Holy Mother, I place this cause in your hands (3X). Holy Spirit, you who solve all problems, light roads so that I can attain my goal. You gave me divine gift to forgive and forget all evil against me and that in all instances in my life you are with me. CENTURY MILESTONE— Mrs. Philomena Mancini (seated) receives a City Council certificate of recognition and congratulations from Ward 2 Councillor Dan Raymondi for her young 100th birthday. With her are her sister, Mary Kelliher, 93, and her daughters Antoinette Lewellen and Gloria Crozier. Quincy Sun photo/Robert Noble

'Someone Up There Must Like Me'

She's A Real Young 100 And Still Enjoys Shopping

Philomena (Pasquale) Mancini of Quincy Point reached the century milestone Saturday, as she celebrated her 100th birthday in good physical condition, surrounded by friends and family.

She attributes her longevity to clean and healthy living, avoiding such toxins as drinking and smoking, which has helped her to achieve an appearance far younger than her 100 years.

"I've been in good health," she said. "I never smoked or drank. I went for my check up, and there's nothing wrong with me. I'm 100 years old, how do you figure that out? I don't know, but someone up there must like me.

"I thank God every day. I say a prayer every night before I go to bed. I've had a good life, I never had to struggle for anything," she said.

Mrs. Mancini's family hosted a birthday celebration in her honor at Baypointe Inn, with approximately 75 friends and family members in attendance.

Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymondi later presented a certificate of recognition and appreciation to Mrs. Mancini at her home. The certificate congratulated her on behalf of the City Council, and recognized her for "endearing" herself to all who knew her.

"She's an incredible person who remains active, and she's a wonderful asset to the Quincy Point community," he said. "It was an honor recognizing her 100th birthday, she's amazing."

Mrs. Mancini's sister, Mary Kelliher, 93, and two daughters, Antoinette Lewellen and Gloria Crozier were at her home during her City Council recognition. She has another daughter, Jeannette Spaur, who was not present.

Mrs. Mancini is the wife of the late Nazzareno Mancini, a construction worker, who she said provided a consistent agreeable lifestyle for herself and her family. She has lived in the same Quincy home since 1942.

Her nephew, Robert Cerasoli, is a former State Representative and former Inspector General of Massachusetts.

The year Mrs. Mancini was born, 1906, Theodore Roosevelt was President of the United States, and continued serving for another three years. Earlier that year was the San Francisco earthquake and fire, April 18 and 19. It left 503 people dead, and $350 million worth of damages.

Mrs. Mancini is still active and enjoys shopping, collecting dolls, and crochets afghans and doll clothing. She also attended bingo up until last year.

Average Increase
$98 For Homeowners

New Tax Rates: $10.44 Residential $22.40 Commercial

By MIKAELA SLANEY

The City Council Monday night accepted the proposed tax classification from Mayor William Phelan for Fiscal 2007 of 183 percent of fair market value, a $98 increase for the average home.

The new residential rate will be $10.44 of every $1,000 of a home's value, increased from $10.33 in Fiscal 2006. The commercial rate is $22.40.

The FY07 Levy is $146,359,623 from $139,310,371 in FY06. The levy limit is $155,055,727, with an excess of $8,696,104.

Councillor John Keenan, chairman of the Finance Committee, said this excess would prove useful in the event that construction of the new high school goes over it's spending limit.

Last year, the City Council surprised the business community by raising its tax classification to the state limit of 189 percent of fair market value. Business owners spoke against the shift during the preceding public hearing. This year, no one spoke or signed for or against the proposed tax rate.

Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymondi said that he was disappointed to see that the average value of houses has increased, when he said that sales have recently slowed. The average value given for a home for FY07 is $362,100, an increase from the FY06 average value of $356,100.

"These values should be less," he said. There are very few homes in Quincy that are valued more today than 2005. When you look at these numbers, they're pretty staggering."

$334 Million MBTA Plan Would Include Red Line

A proposed $334 million MBTA capital improvements plan would include ugrading the Red Line.

Senator Michael Morrissey and Reps. Steven Tobin, Ronald Mariano and Bruce Ayers announce MBTA General Manager Daniel Grabauskas has presented the plan to the MBTA Board for the fiscal years 2008 to 2012.

MICHAEL MORRISSEY

STEPHEN TOBIN

RONALD MARIANO

BRUCE AYERS

Upgrading the Red Line's power sup[ply and switch systems Is part of the plan's $19.2 million rail improvement proposal.

"One of the causes of Red Line delays is the aging power system and switch system," said Morrissey. "The switches and signals at the JFK/Columbia junction is a major cause for delay and the MBTA proposes to begin designs for a new system in the summer of 2007."

"Transformers and power substations along the Red Line would either be upgraded or replaced depending on the age and condition of the units, " Ayers added. "The designs to conduct the upgrades would begin in the Fall of 2007."

The MBTA is proposing to allocate $10 million for garage renovations which will be used at the Quincy Center, Quincy Adams and Braintree Red Line stations, which are heavily used.

"These important renovations will upgrade our aging garages" said Tobin. "Under the proposal, preliminary designs would be expected to begin in fiscal year 2008."

Mariano noted, "Some of the improvements include repairing concrete, replacing expansion joints, fixing drainage, improving the lighting and signage."

The MBTA wants to have the Wollaston Station be in compliance with the American Disabilities Act (ADA).

"The Wollaston Station is not very accessible for senior citizens, people in wheelchairs and any one requiring a crutch, cane or walker to get around," said Morrissey. The Capital Improvement Plan allocates $1.5 million for a preliminary design to begin in fiscal year 2009.

"I have been advocating for increasing accessibility to this station for many years," said Ayers. "I am glad to hear that Wollaston Station is now a priority for the MBTA.

Two million has been allocated to construct new parking spaces at the Fore River Shipyard's commuter boat parking lot. The construction of 169 parking spaces would begin in the Spring of 2008.

"The expansion of parking reflects the MBTA's continued commitment on using commuter boats in the region," said Mariano. "Community boats are an important component for public transit in the region."

"Quincy is a major gateway for public transit commuters in Quincy and the South Shore," said Morrissey. "This commitment by the MBTA over the next five fiscal years will greatly improve the quality of service here." Additional information on the MBTA's five year capital plan is available on the Internet at www.mbta.com.

The $334 million plan is undergoing public hearings through Dec. 14 and the MBTA will take public testimony until Dec. 31. After the public input is completed for MBTA Board of Directors will vote on a final plan next Spring.

49 Community Leaders Team To Ring Bell For Salvation Army

Forty-nine community leaders will ring the bell for the Salvation Army in Quincy Center for three days to help those in need this holiday season.

They will man a kettle outside City Hall on one hour shifts beginning this Friday and again Thursday, Dec. 14 and Friday, Dec. 15.

Mayor William Phelan, one of the volunteers, has proclaimed December "Salvation Army Month" in Quincy.

Individuals or groups who would like to volunteer at a kettle are asked to contact the Quincy Temple Corps at 6 Baxter St. or by calling 617-472-2345.

Looking for an investment that's guaranteed to grow?

What's the main problem with stock market investments and mutual funds? Simple – you just can't be sure that your money will grow. In fact, you can't even be sure that your principal won't shrink. And while no one would deny that market-based investments should at least be considered as part of a diversified investment plan, sometimes you have money you don't want to put at risk in any way. Maybe it's money you're going to need soon. Maybe it's your IRA or Roth IRA. Maybe you're a conservative saver who simply wants investments that are guaranteed to grow. We understand. Which is why we don't sell stocks. We don't sell mutual funds. We don't sell annuities. Colonial Federal is a community bank providing competitive-rate options for today's conservative saver. If you're looking for a safe investment that's 100% guaranteed to grow, come see us. On Dec. 4, 1936, actress Tallulah Bankhead auditions unsuccessfully for the role of Scarlett O'Hara in "Gone With the Wind." Vivien Leigh later auditioned and won the part.

On Dec. 5, 1945, five U.S. Navy Avenger torpedo-bombers take off from the Ft. Lauderdale Naval Air Station in Florida on a routine three-hour training mission and never return. The bombers flew over the Bermuda Triangle, an area of the Atlantic Ocean where ships and aircraft are said to disappear without a trace.

On Dec. 6, 1955, the Federal government standardizes the size of license plates throughout the U.S. Previously, individual states had designed their own license plates.

On, Dec. 10, 1974, Arkansas Democratic Representative Wilbur Mills resigns as chairman of the Ways and Means Committee. Mills had been stopped by Washington park police while driving at night, intoxicated, with his lights off. His companion, who jumped into the Tidal Basin, was later identified as a popular stripper who went by the names "Fanne Foxe" and the "Argentine Firecracker."

On Dec. 8, 1993, the North American Free Trade Agreement is signed into law by President Bill Clinton. That Poll Buzz

There's a buzz on the political grapevine.

It's about a poll-probably two-believed taken to size up next year's city election picture with the mayor's office the apparent main focus.

PHELAN

The speculation:

Was the poll for a candidate thinking of challenging Mayor William Phelan? Or for one checking the political strengths of potential candidates just in case Phelan decides not to run.

Phelan has not yet publicly announced his candidacy for a fourth term. Privately, he has indicated he will run.

And a fourth term run looks like a sure thing right now.

Out this week are invitations to a holiday reception fundraiser for Phelan set for Thursday, Dec. 28, 5:30-7:30 p.m. at the Neighborhood Club. Suggested donations: $125, $250, $500.

Sounds like a re-election campaign launch.

The polls cover name recognition, favorable and unfavorable reaction, job performance and various issues.

Quite a few names are included in addition to Phelan's.

City Council President Doug Gutro, Councillors Joseph Finn, Dan Raymondi, John Keenan, Michael McFarland, Kevin Coughlin, Jay Davis, School Committee member Anne Mahoney, Tom Koch, executive director of the Park and Forestry Departments and maybe more.

There could be some camouflage in that mix of names.

One of the polls apparently was taken before the state election which included such names as state Treasurer Tim Cahill, and gubernatorial candidates Kerry Healey and Deval Patrick.

Those names may have been tossed in for camouflage.

Finn and Raymondi have come close to running in the recent past and no doubt are still interested.

But could there be a surprise in that mix of names?

GERALD FORD now holds the Presidential longevity record, dropping Quincy's John Adams to third place.

Ford turned 93 on July 14 and last month reached 93 years and 121 days. That surpassed Ronald Reagan who was 93 and 120 days old when he died two years ago.

Reagan had topped Adams, the long-time record holder, who lived to be 90-just three months and 15 days from his 91st birthday.

Adams died July 4, 1826 on the 50th anniversary of the Declaration of Independence in which he played a major role. Thomas Jefferson, who wrote the document, died the same day at age 83.

John Quincy Adams lived to age 80, serving in Congress after his presidency, where he collapsed and died Feb. 23, 1848.

The three other living former presidents are Jimmy Carter, 82, George H.W. Bush, 82, and Bill Clinton, 60.

SPEAKING OF John Adams, you might say that Abigail's father wondered if she married the right man.

John and Abigail were married Oct. 25, 1764 by her father, Rev. William Smith, minister of First Church of Weymouth.

The Reverend reportedly wasn't too impressed by his new son in-law. He didn't think the then Quincy farmer would amount to much in life.

FAGERLUND

BURKE

Fagerlund, class of 1935 for his 69th and Burke, 1950 class, for his 63rd.

Although the 74 year rivalry is now a Thanksgiving Day must for fans and grads of both schools, the game was not always played on that day.

The early ones, starting in 1933 were played on Armistice Day (Veterans Day) and on a couple on Saturdays.

The first played on Thanksgiving Day was in 1938, and the first played at Veterans Memorial Stadium.

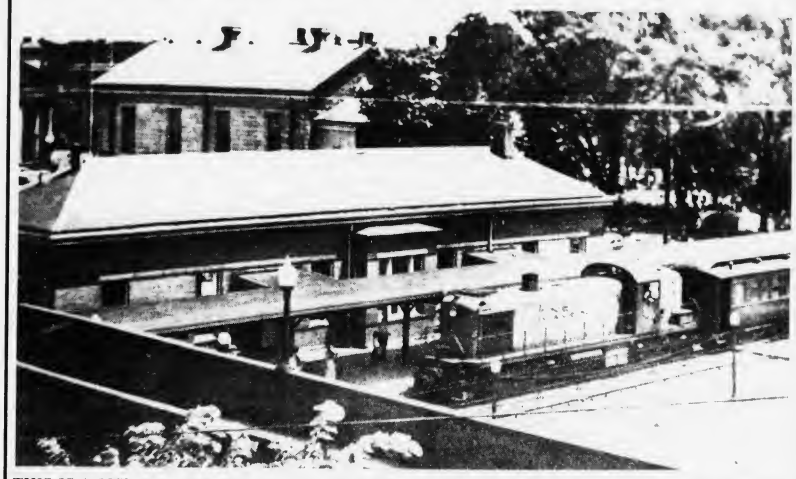
Scenes From Yesterday



THIS IS A 1952 real photo postcard view of the old Quincy Center railroad station that was on Depot Street. It was then part of the New Haven Railroad, the last private operator of the train service in Quincy. Diesel powered passenger trains like the one shown here were later replaced by the self propelled Budd cars before use of this station was discontinued by the New Haven in 1959. The MBTA replaced this station with the present Red Line Station and garage when train service was resumed in 1971. The footbridge in the left foreground connected Upland Road to the station. Protect Neighborhoods Already Experiencing Changes

My husband and I lived in a wonderful neighborhood in Quincy for over 25 years. In that time we have enjoyed wonderful friendships with neighbors; we have watched our children grow up alongside theirs, and we have had the benefit of living in a safe, welcoming neighborhood.

We are now writing as deeply concerned citizens of Quincy. An article published in The Quincy Sun on Nov. 16 is impetus for this note. The article discussed Mayor Phelan's commitment to protecting neighborhoods in Quincy by reducing the non-traditional residential development that has recently been moving ahead at warp speeds throughout the city.

Our sleepy little Wollaston neighborhood has recently experienced fundamental changes due to the development of a 5-unit condominium building that is dwarfing what is otherwise a neighborhood of modest single-family and two-family homes. We feel disheartened that the city allowed this development to occur without even requiring a variance. After living in a neighborhood for 25 years, it is hard to watch a developer come in and at his will, design and build something with no regard for the existing character of our neighborhood.

We did what any concerned group of neighbors would do. We met with lawyers and our city councillor, Kevin Coughlin, to find out what rights we had, if any. A community group of approximately 20 neighbors, along with city officials, met with the developer who promised respite with fencing and landscaping. This would allow him to meet his profit margins, but do so in a way that was respectful and decent to the people who have lived in and loved this neighborhood for over 25 years.

We write to ask Mayor Phelan that he not only protect Quincy neighborhoods going forward, but that he protect neighborhoods that are already experiencing changes from development. We believe that if his concern is sincere, he will feel compelled to help not only members of our neighborhoods but members of other areas who may be experiencing similar changes.

We are asking that the mayor help us to hold the developer to his word. We are asking that you send a message to developers in Quincy that profit-maximization should not be at the expense of Quincy's neighborhoods. We are asking that he make it clear that to do business in Quincy, you have to do things in a civil manner that is respectful to our community.

We feel hopeful that Mayor Phelan will hear our voices and make an investment to protect the quality of life in our neighborhoods.

Fore River Bridge Widening Sought To Help Shipyard

This Week
1968
38 Years Ago

By FRANK MCCAULEY

A new move is underway to widen the span of the Fore River Bridge to at least 300 feet to allow General Dynamics-Quincy Division to bid on contracts for supersized ships.

Mayor - Senator James R. McIntyre has filed a bill which would direct the state Department of Public Works to modify the present structure to "provide a horizontal opening of not less than 300 feet."

The present bridge, dating back to the early 1030's, has a horizontal clearance of only 175 feet between abutments on the water line.

NEW HOUGHS NECK CENTER SPANS GENERATION GAP

In two short weeks of operation the Sgt. Lawrence Gicham Youth Center in Houghs Neck has built a major bridge across the generation gap. An improved relationship between youths and adults may be one of the major dividends emerging from the new center.

The center's ad hoc director, Fr. Eugene Boyle of Blessed Sacrament Church, recognizes that the center is not the final answer, but it is, he rates, an important step.

Actor Jim Cooke's Historic Characters At Historical Society

Actor Jim Cooke will offer a first-time-anywhere presentation focusing on how he creates a historical characterization Thursday, Dec. 7 at 7:30 p.m. at the Quincy Historical Society, Adams Academy, 8 Adams St., Quincy Center.

Cooke, a Quincy resident, has been performing solo history since 1985. His presentations have taken him around the country to Mount Rushmore, presidential libraries, the National Archives, Library of Congress and the White House. He has created a distinctive repertoire of historic characters: John Quincy Adams, Daniel Webster, Calvin Coolidge and Edward Everett.

Each of these men was sharply individual and at the same time they all share a characteristic New England flintiness. Cooke will discuss the process of deciding on a historic figure and touch on some figures who did not work out. He will then discuss how as an actor he brings a historic character to life and will become each of these characters in turn, giving a sample of each man's story, including some anecdotes appropriate to the Holiday Season.

The evening will be an informative and different theatrical experience, with characterizations that are both amusing and emotionally moving. It will also be the first time that John Quincy Adams, Daniel Webster, Calvin Coolidge and Edward Everett have ever appeared together.

Seasonal refreshments will be served. The public is welcome to attend. There is no charge for admission.

Neighborhood Meeting Dec. 14 On Montessori School Plan

City Council President Doug Gutro has called a neighborhood meeting Thursday, Dec. 14 at 7 p.m. at the Bernazzani School, Furnace Brook Parkway, to discuss a proposal to convert the former Columban Fathers property at 310 Adams St. into a Montessori School.

In June, 2005, the Columban Fathers sold the property to the Adams Street Foundation, Inc., a private, non-profit educational foundation.

In November, 2005, Councillor Kevin Coughlin and Gutro co-hosted a public meeting at which representatives of the City of Quincy's Law office and Inspectional Services Department discussed the legal and zoning rules that apply to this property and proposed use.

In July, 2006, Montessori School of Quincy submitted plans to built a school at this location at the Department of Inspectional Services.

On Oct. 24, 2006, The Inspectional Services Department issued a denial of their permit application, citing violations of the Quincy zoning ordinance, specifically related to height and setback requirements.

Montessori School recently hired the local law firm of Fleming and Fleming. Gutro has invited individuals to appear at this forum and update area residents on any and all information that they may have relative to the potential future of this parcel.

Invited are:

Robert Quinn, Assistant City Solicitor

Jay Duca, Director of Quincy's Inspectional Services.

David Werlich, President, Adams Street Foundation, Inc.

Quincy High Competes In Second Academic Decathlon

Quincy High School was among the 24 schools that recently participated at Sharon High School in the Massachusetts large-school regional scrimmage in preparation for the United States Academic Decathlon.

Local, regional and state competitions can lead to the national finals which this academic year will take place in Honolulu, Hawaii in April.

"Our team showed great improvement this year," Coach Evelyn Ryan said. "Our standings were higher and our team is twice the size it was last year. With one more round of competition, we have an excellent chance of making it to States."

The United States Academic Decathlon was created to provide opportunities for students to experience the challenges of rigorous team and individual competition.

Each team competes in ten events—economics, language and literature, art, music, mathematics, social science, science, essay, interview, and speech. Each year the science or social science is used as the Super Quiz topic.

A new theme of study is established every year with topics that are relevant, current and challenging. This year's focus involves China and climatology.

"These will both be of major importance in the twenty-first century," Ryan said. "The students gain a remarkable amount of knowledge in their daily preparation for competition. There's really no way to lose taking part in an event like this."

Gold, silver and bronze medals are awarded for individual events and total scores. Overall individual winners are recognized, as are champion teams. "On our team this year, the Coach's gold medal goes to Tina Hicks, team captain," Ryan said. "She made a tremendous effort in the regional scrimmage and she is determined to take the team to States."

Marie's Kitchen

Festive Creamy Frostings

I'm always looking for a nice soft creamy frosting when I'm baking a cake.

One day I came across not one, but two easy recipes with one of them a great one to use at Christmas because it includes Rum in place of vanilla if desired. The other is for peanut butter lovers of which I am one.

Here are the two frosting tried and true recipes.

Vanilla Cream Cheese Frosting
1 stick butter
1-8 ounce package cream cheese
2 teaspoons dark Rum (or vanilla)
1 package (16 ounces) confectionery sugar
red or green coloring (optional)

Mix butter, cream cheese and vanilla (or rum) for 2 minutes. Slowly add the confectionery sugar and beat until light and creamy.

Peanut Butter Frosting
1/2 cup butter or margarine (1 stick)
1/2 cup peanut butter
1-3 ounce package cream cheese
1 teaspoon vanilla
2 cups confectionery sugar
2 tablespoons milk

Mix the butter, peanut butter, cream cheese and vanilla until smooth. Slowly add the confectionery sugar and milk and beat until creamy.

Jesus, on the other hand, loves you regardless of whether you're naughty or nice.

Unconditional love and forgiveness are the Christmas gifts of Jesus Christ. Join us as we celebrate the miracle of his birth.

ST. MARY SCHOOL of Quincy recently celebrated its fifth annual Multicultural Day. Students from every grade explored the customs and cultures of countries around the world. Above, seventh graders Seamus Keaveny and Nicole Lamie stand in front of the kindergarten castle celebrating "Our World of Families."

SIXTH GRADER Christopher Palluccio (left) and fourth grader Shayna Boyle worked on a project about Lebanon, the country of their family's origin. They also served tabule, a Lebanese salad, and humus, a chick pea dip – traditional Lebanese food at the St. Mary School Multicultural Day.

TIMOTHY LAYDEN, a first grader at St. Mary School of Quincy, with his class project on Antarctica, at the school's recent Multicultural Day. Besides class projects, the event also featured ethnic food served to guests. The project offered students the opportunity to expand their knowledge of the world and its people.

Crane Library Receives Two Grants For Health, Adult, Teen Programs

The Thomas Crane Public Library has received two grants from the Americans for Libraries Council (ALC) to develop services and programs related to health, teens, and older adults.

ALC is a national nonprofit organization whose purpose is to promote new approaches to sustaining and developing libraries in the 21st century.

The library recently received a $10,000 ALC grant to develop the library as a health and wellness resource center for the entire community, with an emphasis on teens and their families.

Library director Ann McLaughlin said, "The grant will allow us to add to our collection, enhance our website, and offer a variety of programs in the library. We hope to raise the level of awareness and understanding of health issues facing Quincy families by coordinating our efforts with other groups and individuals in the community who provide health and wellness services. Only 12 libraries in the entire country are receiving funding for the program, so it's a great opportunity for Quincy."

Library staff are planning a range of Fit for Life activities for 2007, including seminars and workshops on nutrition, exercise, safety and healthy lifestyles, as well as a community-wide health and wellness fair.

In the spring of 2006, the library was one of 15 Massachusetts libraries to participate in ALC's Equal Access Libraries professional development program and receive a $5,000 EqualAccess LSTA grant to expand programs and services for youth, baby boomers and older adults.

One component of the grant gave two library staff members an opportunity to participate in the Equal Access Institute, a four-day training that took place earlier this year. Staff received training in providing innovative, community-specific services to youth and to adults aged 50 and older. Over the next year, the library will use the $5,000 to introduce new programs and services for these target audiences.

Plans include creating a safe and welcoming physical and virtual space for tweens and teens in the library, and partnering with other community organizations to offer a variety of activities, civic projects and media projects to engage young people in their community. The library will also seek to provide older adults with the information they need for lifelong learning and productive aging by developing resource centers for adults both in the library and online, and by offering expanded technology classes and programs.

EqualAccess Libraries was developed by Libraries for the Future (LFF), ALC's programming wing. In Massachusetts, the EqualAccess program represents a collaboration between the ALC and the Massachusetts Board of Library Commissioners, which has dedicated $300,000 of its federal Library Services & Technology Act (LSTA) grant funds to EqualAccess grants over a three-year period (2006-2008).

Gutro Attends National League Of Cities Expo

City Council President Doug Gutro is attending the National League of Cities Congress of Cities Expo in Reno, Nev., which opened Wednesday.

Gutro will participate in workshops on emergency preparedness, municipal finance, targeting downtown redevelopment, tourism, technology and diversity/changing demographics.

In addition, he plans to participate in the First Tier Suburbs Council meeting. First tier suburbs are the municipalities located outside of the central cities, but inside the ring of developing suburbs and rural areas. First tier suburb communities share common interests on transportation, housing, changing demographics and revitalization issues.

"It is a privilege to represent the city of Quincy at this important national venue," said Gutro. "These forums provide opportunities to share our city's many successes, but as importantly, to learn from other communities across the nation that share common challenges."

The National League of Cities is the oldest and largest national organization representing municipal governments throughout the United States. NLC serves as a national resource and advocate on behalf of over 1,600 member cities and 49 state municipal leagues whose membership totals more than 18,000 cities and towns across the country.

Neponset River Bridge In Phase 1 Of Construction

Project representatives updated the City Council Monday night to the reconstruction process of the Neponset River Bridge, Route 3A, a main connection between North Quincy and Dorchester.

Mark Griffen, project engineer, and George Kober, engineering consultant with Dewberry-Goodkind, Inc., said that the construction process is in Phase 1, and could take several years. Phase 1 consists of holding the bridge up on temporary steel columns, while contractors demolish and reconstruct the 23 deteriorating piers in the river below.

Griffin said that construction is not block a lane, but there may be traffic due to the "curiosity factor."

Griffin also said that the bridge is not designed for an increased capacity, but may include ornamental lighting.

OBITUARY

Edward T. Martin, 86

News Reporter, WWII Veteran
Confidant To Senator Kennedy

Edward T. Martin, 86, of Dennisport and Quincy, former newspaper reporter, government official and long-time aide and confidant to Senator Edward Kennedy Sunday died at his home in Dennisport.

Born and raised in East Boston, he was a graduate of Boston College High School, class of 1936 and attended Boston University until joining the U.S. Marine Corps at the outbreak of World War II. He was a drill instructor before serving in the Pacific and China.

He lived in Dennisport for 28 years and maintained a home in Quincy for many years. Previously he lived seven years in Rockville, MD.

Following World War II, he worked on daily newspapers in West Virginia and Rhode Island before joining the Boston Post. When the Post stopped publishing, he joined the Boston Herald Traveler and advanced to city editor. He covered major New England stories between 1948 and 1962, from murders to prison riots, hurricanes, the Brink's trial and the inauguration of John F. Kennedy. He was the only New England reporter to witness an early atomic detonation.

His first association with Senator Kennedy began as a reporter covering the early political career of President John F. Kennedy. In 1960, shortly after the presidential inauguration, he was asked to handle press relations for Edward Kennedy in his first campaign for the U.S. Senate. He was an advisor in every subsequent campaign, including Senator Kennedy's 1980 campaign for president. He served as Kennedy's top administrative aide in Washington from 1971 to 1977 and as a director of Kennedy's district office in Boston in the 1980's.

In 1977, President Carter appointed Mr. Martin as New England Regional Director for the Department of Housing and Urban Development, where he played a role in redeveloping Boston's waterfront and in helping the region recover from the severe Blizzard of 1978.

Mr. Martin also served in various other government posts, as public relations officer for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration during the late 1960's and as Director of Space Management for the General Services Administration during the early 1980's.

He retired in 1990.

Mr. Martin was a board member of the Kennedy Library Foundation in Boston.

He was the husband for 58 years of Marguerite E. (Pothier) Martin, father of Marilu Swett Spector of Jamaica Plain, Jane M. Doncaster of Pittsburgh, PA, Thomas E. Martin of Beverly, Michael P. Martin of Bethesda, MD and the late Susan E. Hayes.

He is also survived by six grandchildren and many nieces and nephews.

A funeral Mass will be celebrated in St. John the Baptist Church, 44 School St., today (Thursday) at 10 a.m. Burial will be in Blue Hill Cemetery, Braintree.

Visiting hours at the Sweeney Brothers Home for Funerals, 1 Independence Ave., Quincy, were scheduled for Wednesday from 4 to 7 p.m.

For those who wish, donations in Mr. Martin's memory may be made to Father Bill's Place, 38 Broad St., Quincy, MA 02169.

New Tax Rates: $10.44 Residential $22.40 Commercial

"I think everyone shares Councillor Raymondi's frustration," said Ward 4 Councillor Jay Davis.

Chief Assessor Marion Fantuccio countered, saying that estimates are required by the state to be taken from sales from the previous year, and the early part of the new year.

"This is how it's always going to be," she said. "Yes sales are taking longer, but that is not the norm."

With the increase in residential value, the real estate tax increased by 2.67 percent, while it only increased by 1.2 percent in FY06 over FY05.

"All this value is being born by the residential homeowner," said Raymondi. "I'm hoping these values will decrease by next year. I am not happy with the (2.27) percent real estate tax increase, it should be zero."

"The good news is the tax rate is not as bad as expected because of new growth and local receipts," said Keenan.

For Technology Center

Bank Of America Foundation Awards $20,000 To Quincy Community Action

The Bank of America Foundation recently awarded Quincy Community Action Programs, Inc. (QCAP) $20,000 to support the agency's Learning Links Technology Center.

For many years, Bank of America has been a dedicated supporter of QCAP's mission and services. This latest grant will enable QCAP to expand the scope and number of computer classes offered at Learning Links, and add financial literacy education to help low-income households set up and maintain budgets, repair their credit, and establish bank accounts.

Robert Kenworthy, senior vice president and client manager for Small Business Banking, and Paul Anghinetti, senior vice president and market manager for Small Business Banking presented the award to QCAP's Executive Director Beth Ann Strollo.

"We are proud of our partnership with QCAP and the Learning Links Technology Center. The center provides key training and support to people who haven't had the chance to build technology skills, and helps low-income households find resources that will help them become self-sufficient. We at Bank of America are committed to creating economic self-sufficiency opportunities for all families in our communities by supporting programs like Learning Links," said Anghinetti.

Since March 2004, Learning Links has provided free computer access for low-income South Shore residents who wish to learn basic computer skills or to use the Internet. The center is a place for people of all ages, who do not have computers at home or who cannot pay for an Internet connection, to build essential computer skills. Learning Links services are provided free of charge to low-income residents.

Members have access to the center's 12 computers, email, Internet, and Microsoft Office software, as well as computer training courses and special activities. Staff and volunteers are on-site to help users get started, and answer questions. The center has a play area for children, so families are welcome.

"Once again, Bank of America has partnered with QCAP to support opportunities for low-income people. We could not continue to expand services at Learning Links and connect people with the vast range of opportunities that technology provides without them. QCAP applauds the Bank of America for their strong commitment to expanding economic opportunities to low-income residents," said Strollo.

Quincy Community Action Programs, Inc. (QCAP) is a private, nonprofit organization that provides a variety of services to low and moderate-income people to help them improve the quality of their lives and move towards economic self-sufficiency.

Established in 1965 as one of Massachusetts' 24 community action agencies (CAAs), QCAP addresses the needs of residents in Quincy, and surrounding Norfolk County and South Shore communities. For more information call (617) 479-8181 x 100 or visit www.qcap.org.

Learning Links is located at 1511 Hancock St. in Quincy Center. Membership is free for low-income households. To become a member, enroll in a class, volunteer, or to find out more drop by the center or contact (617) 479-8181 x 183.

Life-Long Learning And Care For All Ages

Beechwood Center Celebrates 25 Years Of Community Service

Beechwood Community Life Center recently hosted a breakfast celebration in tribute to 25 years of community service.

Judy Paul, president of the center's Board of Directors, and widow of founder Dr. Cecil Paul, was the guest speaker. She shared memories about Beechwood's origin in 1981.

Beechwood was created with the closing of Beechwood Knolle Elementary School on Fenno Street. The property was deeded to the city by Grossman Family Foundation on the condition that it be used for educational and cultural enrichment.

With the guidance of former Mayor Arthur Tobin, a "visionary plan" for the property was created by Dr. Cecil Paul, of Eastern Nazarene School. He researched un-met needs of the community, especially of teachers who lost jobs with the closing of the school.

Former Mayor Frank McCauley, the City Council, School Department, Donald Strong, former assistant director of Regional Office on Aging, and later first full-time Quincy COA director, Janet Powell, former school councillor and current director of Quincy Public School's Student Support Services, helped identify community needs. They also helped to design programming and rally community support and volunteers.

Through volunteerism and donations, Beechwood became the city's Intergenerational Center, committed to "life long learning and care," for all age groups.

Today the center includes:

• An "Early Childhood Education Center," which is accredited by NAEYC, and recently expanded with an infant/toddler program, and the development of an outdoor classroom.

• A Senior Drop-In Center has also expanded with a wide-range of educational, social, and recreational offerings. One popular event, the annual "Senior Olympic Games," draws tourism among Massachusetts retirees. Mayor William Phelan and city departments provide support for the event.

• The Beechwood Music School provides evening music classes by trained instructors.

• The Aviation History Center holds meetings and events celebrating the four chapters of Quincy, New England and national aviation history. The next meeting is Tuesday, Dec. 12 at 6:30 p.m.

$400 Rebates For Seniors Still Hanging

By MIKAELA SLANEY

If $400 rebates do not make it to the hands of senior residents soon, it is not for lack of trying.

Mayor William Phelan's Neighborhood Stabilization Fund has been making trips back and forth between the City Council Chambers and the Mayor's office since it was proposed back in January of 2005.

The order is intended to make it possible to set excess money aside at the end of the year to provide financial assistance to seniors on a fixed income, 62 years of age and older, who have lived in their homes for 20 years or longer.

Once again the order was returned to the City Council Monday night without Phelan's signature. The Council amended the order removing the only designated funding source and sent it back to the mayor's office once again.

Assistant to the mayor David Murphy said that Phelan could not accept the legislation as it stood because an included funding source from Quincy College for the exclusive use of city-owned Saville Hall.

Murphy said these funds are already tied up in the Tax Classification, submitted earlier during the meeting. However, Murphy said that Phelan is still committed to establishing the Stabilization Fund. Murphy estimated that 21,000 seniors would be eligible to receive the rebates.

Councillor John Keenan once again showed strong opposition to the order, saying that it perpetuated a myth that seniors would be receiving money.

"Why are you getting people's hopes up?" he asked. "Why give them false hope? People who need the money won't get it. It's flawed, and what happened tonight shows how flawed it is.

"I don't think a funding source exists, and it's not fair to tell Phelan 'fund this.'"

Keenan also pointed out that landlords may increase rent because of resulting real estate taxes. The increased rent could come out of the pockets of the people the fund was intended to assist, he said.

Ward 1 Councillor Leo Kelly was optimistic. "Since it came from the mayor's office, I'm going to trust that the mayor has a source," he said.

New Pizza Parlor Opens At Presidents Place

A new pizza parlor will be open soon at Presidents Place, 1250 Hancock St.

It was formerly Lazerino's and will now be called Stash's Pizza, 1250 Hancock St.

The License Board at Tuesday's meeting granted a common victualer, and a first time beer and wine license to Steven Pappas, owner.

Dave Bressler will be the general manager.

Police Chief Robert Crowley said that beer and wine should only be served inside the shop. Bressler said he would make sure that no drinks will be in the Atrium, but kept inside.

Bressler, who is TIPS trained said he would always check ID's and said he would not serve anyone with a license outside of Massachusetts.

The hours of operation will be from 7 a.m. to 9 p.m. Monday through Friday, and from 7 a.m. to 2 p.m. Saturdays. They will be closed on Sundays.

The request now goes to the Alcohol Beverage Control Commission for approval.

New Eatery Takes 'Kwincy' As Name

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO

A new eatery Kwincy's Bar & Grille will open soon on the site of Kelly's, 35-37 Cottage Ave.

The License Board at Tuesday's meeting granted a transfer of the common victualer, all alcoholic license from Jim & Dick's Restaurant doing business as Kelly's to Bob & Steve's Restaurant doing business as Kwincy's Bar & Grille.

Robert Boulas will be the manager and Steve Hanrahan, assistant manager.

The board also granted a pinball/juke box/ entertainment license. All licenses are pending inspections from the Building and Fire Departments.

Boulas told the board that his family has been involved in the food business for years. He said his family owned the Holiday Inn in Rockland where he worked in all aspects of the business including maintenance, working in the kitchen and bar.

He said he was formerly employed as an iron worker for 20 years until he hurt his back. Now he says he wants the restaurant to be "his new home," and said he would be there a minimum of 60 hours a week.

The hours will be from 7 a.m. go 1 a.m. seven days a week.

Although there will be no major renovations, Matthew Albanese, counsel for Boulas said new bathrooms will be installed, plus some cosmetic renovating.

Boulas said the menu will be an "American Menu" featuring homemade entrees cooked fresh and "home-like as delicious as possible"

He said there will be turkey and roast beef dinners, steak tips, seafood with a special each Wednesday including corned beef and cabbage.

Maralin Manning, executive director of the Quincy Business Association, said she was "very anxious" to have the restaurant re-open and added it's been a "long time quiet" and "time to liven the area up."

The request now goes to the Alcohol Beverage Control Commission for approval.

WINTER FOOT CARE

Cold winter weather presents conditions that can be unfriendly to the feet. Most of us confine our feet with woolly socks and heavy shoes and boots during the winter, which increases the risk of fungal infections. Fungal infections are more common in the winter because of the moisture created from wearing heavy socks and not allowing feet to breathe properly. Ingrown toenails may also occur if toenails are cut improperly and then press against the inside of shoes. To help prevent these and other foot problems, wash and dry feet thoroughly each day. Use a quality talcum foot powder to keep feet dry and fight infection. Change shows and socks daily, alternating shoes if possibly to air them out.

Since life can be complicated enough without having to contend with problems that can be corrected, professional advice from a podiatrist who has been specially trained to care for feet is your best defense. We're on your side no matter what seasonal woes are causing problems with your feet. From fungal infections and ingrown toenails to bunions and sports injuries, we can help at 999 North Main Street, in the MEDICAL OFFICE BUILDING. Office hours are by appointment – call 781-986-3668. Office hours also available at the Quincy Medical Center and Milton Medical Building. I am affiliated with the Brockton and Good Samaritan Hospitals.

HINT: The American Podiatric Medical Association estimates that 2.5 million Americans are treated for fungal infections each year.

A Job Well Done

On Wednesday, Nov. 22, at approximately 6:45 p.m., Fallon Ambulance, along with Officers Dan Parisi and Paul Foley were dispatched to the Fox and Hounds Restaurant on a report of an assault that just took place. Upon arrival, Officer Parisi located the victim, who was also the caller, sitting on a curb of the parking lot. The victim was bleeding from the mouth, had a medium sized bump on his forehead with a small amount of blood, and appeared incoherent.

LT. DAN MINTON

Officer Parisi also noted a strong odor of alcohol was coming from the victim. The victim was able to relay what happened.

He said that he and two friends, who were also co-workers, had been drinking for a long period of time at the bar, then left to go to his truck. The victim did not want to drive because he was impaired, then decided that his friend (suspect #1) who had the keys and was about to drive, was also too intoxicated.

The victim said he took the keys out of the ignition and an argument ensued as he exited the truck and began to walk away. The victim said that he was about 10 feet way from the truck when the suspects attacked him from behind.

The victim stated he fell to the ground and took up a fetal position to protect himself, then was kicked in the head and side of his body by suspect #1. The victim added that suspect #2 punched him numerous times. After the attack, the suspects walked across Sea Street, then return to the victim and suspect #1 began punching him again, only to be stopped by suspect #2.

Officer Parisi informed communications that the suspects were not in the area, but gave out their descriptions. Officer William Plant took up a position near Granite and Whitwell Streets and observed two males matching the descriptions inside a taxicab. Once the cab was stopped, Officer Plant made positive identification of both occupants as the suspects.

Based on the information provided by Officer Parisi, Officer Plant arrested suspect #1, a 49-year-old Chelsea resident, under arrest for the felony charge of "assault and battery with a dangerous weapon to wit: shod foot." Suspect #2, a 29-year-old Pelham, N.H. resident, will be summoned to court on the charge of, "assault and battery."

According to Massachusetts' law, since the officers did not witness the misdemeanor, "assault and battery," no arrest can be made. However, criminal charges will be filed.

Suspect #1's boots were taken as evidence.

Nice work!

Winter and Holiday Travel Safety Tips

As the holiday season draws near, increased road traffic from coast to coast will make travel more difficult. Families will pack their vehicles full of carefully wrapped gifts, stuffed animals, Christmas cookies, board games, pillows, kids and pets.

By overloading the vehicle, often times drivers fail to leave space in their vehicle to ensure winter travel safety.

Driving carefully in the ice and snow is paramount, but it is also important to pack the proper gear to face the elements. Preparing for travel starts with awareness of the proposed weather conditions that will take place along your journey.

BE PREPARED for the upcoming season! It is a great gift you can give your family, friends, and yourself. It just may save your life. Before traveling, prepare your car for the winter conditions and remember the four rules of winter travel:

1. Stay with your car if stuck.

2. Keep windows open slightly when the engine is running to prevent being overcome by carbon monoxide.

3. Keep the muffler clear of snow so the exhaust will clear the fumes and keep the car running.

4. Carry a cell phone/ or a 911-only cell phone.

If there is a weather advisory warning motorists not to drive and others to stay home, take heed! Wait it out. Too often, people look out their window and decide that existing weather conditions are not that bad. This is usually not a good assessment of major roadway conditions, especially early in a storm.

Most people put considerable time in packing items for each trip, but little time supplying the car with equipment for the winter. Here is a checklist to winterize yourself when traveling by car in the winter.

- Blankets and warm clothes for each passenger
- Hat and gloves
- Tow rope in case you find yourself in a ditch
- Flashlight
- Ice Scraper and brush
- Jumper cables
- Non-perishable foods (nuts, energy bars, candy bars, etc.)
- Water for each passenger (leave room for expansion when freezing)
- Sand for traction
- Fully charged cell phone (car charger)
- First aid kit
- Mini shovel to dig your vehicle out
- Flares (about 50 yards away from vehicle to give advanced warning)

Low-Stress Holidays

Q. I am so tired of putting up tons of lights and decorations all around my house each holiday season! But I feel like I have to do it to put my family in good spirits and to help the neighborhood look festive. By the time Christmas rolls around I'm exhausted from decorating, parties, cooking and baking and wrapping gifts, and then I have to take everything down. Do you have any tips for making the decorating process a little less painful each year? — Had It in Little Rock

A. I've got three tips for you that may help improve your holiday experience: scale back, organize and delegate.

First, why keep up with everyone else? If your yard doesn't have the most awesome holiday decorations in the neighborhood, it's really not that big of a deal. In fact, most of my neighbors say they prefer a neatly kept yard to a bunch of gaudy decorations. So this year, consider scaling back your decorating and keeping get-togethers casual. A simple wreath on the door or mailbox will do. If you must have lights and stringing them along the eaves is frustrating, check out some of the outdoor lighting options that have sprung up recently, such as pre-shaped patterns that stand in the yard, or mesh light webs that can be quickly slipped over hedges or topiaries.

Second, organizing tasks throughout the month will help immensely. Schedule times for decorating, wrapping, shopping and cooking. Place the items you will need in an area where they are easily accessed (such as grouping all ornaments and assorted tools in a large box in the garage). List anything that is missing or needs to be purchased so you can buy it all in one shopping trip.

Lastly, the holidays are a time to be together with family, so use them to the fullest! Assign many of the tasks you normally do yourself to others. This includes children, who love to help decorate, wrap gifts and ice cookies. And keep it fun. So what if a bow is crooked, a present is lumpy, or the lawn decorations aren't perfect? The little glitches are the things you'll remember fondly years down the road.

NFPA Report Shows 73% Of Home Heating Fire Deaths Attributed To Space Heaters

Home Heating Remains Second Highest Cause Of Fire In The Home

As temperatures drop outdoors and people take steps to warm their homes, the National Fire Protection Association (NFPA) urges the public to be mindful of the risks associated with home heating which is second only to cooking when it comes to causes of home fires.

Along with the colder temperatures that accompany winter, there is an elevated risk of dying from fire during this season with December, January and February generally being the deadliest months for fires.

According to a newly released NFPA study, heating equipment was involved in an estimated 53,000 reported home structure fires in the United States in 2003. The study includes fires associated with chimneys and chimney connectors, space heaters, central heating, fireplaces, water heaters and heat tape. These fires accounted for 14% of all home fires and were responsible for an estimated 260 deaths, roughly 1,300 injuries and $500 million in direct property damage.

Although space heaters, excluding fireplaces and chimneys, were responsible for one-fourth (26%) of home heating fires in 2003, they were the most deadly, accounting for three-fourths (73%) of the fire deaths related to home heating. Space heaters also were responsible for three out of every five injuries (58%) in home heating fires in 2003 and half (51%) of the associated property damage.

According to the report, space heaters present a greater fire risk than central heating systems. Space heaters tend to be closer to household combustibles and the people occupying the home, and they tend to require a more direct role by occupants in fueling, maintenance, and operation.

Even so, any widely used heating device can be used safely, if the rules of safety are followed.

For more information or a copy of the report Home Heating Fire Patterns and Trends, visit NFPA's Web site http://www.nfpa.org.

NFPA suggests the following for safe heating:

• Maintain a 3 feet (or 1 meter) separation between things that can burn and heating equipment.

• When buying a new space heater, make sure it carries the mark of an independent testing laboratory and is legal for use in your community. (Some communities do not permit portable kerosene heaters, for example.)

• Install your stationary (fixed) space heater according to manufacturer's instructions or applicable codes or better yet, have it installed by a professional.

• Plug your electric-powered space heater into an outlet with sufficient capacity and never into an extension cord.

• Use the proper grade of the proper fuel for your liquid-fueled space heater, and never use gasoline in any heater not approved for gasoline use. Refuel only in a well-ventilated area and when the equipment is cool.

• In your fireplace or wood stove, use only dry, seasoned wood to avoid the build-up of creosote, an oily deposit that easily catches fire and accounts for most chimney fires and the largest share of home heating fires generally. Use only paper or kindling wood, not a flammable liquid, to start the fire. Do not use artificial logs in wood stoves.

• Make sure your fireplace has a sturdy screen to prevent sparks from flying into the room. Allow fireplace and woodstove ashes to cool before disposing in a metal container, which is kept a safe distance from your home.

• Turn off space heaters whenever the room they are in is unoccupied or under circumstances when manufacturer's instructions say they should be turned off. Portable space heaters are so easy to knock over in the dark that they should be turned off when you go to bed, but make sure your primary heating equipment for bedrooms is sufficient to avoid risks to residents from severe cold.

• Do not use your oven to heat your home.

• Make sure fuel-burning equipment is vented to the outside, that the venting is kept clear and unobstructed, and that the exit point is properly sealed around the vent, all of which is to make sure deadly carbon monoxide does not build up in the home.

• Inspect all heating equipment annually, and clean as necessary.

• Test smoke alarms monthly; install a carbon monoxide alarm in a central location outside each sleeping area.

NFPA has been a worldwide leader in providing fire, electrical, building, and life safety to the public since 1896. Visit NFPA's Web site at http://www.nfpa.org.

Tips For Selling Or Renting You Home

(NAPS) - Whether the housing bubble is about to burst or boom, there are few inexpensive ways to help sell your existing home or improve your investment property. Try these tips:

Curb Appeal

Curb appeal refers to how good your house looks from the street. Home buyers and renters are notorious for quickly sizing up a place from the outside and making a decision based on that first impression. So take some time to make sure your home's exterior and the surrounding yard are up to par. Trim bushes, paint doorways and keep the grass mowed. It may seem simple, but it can make a big difference when you're courting buyers or tenants.

Kitchens and Baths

A quick coat of paint in the kitchen and bathroom can make a big difference in the eyes of buyers and renters. You may also want to consider upgrading certain appliances and adding what's called a fan replacement kit in the bath. Boran and NuTone make a Bath Fan Upgrade Kit that can improve the appearance and performance of noisy, economy fans. The kits require no rewiring and no new duct work to install, but they can completely change the feel of a bathroom in just 10 minutes.

Homeowners can upgrade an existing economy fan in four easy steps:

1. Remove old grille
2. Remove old fan assembly
3. Attach new fan and motor assembly to new motor plate.
4. Install new motor assembly and new grille.

Showing Off

Get your home or the apartment you are trying to rent ready to show. Be certain it's clean and try to remove as many personal items as possible. Realtors say that buyers and renters sometimes have trouble picturing themselves living in homes and apartments that already look lived in.

Jack Conway Co. Wins 'Best Commercial Float' In Christmas Parade

The Jack Conway & Co. Realtors Quincy office won "Best Commercial Float" in this year's annual Quincy Christmas Festival Parade.

This marks several years in a row that the office has taken top honors in the commercial float category.

The theme of the Jack Conway float this year was based on the television holiday classic " Rudolph the Red Nosed Reindeer," and featured the " Island of Misfit Toys" with the slogan " We Find Homes For Everyone."

"This is the highlight of our office activity each year," said manager Diane Furness." The entire office gets involved with the float and the costumes and it really puts everybody in the holiday spirit."

The Quincy Jack Conway office is very involved with the city. This year agents participated in the Quincy Medical Center Walk for Cancer, The August Moon Festival, and the South Quincy Italian Festival. In addition, the realtors held a Halloween poster-coloring contest and pumpkin-decorating contest. " This is a great city and were thrilled to be a part of it," said Furness.

Jack Conway & Co. Realtors is celebrating its 50th Anniversary as the largest independently owned real estate company in Massachusetts. There are 45 offices from Boston to Cape Cod and the firm runs its own mortgage company, Conway Financial Services.

Check Your Home For Energy Leaks

(NAPS)-If you're a home owner, you're probably concerned with your energy bills. You may not be aware, however, of some simple changes you can make in your home to lower your bills without sacrificing comfort.

Many American homes waste fuel and electricity, It's not a question of setting the thermostat or leaving the lights on- although you can keep your power costs down by leaving the thermostat at 68 degrees and turning off lights in empty rooms- but a question of checking to make sure your home is energy efficient.

It's easy to conduct a home energy audit to determine how much energy your home consumes and how you can make operating your home less costly. With a simple but diligent walk-through, you can spot many energy-related problems in any type of house.

The first thing to look for is air leaks. You can save as much as 30 percent on annual energy costs by reducing drafts, while making your house more comfortable. Look for gaps around pipes and wires, electrical outlets, foundation seals and mail slots. Also, be sure loose siding is repaired and caulking and weather stripping around windows are applied properly and are in good condition.

Once you've stopped drafts, it's time to look at the walls and ceilings. Heat loss through under-insulated exterior walls can be substantial. Even if there was adequate insulation when your house was built, rising energy prices make it a good idea to increase the amount just in case.

One way to increase the R-value of exterior walls is to have fiber glass insulation blown in from the exterior of your house.

Because insulation is out of sight, it is often out of mind. So it's also hard to know which insulation will perform best for your house. Seek recommendations from your insulation contractor or local retailer. A good place to start is fiber glass insulation. Fiber glass insulation is a proven material that offers high thermal and acoustical performance.

Some of the more technologically advanced insulation products offer the added value of moisture management, a hot issue in homeowners' plight against mold growth.

Rotator Cuff Injury Sidelines Golfer

Q. My husband recently injured his rotator cuff and has had to stay away from playing golf. How can he condition his rotator cuff muscles to prevent this from happening again once he is injury-free?

A. The rotator cuff is a group of four muscles and their tendons that are responsible for connecting the upper arm and shoulder blade. This group of muscles also helps to lift your arm up over your head and also rotate it toward and away from your body.

Rotator cuff injuries can vary from tendonitis and bursitis to tears. Each causes different degrees of limitations and discomfort. The causes can be from normal wear and tear, a sudden fall where you use your arms to break your fall, heavy lifting, poor posture or repeated stress upon the shoulder joint, such as when playing golf.

Repetitive stress on the shoulder joint results in many of the rotator cuff injuries that golfers experience. Although golfers may find these injuries to be very common among golfers, they can take steps to lower the risk. Here are some tips to help your husband stay injury-free.

• Stay fit. Keeping your whole body strong, functional and flexible will prepare you for the demands that golf places on the body while playing or practicing. The stronger and more stable the muscles and joints of your shoulder, back, arms, hips and legs, the better control you'll have. These are prime areas for overuse injuries.

• Warm Up! Golfers often overlook the importance of warming up. Take a few minutes to elevate your heart rate. This will loosen up your muscles and joints. A light jog will do. Complete a stretching routine that loosens the muscles from your neck, shoulders, back, forearms, wrists, lower back, legs and calf. Take 20 to 30 seconds for each stretch, and repeat two or three times. This may take some time to complete, but it will take much longer to recover from an injury.

• Develop proper swing mechanics. Take lessons if needed. Poor mechanics over time can also lead to rotator cuff injuries.

• Listen to your body. When your body is tired or weak, take that as a warning to get some rest. Lack of rest or fatigue makes you more susceptible to injuries, so heed your body's warning.

Always consult a physician before beginning an exercise program. DENTISTRY for the 21st Century

by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.

DRIVEN TO ABFRACTION

If you notice a crevice at the base of your tooth (at gum level,) you may have a condition known as "dental abfraction." The teeth that are most likely to display dental abfractions are the bicuspid teeth (particularly the upper bicuspids), cuspids, and molars. What causes these notches in the tooth enamel? It is largely a matter of bruxism, or tooth grinding. You might imagine that the teeth would wear from grinding at the tops of the crown, where they contact each other. While this is so, a tooth is also vulnerable to grinding forces at its base, where it flexes. As the area at the base of the tooth flexes, minerals dissolve and leave a notch.

If you suspect that you suffer from bruxism see your dentist. It is now well known that stress and anxiety can also play a major role in causing bruxism. This column has been brought to in the interest of better dental health. Most dental insurance policies allow two cleanings per year. Have you had yours? Take advantage and call us at 617-479-6220 for an appointment. Have you been putting off seeing a dentist? We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street, where we're currently accepting new patients. We provide cosmetic, functional, and preventive dental care for all ages. You can rely on us to answer all your questions about dental treatments and procedures. We offer the services of anesthesiology with a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Visit us on the web at www.quincydentist.com.

P.S. Before dental abfractions are filled in with composite resins, the underlying cause must be addressed with nightly use of a mouthguard.

A Message From The United States Surgeon General:

Don't Excuse The Flu

"It's just the flu."

"I just don't have time to go get vaccinated."

"I've never gotten the flu before."

"It's too late in the season anyway."

As the United States Surgeon General, I've heard all the excuses before. We all know the reasons why someone might not get a flu vaccine. Perhaps you don't know all the reasons why you should—or how to convince the people you care about that they should, too.

Many people don't realize that influenza (the flu) is a serious disease. Every year, flu kills an average of 36,000 people in the U.S., and puts over 200,000 individuals in the hospital with flu complications. This is a terrible loss of lives, a huge cost for hospitalizations, an enormous amount of missed time away from work and activities, and a genuine burden for families across the country.

Flu vaccine is the single best way to prevent the flu. Not only does the flu vaccine help protect you, but if you are vaccinated you can protect those who are vulnerable—including the elderly and young children, who are most likely to have serious complications from the flu.

This year, we are fortunate enough to have the highest supply of flu vaccine ever, although we recognize that many providers didn't receive their full orders of vaccine as early in the vaccination season as they would have liked. Fortunately, vaccine is continuing to be distributed during November and December. The time to get your flu vaccine extends well into the winter, since flu season typically peaks early in February or later.

For any individual who wishes to avoid getting the flu—or to keep from spreading flu to others—I urge you to call your doctor or local flu clinic to make an appointment for vaccination or use this online resource to find a provider close by: <HYPERLINK http://www.cdc.gov/flu/protect/keyfacts.htm http://www.cdc.gov/flu/protect/keyfacts.htm HYPERLINK "http://flucliniclocator.org" >).

For more information, you can also visit the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) website at HYPERLINK "http://www.cdc.gov/flu" www.cdc.gov/flu .

Get your flu vaccine now, and help make this a healthy holiday season for yourself and those you care about. No excuses.

If you have not been able to find flu vaccine, visit The American Lung Association is sponsoring a flu shot locator at http://www.flucliniclocator.org.

Endodontists Demystify The Feared Root Canal – One Tooth At A Time

(NAPS) - When Ms. Barb Guerra went to her dentist with a tooth pain, the simple words "root canal" filled her with dread. But after having the painless procedure performed, she realized her worry was for naught.

"I was pleasantly surprised when I had a root canal," Guerra said. "I really didn't experience any discomfort at all."

The Fear

Misplaced fears like Guerra's aren't uncommon. In a new consumer survey by the American Association of Endodontists (AAE), nearly half (48.5 percent) of survey respondents said they perceived root canal treatment as "excruciatingly painful," and ranked the treatment just below a spinal tap in terms of discomfort.

The Reality

But these perceptions don't reflect the realities of modern treatment, something that patients are realizing firsthand.

In fact, a separate AAE study showed that patients who have experienced root canal treatment are six times more likely to describe it as "painless" than those who haven't had the treatment.

The expertise of endodontists, the dentists who specialize in root canal treatment, combined with anesthesia and advance technologies, has made root canal treatment a procedure that can be as routine as having a cavity filled.

The treatment usually lasts a half hour and has a 95 percent success rate in saving abscessed or infected teeth.

The Better Choice

When patients are told the interior of their tooth is badly infected and requires treatment, they have three choice: extraction of the tooth with no replacement, extraction and replacement with and implant, or root canal treatment.

Patients who extract the tooth and do not replace it can have a difficult time chewing, have an increased risk of gum disease and their teeth may shift. Extraction with implant replacement involves having a prosthetic tooth screwed into the jaw.

Root canal treatment is the only option that preserves the natural tooth. "It's always best to save the natural tooth," says AAE President John S. Olmsted, D.D.S., M.S. "Nothing looks , feels or functions like them,"

Despite these facts, the myths surrounding root canal treatment continue- and extend beyond concerns about pain. Many people believe that root canal treatment is expensive compared to other options, when it actually costs hundreds and hundreds of dollars less than getting an implant.

Root canals generally require one visit for the treatment plus another for placing a crown on the tooth, whereas placing an implant typically requires multiple surgeries.

Life After Root Canal Treatment

Root canal treatment removes the damaged pulp, or soft inner tissue containing nerves and blood vessels, from the tooth, and then the endodontist cleans, fills and seals the canals. The tooth is then restored with a permanent filling or other restoration, allowing it to once again function normally, often for a lifetime.

"I had terrible pain- before I had root canal treatment," said Guerra. "Now my tooth is pain-free."

Guerra is just one of the 17 million people each year to have a natural tooth saved by root canal treatment- and to realize that the myths about root canal treatment just aren't true.

Staying Safe In Cold Weather

(NAPS) - You can experience cold-weather emergencies such as frostbite or hypothermia even if the air temperature isn't below freezing. That's why it's so important to know a few cold-weather safety tips.

What To Watch For

The American Red Cross suggests people learn to recognize the signs of hypothermia and frostbite. Hypothermia symptoms include confusion, dizziness, exhaustion and severe shivering. Frostbite warning signs include: gray, white or yellow skin discoloration, numbness and waxy-feeling skin. If you or someone else has any of these symptoms, seek medical attention immediately.

What To Wear

You are only as warm as your coldest body part. Some of the best outerwear for cold weather has GORE-TEX fabric at the core. This waterproof but breathable layer provides a barrier with billions of microscopic pores that are impenetrable by water but still allow perspiration vapor to escape. When dressing for outdoor recreation, a range of products made with the material can provide an optimized system designed to work together and keep you comfortable and protected.

Cold Weather Travel

Allow extra time when traveling in cold weather and check weather forecasts before leaving your house. When you're on the road, monitor weather conditions carefully and adhere to travel advisories. It's also important to keep a winter storm survival kit in your vehicle. The kit should include blankets, food, flares, chains, gloves and first-aid supplies.

The sixth grade team, coached by Mike Toldness, started the 2006-7 season with a convincing 22-13 victory over Scituate. Abigail Yotts and Devin McMahon led the offensive charge while Liz Kelley, Callie Cabral, Sam McArdle and Caitlin Bulger played well defensively.

The seventh grade team, using a relentless full-court, man to man defense took a commanding 17 point lead into halftime and never looked back. Coach Parry and Coach Bloomer attributed the win to the team's unselfish play as 10 of their 15 players score in the 41-21 win. The starting five of Kylie McDonald, Nicole Lamie, Nicole Parry, Emily Nguyen and Katie Lowry played great.

Coach Chrissy Niosi and Coach Tony Chiocchio's eighth grade team overcame a four point halftime deficit to earn their first victory of the year. The team was led by Kori Sorensen (20 points), Shelby Oliver (12 pts, 10 rebounds), Christina Cahill (5 steals) and Kaleigh McKeon (7 rebounds).

Next week the teams travel to Rockland to begin a three game road trip before returning home on Jan. 13.

FLUID SITUATIONS

If you see collections of fluid beneath your vehicle, place a clean newspaper under your car and leave it for the night. In the morning, carefully pull the newspaper from beneath the car, and note the location, color, and amount of each leak. The most common leak consists of a brown/blackish fluid of medium consistency. This is most likely to be an engine-oil leak, which may not be serious but should be investigated. A reddish, light-brown, or black fluid that is closer to the middle of the car is likely to be transmission fluid. Reddish or light brown fluid of thinner consistency may be power-steering fluid. Note each location carefully to help the technician make a proper diagnosis.

Leaks can end up impairing your vehicle's performance. Pleas, take the leaks seriously, and if you notice a leak bring your car to the caring experts at LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO. Once we identify the source, we will discuss the problem with you, and make a quality repair. Located at 258 Quincy Ave., E. Braintree, we promise that you will be happy with any work performed on your automobiles. If you have questions regarding a possible leak please call 781-843-1550. Sunoco and most major credit cards honored. Open: Mon.-Fri. 6am-9pm, Sat. 7am-9pm, Sun. 9am-5pm.

HINT: Leaking transmission fluid may be indicative of a deteriorating transmission seal or gasket.

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

The Christmas Season, more than any other time of the year, seems to hold a special significance to each of us. To some, it is the joy of giving; to others, the security of family traditions, the music of Christmas Carols, the hanging of the greens, trimming of the Christmas tree, or the wonder and joy in the eyes of a small child. But more than this, to each of us it is the warmth and joy of real friendships.

As we approach this holiday, we are humbly grateful for the blessings of the past year . . . The best Christmas wish that we at the Deware Funeral Home can give to you is that the same star that guided the Wise Men to the manger and shone on the shepherds on the rocky hills of Bethlehem will lead you, too, throughout this glorious Christmas Season. . .

To all of our friends . . . Seasons Greetings!

Quincy Community United Methodist Church To Host Service Of The Longest Night Dec. 21

Quincy Community United Methodist Church, 40 Beale St., Wollaston, will host its second annual Service of the Longest Night Thursday, Dec. 21 at 7:30 p.m. in the church chapel.

The service gets its name for the Winter Solstice, the longest night of the year.

"The service is very simple and gentle, consisting of music, Scripture lessons, readings, prayer, and quiet reflection," said the Rev. Dr. Susan F. Jarek-Glidden, pastor. "Its purpose is to provide a safe place for people who are dealing with grief and loss of any kind, whether that grief and loss are recent or decades old."

For some people, the holiday season can be very stressful and, sometimes, very unhappy, the Rev. Dr. Jarek-Glidden said.

"Facing the first Christmas without a loved one's physical presence, dealing with an imminent death, living with an illness that places a question mark over the future, coping with the loss of a job, facing life after divorce or separation, and sometimes just life in general can make holiday celebration very difficult, if not impossible."

The Service of the Longest Night is intended to be a resource for people in stressful and unhappy situations.

The public is invited to attend.

For more information, call the church office at 617-773-3319.

"Although most of the hearts are still given to people who are hurting," said the Rev. Dr. Susan F. Jarek-Glidden, "some individuals have given them to people who have made a difference in their lives, such as mentors, friends, family members, and neighbors.

"It's a way of expressing feelings, a way saying 'Thank you' as well as 'I care.'"

5 Landtakings Approved By Council Committee

Downtown Revitalization With Concourse

By MIKAELA SLANEY

The Downtown Committee of the City Council Monday approved five more City Concourse landtakings, and reviewed plans to revitalize the downtown area during concourse construction.

The properties and their owners:

• 1586 Hancock St., Rory's Corner L.L.C.

• 1601 Hancock St., Congregation Beth Pinchas of Grand Rabbi Levi I. Horowitz Inc.

• 1596 -1602 Hancock St., Constantine T. Kechris and Vicky M. Kechris, trustees of C.T. Kechris Realty Trust.

• 11 - 13 Revere Rd., Marie I. Bradley, trustee of 11 - 13 Revere Road Realty Trust.

• 14 Revere Rd., Steven A. Morris and Dennis W. D'Ercole.

The properties must be accepted by the full City Council before the landtakings are finalized.

Dennis Harrington, Planning Director, and Christopher E. Calnan, senior project manager from RIZZO Assoc., introduced the Quincy Center District Urban Revitalization and Development Plan (URDP). The plan is set to revitalize 30 acres of the 113 acres that make up Quincy Center, and is designed around Concourse Concept D, the designated and preferred concourse route.

The redeveloped area, the Urban Redevelopment Designation (URD), includes a portion of Hancock Street, Chestnut Street, Cliveden Street, Washington Street and Temple Street.

Revitalization project goals are to add retail, and commercial space, create a vibrant public domain, promote lively and safer streets with appeasing public areas, provide additional and improved parking, and promote culture.

Harrington circulated a Planning Department study, that claimed that downtown area would not redevelop itself to become "a significant

'Difficult, But I'd Do It Again'

Linda Stice Volunteers In Peru To Help Orphans

By MIKAELA SLANEY

"It was a very difficult experience, and I would do it again in a minute," said Linda Stice, School Committee member.

Stice recently spent 15 days volunteering to help orphaned children in Cuzco, Peru.

"One of my friends predicted it would be a life-changing experience, it was not, it was a life affirming experience," she said. "It made me realize that as many things as I would like to do in my life, working with children is what I am called to do."

Stice paid for the trip from her own pocket, and used her vacation time. She was inspired to go after reading about orphaned children in the world, and researching volunteer opportunities on the internet. She chose an area that spoke Spanish, her second language.

LINDA STICE, School Committee member, recently spent 15 days volunteering to help orphaned children in Cuzco, Peru.

Stice said that she was impressed with the level of care at the girls orphanage.

"All of their primary needs were met," she said. The orphans were safe and cared for, educated and nourished. Stice also said that the staff was kind to the children.

She worked mostly with seven to 11 year olds, and they were "typical seven through 11 year olds in many ways," she said. Stice said that she was struck by their reading and math skills.

Stice also submitted a proposal for a new orphanage. She detailed the number of children, staff, training and goals of the orphanage. She also provided a timeline for its construction and completion.

She also gave suggestions to "Maximo Nivel," the organization that assists orphans, to switch to a non-profit classification, to become eligible to receive government funding.

She also suggested training staff to address the orphan's emotional needs with the same intensity as their physical needs.

"The struggle in the developing world is simply to keep children alive," she said.

Malnutrition and AIDS are common threats to children in underdeveloped countries, and these issues are often addressed first, pushing emotional stability and development to the back burner, she said.

Stice said she noticed the orphans showed a strong attachment to their friendly staff, who served as their surrogate mothers.

Stice noted that the girls called the staff women "mami" (mommy), a term that they used to address Stice within a noticeably short amount of time.

"I thought this an appellation reserved for staff... and they bestowed it on me, a stranger," she said. "There was also physical affection shown to me that a child raised with a strong attachment to parents would not show. They would reserve it for their own parents. They would have boundaries and not be as needy."

Another location that Stice visited in Cuzco for four days was very different, she said, and did not provide the same level of care and safety as the orphanage.

Stice described a police-run shelter that housed children taken from the streets, some as young as three years old.

There was no hot water, soap, toilet paper, books or toys, she said, and the police had to secure the doors so children would not run away.

Stice described the kitchen area as having a leaky roof that was so bad that people literally stood in a pool of water while trying to prepare food.

She approached a general contractor to get a price for installing hot water and a new roof, and she said she was baffled by how low the estimate was: a mere $300. (Friends and family members donated over $200 after hearing the story.)

In a questionnaire, the children were asked what they needed most in their lives to be happy.

"Almost every child said that they wanted 'una familia Feliz,' (a happy family) or 'los padres,' (parents)," Stice said.

They were also asked whether they had ever felt fear and most replied that they were afraid of violence at home or on the street, she said.

"They have clearly been traumatized," she said, "and that's important for anyone who works with them to know."

Those who wish to volunteer their time to helping children do not need to travel quite so far from home, she said.

"This is not a problem that is confined to other countries. This is a very real problem in the U.S., and finding people to adopt older children in the U.S. is huge."

Many older children who opt out of an orphanage at age 18 may not have a permanent home, and 18 through 24 year olds are the fastest growing homeless population in the U.S., she said.

The Department of Social Services is currently seeking foster families for children in need.

All types of families, married, single, couples, working parents, families with or without children, can be a foster family.

"We all need a home and a family, and you don't have to travel to Peru to be helpful, she Stice.

For more information on becoming a foster family, call Cara Hemingway at the Department of Social Services, coastal area office, at 781-682-0866.

Five Veterans Sworn In As New Firefighters

The five – all veterans – are : Eric Wirtz, Michael Kerr, William Eastwick, William Kelley and Michael Kisiel.

"We chose these five men from a pool of hundreds of applicants," said Mayor William Phelan. "We believe they will add nicely to an already professional, top-notch fire department. I congratulate these men and their families for this accomplishment."

Wirtz is a 1997 graduate of North Quincy High School. His brother George joined the fire department last year. He is a veteran of the United States Coast Guard, and former member of a U.S.C.G. search and rescue squad.

Kerr is a licensed Emergency Medical Technician. He served four years of active duty in the U.S. Marine Corps before being honorably discharged in 2002. He was a corporal in the 2nd Recon Battalion. He most recently served in executive protection services for State Department Diplomats in Iraq.

Eastwick is a 2003 graduate of Quincy High School. He was a corporal in the United States Army and served in the military police during stints of service in both Iraq and Afghanistan.

Kelley holds a Bachelor's Degree in Justice Studies and Child Psycology from Arizona State University. He served in the Marine Corps as a military policeman and was honorably discharged in 1993. He has been a Corrections Officer in Suffolk County.

Kisiel is a 1998 graduate of North Quincy High School. A veteran of the Coast Guard, he was honorably discharged in 2005

"Firefighting is much different in today's world than it was five or 10 years ago," Phelan said. "It's much more proactive in our need to identify circumstances such as chemical, biological or radioactive situations. We expect more from our firefighters than ever before and I am confident that this new group of young men will help continue to improve an already great department."

Entries Being Accepted For First Night Parade

First Night Quincy is accepting entries from those who wish to participate in the Grand Procession Parade. Residents, businesses and community organizations are encouraged to participate by entering a float, or simply a vehicle bedecked with lights and color, which is the theme of the parade. Three prizes of 4500, $250 and $100 will be awarded to the entries that show the most creativity, originality and effort.

"The Grand Procession parade is a festive, fun way for neighborhood associations, PTO's and other groups to put their creativity and talents to use and raise money for their various causes," said Mayor William Phelan.

The parade begins at the intersection of Hancock Street at Saville Avenue and disbands at Temple Street just beyond City Hall and United First Parish Church. The cast of colorful characters, includes a band of Giant Vegetables and a traditional Chinese Dragon dance.

Those interested in participating may obtain entry forms and more information by contacting the Park Department at (617) 376-1251.

THE HISTORY CHANNEL

• On Dec. 16, 1773, in Boston Harbor, a group of Massachusetts colonists disguised as Mohawk Indians board three British tea ships and dump 342 chests of tea into the water. The tea was worth more than $700,000 in today's currency.

• On Dec. 17, 1843, Charles Dickens' classic story "A Christmas Carol" is published. Dickens' father, a clerk in the navy pay office, was thrown into debtors' prison in 1824, and 12-year-old Charles was sent to work in a factory. The miserable treatment of children and the institution of the debtors' jail became topics of several Dickens novels.

• On Dec. 14, 1909, the famous brick surface of the Indianapolis Motor Speedway (the "Brickyard") is completed.

• On Dec. 12, 1913, two years after it was stolen from the Louvre Museum in Paris, Leonardo da Vinci's masterpiece "The Mona Lisa" is recovered inside Italian waiter Vincenzo Peruggia's hotel room in Florence. Peruggia had previously worked at the Louvre and had participated in the heist with a group of accomplices dressed as janitors on the morning of Aug. 21, 1911.

• On Dec. 13, 1950, an unknown actor named James Dean appears in a Pepsi commercial, dancing with other teens around a jukebox. Dean would later personify the angry, restless youth culture in films that made a deep impression on the American public, including "Rebel Without a Cause" (1955).

• On Dec. 15, 1973, Jean Paul Getty III, the grandson of American billionaire J. Paul Getty, is found alive near Naples, five months after his kidnapping by an Italian gang. J. Paul Getty secured his grandson's release by paying just $2.7 million, the maximum amount that he claimed he was able to raise.

• On Dec. 11, 1985, the Unabomber kills his first victim. Hugh Scrutton was killed in his computer store in Sacramento, Calif., by a mail package that exploded in his hands.

Ted And Eddy

Ted Kennedy and Eddy Martin were as close as brothers.

The former Quincy resident and the senator developed a strong personal bond over a 45-year friendship and political relationship.

KENNEDY

MARTIN

That togetherness came through sentimentally as Kennedy spoke at Eddy's Funeral Mass at St. John's Church last Thursday.

It was a touching tribute filled with affection and sprinkled with a little humor.

The Mass was celebrated by another long-time friend, Fr. William McCarthy, former pastor of St. John's.

FR. McCARTHY

Eddy, a highly respected former Boston Traveler reporter and a Marine veteran of World War II who became Kennedy's political adviser and confidante, died Dec. 3 at his home in Dennisport. He was 86.

Kennedy credited him with playing a major role in getting his political career started and keeping it on track in a close-up look at their remarkable relationship.

The Mass was celebrated on the 65th anniversary of the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor and Kennedy noted:

"Eddy was a student at B.U. and responded to that awful attack by asking what he could do for his country and then spent the next 65 years of his amazing life doing it."

Kennedy said it must have been the luck of the Irish that brought them together in 1961 when Eddy agreed to help out in his first campaign for the Senate.

"Helping out is putting it mildly. Jack and Dad knew that politics in the Commonwealth was a contact sport....and....I'd need adult supervision of the highest order. He was far and away Jack's and Dad's first choice for me."

When Eddy agreed and Marge, his wife and love of 58 years, gave her blessing to Eddy's career change, Kennedy recalled:

"A huge sigh of relief swept over the whole compound at Hyannis Port. As far as Jack was concerned, my election was sealed that day and I was the happiest unqualified candidate on the planet.

"Needless to say, Eddy exceeded all expectations. It was love at first sight. The campaign was no cakewalk, but it would never have happened without shamrock mastermind and charmer Eddy Martin."

Kennedy said Eddy was, "a model Chief of Staff. He could do everything.....a brilliant judge of people who could spot a jewel or detect a phony from a mile away....and....he had that sense of humor that could break the tension and bring a laugh when it was needed most."

When the Blizzard of '78 struck, Eddy had retired as Chief of Staff and succeeded by Ken Feinberg. Kennedy was stuck in Washington so Feinberg called Eddy for advice.

"He knew that Eddy could always wave a magic wand and get results in cases like this. But all Eddy said was 'Ken, if I were still Chief of Staff there wouldn't have been a blizzard'."

Kennedy credited Eddy with bringing about the statue of President John Kennedy in front of the State House and the Rose Fitzgerald Kennedy Greenway.

"I was overwhelmed. What an unbelievable friend, what a can-do guy he always was."

Kennedy recalled his plane crash in 1964 and Eddy taking a room next to him in the Northhampton Hospital.

"It was an election year and he ran my Senate office and my campaign office from those new headquarters as skillfully as ever....preparing the hospital for a visit by LBJ....talking to the doctors about whether I would ever walk again, all the while working to assure that I'd be a Senator again."

Eddy always understood people, Kennedy said, and knew what made them tick. That was the reporter in him, I think.

"Eddy didn't need a poll to tell him what was right. He just knew it in his gut.

"In this last campaign I still relied on Eddy's judgement and advice. Should I debate my opponent? 'Absolutely,' Eddy said, 'Just make it 30 minutes and air it during the baseball playoffs."

Kennedy said Eddy had a special knack for calming unhappy constituents.

"One day a constituent/activist got fed up. She wanted a policy change and she wanted it now! She banged on the table and said she couldn't take it any longer.

"She hurled abuse after abuse at Eddy. He kept his smile throughout and she finally sputtered, 'I'm so angry. I hate you, hate you, hate you, you cute little Irish son of a gun.'

"I'm paraphrasing a little," Kennedy noted, sending a ripple of laughter through the church.

Kennedy and his wife, Vicki, who attended the Mass with him, visited Eddy and Marge a few days before Thanksgiving. Eddy's prognosis wasn't good but:

"He was upbeat and he wanted us to be upbeat. Marge was determined we would all keep Eddy smiling-just the way he always kept us smiling-until the end. But in typical Eddy fashion, he was the one who kept us going.

"How do you say good-bye to a man like that? I'm sure he's laughing up there with Jack and Bobby, spilling all his stories about me that he fortunately never put in any memoir."

And Kennedy, his voice cracking, added with emotion:

"He was simply the best and I miss him dearly. I loved you very much, Eddy. You blessed our lives and forever changed our world.

"Rest in peace, my friend. Rest in peace."

Kyle Ferrier Nominated For Military Academy

Ferrier was nominated for the 2007-2008 school year at the U.S. Military Academy at Wese Point. He was also nominated for the Vacancy 2 group at the U.S. Naval Academy.

"Given the variety of demands placed on our armed forces, I am privileged to nominate such accomplished students," Delahunt said. "These young people, their families and teachers can take great pride in their commitment to serving our country."

Dozens of prospective nominees were reviewed by Delahunt's Congressional Service Academy Selection Committee, comprised of eight distinguished area residents. Receiving a nomination completes the first stage of the Service Academy process. The applications of these students have been forwarded, without preferential listing, to the respective academies, which make the final appointment decisions.

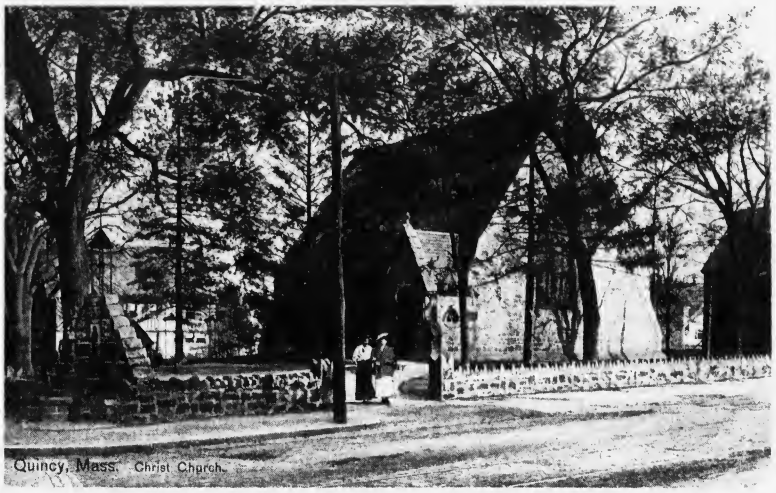
Scenes From Yesterday



THIS IS A 1915 postcard view of the Christ Episcopal Church on the corner of Elm Street and Quincy Avenue in Quincy Center. This is the oldest Episcopal parish in Massachusetts and possibly in the U.S. Colonists who came to America but wished to remain with the Church of England organized it in 1701. They built their first church on School Street near the present site of St. John's Catholic Church. Their ancient burial ground remains there on the corner of Phipps Street. The church shown here was built in 1874 and was the third church built on this corner by the parish. The first two were destroyed by fire. This building is made of Quincy granite. The granite wall and the fountain show in the foreground here were removed when the streets were widened. To contact Tom Galvin, e-mail tmgalvin@verizon.net.

Trash And Litter

Each day I walk my neighborhood in Quincy I am disappointed to see trash everywhere. There are candy wrappers, coffee cups, soda cans, napkins, paper, juice box straw wrappers, gum, newspapers, plastic items and cigarettes.

I can walk by a house day after day and the trash never gets picked up. One would think that civil pride would prevail and that the resident would pick up the litter. Do people think that the city Public Works Department can pick up every piece of trash on our lawns, sidewalks and street area in front of our homes?

I do not understand how a resident can each and every day walk by the litter that is on or near their property; it takes but a few seconds to pick things up. Quincy residents: let us work together to help clean up our potentially great city. It is a problem that will only go away with citizen participation.

There are many smokers that live and pass through Quincy, as is evident by the number of cigarette butts lining our streets and roads. It is especially bad where there is a traffic signal or stop sign. A smoker simply does not care where he or she discards their cigarette once they have finished smoking it. Folks, please use your ashtrays, then empty when it is full and you are near a barrel.

On trash pickup day, it is sad to see quality items being thrown away. These are things that could be recycled, donated to charity, passed along to a neighbor, or given up to someone via www.recycle.com. So before you place something for trash pickup, consider these options. Recycling saves our delicate Earth.

Bush And The Iraq War

For the war on Iraq, it is most unfair to blame primarily our President. All critics say that the President does not have a strategy to succeed in Iraq. We forget that the President could not have gone to war if the U.S. Congress did not authorize him to do that.

The President also needed the U.N. Security Council's approval to go to war. But Senator Hillary Clinton, on "Meet the Press," told President Bush that he did not need U.N. approval, just as her husband President Clinton did not need U.N. approval to bomb Serbia 78 days. More over, not a single Congressman or U.S. Senator gave our President advice what strategy to use to succeed in Iraq. The President was given permission to go to war, but he lacked military training to know what to do to succeed in war.

The President wanted victory ever since the war on Iraq started, but he did not know what advice to give to Donald Rumsfeld what to do. And in spite of the fact that James Baker III made a statement that it's no appeasement to talk to your enemies, he failed to advice President Bush to use diplomacy with our two archenemies: Osama Bin Laden and Saddam Hussein. Only peace with these two men would bring home all our soldiers, that we claim to support.

Task Force Calls For Halt In Incinerator Permit

This Week

18 Years Ago

By FRANK McCAULEY

Members of the Quincy Environmental Task Force called for a halt in the permit process for a proposed rotary kiln incinerator by Clean Harbors, Inc. near the Quincy - Braintree line, saying more specific and detailed information regarding potential health problems, needs to be collected.

David Smith, chairman of the task force, said "what we really would like to see at this point in time is essentially a halt to the process until specific information can be gathered, dealing with the meteorological effects of that area, dealing with the air quality issues of that air, for a minimum of one year."

Students' Holiday Fair At Quincy High Benefits Orphans In Ethiopia

Students involved are all members of Operation: Day's Work-USA (ODW) which is a national, student-run campaign co-founded by Quincy students in 1998. Each school year, ODW students choose, fund and establish a modest education project in a developing country.

All proceeds from the fair will go to fund the Ethiopian Orphan project of Operation Day's Work-USA.

The fair featured ethnic food, photos with Santa, games, a craft sale, ornament making, holiday earrings, cookie decorating, and a white elephant table.

The holiday fair also featured an information table explaining ODW as well as this year's project to create a group home, education, health care and hope for 50 Ethiopian orphans each year for the next three years in Addis Ababa. The group home will be staffed by Ethiopian nationals and overseen by the non-governmental organization the Human Capital Foundation whose Executive Director, Carol Foster, has had 12 years of experience working with adoption agencies and child development agencies within Ethiopia.

Henry's Root Beer Stand Collects Food, Toys

Henry's Root Beer Stand, 60 Newport Ave, North Quincy, is collecting toys and food for needy area families.

"All the other Henry's are seasonal, so we have never had a store open in December, said native Bill Palmer, who co-owns the stand with Kim Palmer.

"When (we) put up the Christmas tree in the restaurant, (we) thought it needed to do more than sit there and look pretty."

Henry's features a "plush crane machine" that people use for fun, and often leave the toy prizes behind, he said. The owners decided to donate the toys to needy children, and didn't want to stop there.

"We decided to give away a free small fry to anyone who leaves a toy or brings in a canned good or perishable food item," he said. "Our business partner, Desi Queally collects every year for My Brother's Keeper, out of Easton, and we decided to help that along too."

Items will also go to the Bethel AME Church in Jamaica Plain, where Guy Reed, manager of Henry's in North Quincy, is an active member.

"Our church still has a number of Katrina families up here, plus the regular neighborhood kids who are in need," said Reed. "This will help out a lot of folks."

To contribute, bring a new toy, canned good, or non-perishable food item to Henry's by Dec. 21. Participants will receive a coupon thanking them for helping Santa, which can be used on the spot, or at a later date.

Henry's opened late this summer on Newport Ave, and received numerous awards for their hamburgers and home-made root beer.

They can be contacted henrysrootbeer@comcast.net or at their website: www.henrysrootbeer.com.

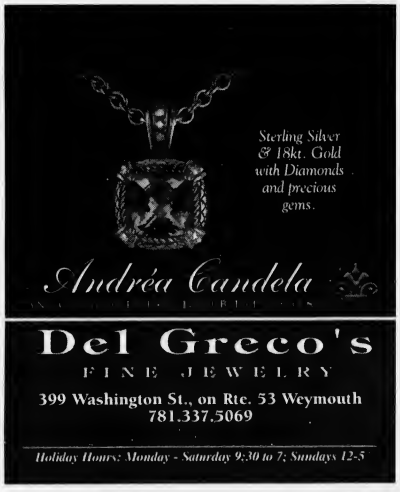
December Movies At Crane Library

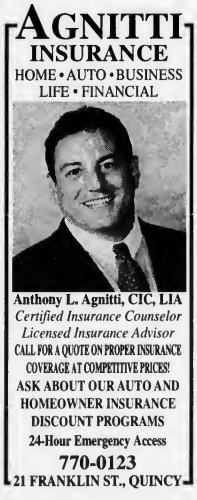
The Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St., announces upcoming movies for December:

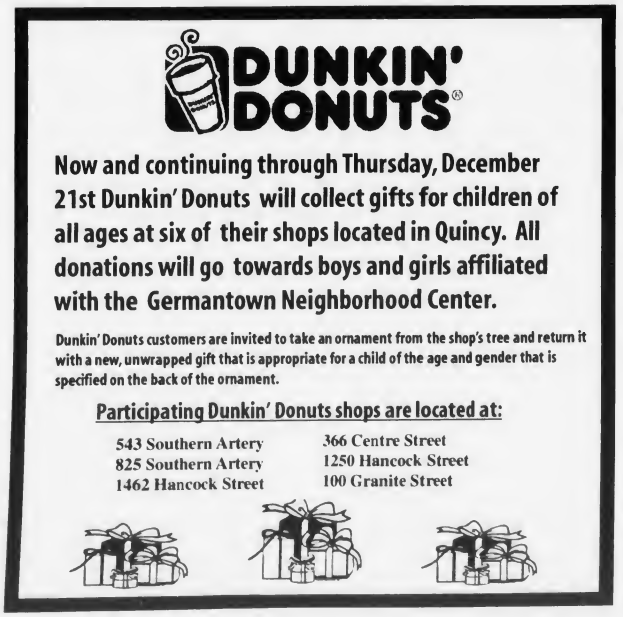
Dec. 14: (7 p.m.) "Witch Hunter Robin: Belief," is a Japanese anime series featuring 15-year old Robin Sena, a "craft" user with pyrotechnic abilities, who signs on with a special witch-hunting organization called STNJ after one of their teammates is killed on the field. Robin begins unravelling secrets of both the witches and STNJ. This program is intended for adults and teens age 13 and older, and is not suitable for younger audiences.

Dec. 21: (7 p.m.) "Men At Work" (in Farsi with English subtitles) tells the hilarious story of four friends who, driving back from a failed skiing trip, encounter a strange and enormous ro The men's frivilous attempt to dislodge the rock gradually disintegrates into a tale of betrayal, defeat and renewed hope. The heroes of the film are doctors, engineers and businessmen in the throes of mid-life crises. Their middle class problems and the absurd phallic rock ventures gives rise to great humor. Directed by Mani Haghighi of Iran, "Men At Work" won Best Felm at the Traverse City Film Festival, and Best Screenplay at the Jajr International Film Festival. Although the film is unrated, it is not recommended for ages under 17 without parental permission.

Both film programs and free. For more information call 617-376-1301, or visit www.thomascranelibrary.org.







Bill To Crack Down On Rogue Mortgage Brokers Gets Favorable Report

Rep. Ron Mariano, chairman of the House Committee on Financial Services announces the release of legislation to protect mortgage consumers in Massachusetts, has been favorably reported out from his committee.

"recent investigations have clearly shown the existence of rogue mortgage brokers operating in Massachusetts," Mariano said. "Using deceptive practices they have defrauded too many consumers out of their hard earned money. With this legislation, no longer will these companies be able to get caught in one city, close up shop, and then reappear under a new name in the next town over a few months later."

In September, the Commissioner of Banks shut down 11 mortgage brokerage firms for intentionally steering prospective home buyers into mortgages they could not reasonably afford, typically by inflating a borrower's actual income on application documents. Additional concerns related to brokers discouraging homebuyers from hiring lawyers to scrutinize mortgage documents, and persuading borrowers to sign blank loan applications.

RON MARIANO

The legislation favorably reported from the Committee on Financial Services will allow Massachusetts to join with other states to establish a multi-state licensing system for mortgage brokers and mortgage lenders. This national database will contain more comprehensive information about licenses, and facilitate the sharing of regulatory information such as enforcement actions and compliance records.

"The recent spike in foreclosures has not gone unnoticed, and is, in part, attributable to these deceptive leaders," Mariano said. "This legislation will help protect consumers not just in Massachusetts, but all across the country."

Cell Phone Service Soon Available In Tunnels

A settlement was recently reached that will provide cellphone service in the Boston tunnel system.

After a four year stalemate between cellular phone service providers and the Massachusetts Turnpike Authority, there is an agreement to begin construction on a wireless service infrastructure system in the Ted Williams tunnel and ramp system.

Senator Michael Morrissey co-sponsored an amendment in this year's Economic Stimulus Package that forced the parties to appear at a hearing before the Department of Telecommunications and Energy.

"Telephone service in the tunnels had been promised for years, and I am grateful for the role that the DTE played to help address this public safety issue as quickly and efficiently as they did," he said.

The settlement calls for an up-front sum of $1.569 million to be divided equally among the carriers and yearly fees of $140,000 per carrier (increasing annually by 2.5 percent) for maintenance and upkeep of technology.

Quincy Police Tips On Safeguarding Holiday Packages

By LT. DAN MINTON
Quincy Police
Crime Prevention Unit

Last year during the holiday season, many local residents were victims of larceny, notably, packages left at their doorsteps by various courier services.

There have been few incidents in the last week.

Investigating these types of crimes can be difficult since considerable time may have elapsed since the package was taken and when the victim first makes inquiries as to its whereabouts. Knowing when to expect the package helps reduce the chances of being victimized.

Often times, a package may be dropped off at your doorstep and left there for many hours until you come home. A thief sees this as an opportunity to take the package, hoping that it is of value to them. The most important step for a consumer is to write down the tracking number after making a purchase.

Purchases online often come with a follow-up confirmation email with the tracking number. When ordering online, look for the "info field" space where you can submit specific directions as to where you want the package delivered. If the order is via the telephone, ask for the tracking number and the company making the delivery. Tell the customer service representative to make not of your directions as to where you want the package delivered.

Some suggestions would be to have the package left with a neighbor who will most likely be at home, or have the package left out of plain view, such as on the back steps or back deck. Leaving a note for the courier as to where to leave the package has its drawbacks. Do not indicate in the note that you are not home since this may lead to a housebreak.

A better way would be to state in the note that you are sleeping or working inside with loud tools, with additional instructions as to where to leave the package. As part of any note left, be sure to state that you want the courier to take the note with him/her. With the tracking number, you can find out how close the package is to your local distribution center, then call and try to get an estimated time of delivery. This will help you make plans to ensure that the package is in a safe place and affords you the opportunity to make last minute changes as to where you want the package delivered.

There are other options once the package arrives at the local distribution center. One possibility would be to re-direct the package to your work place or held at the distribution center where you could pick it up. Be sure to bring government photo identification, preferably with a matching address of where the package is being sent. If the package is expensive or has great sentimental value, consider the "signature required" option.

I spoke with a customer service representative at UPS and he said that the courier will make three attempts to deliver in hand, and after the first unsuccessful try, a card will be left stating the next time he/she will return. There is also a telephone number to call to set up a better time, or you can leave a message on the original note stating the hours you will be home. If you are going away for a few days and there is no safe place to leave a package, you can opt for "future delivery." The courier service will hold the package until the predetermined date that you return home.

According to UPS, even if you do not have a tracking number, it is possible to track your package by using other numbers, such as a reference or confirmation number given to you by the company you did business with. Taking these simple steps will help ensure that your holiday gifts reach the person they are meant for.

Sacred Heart School PTO 'Adopts' Area In Front Of North Quincy Library

Sacred Heart School PTO of North Quincy has "adopting" the area in front of the North Quincy branch of the Thomas Crane Public Library in an effort to beautify the school's neighboring community.

A variety of evergreen shrubs and daylilies were planted in the early fall and the garden was officially designated with a sign from the city's parks department.

With the addition of 100 unique daffodil bulbs donated by Mantis Plants and Flowers of Wollaston, Sacred Heart School students recently completed planting this garden.

In the spring, the garden will bloom with the yellow flowers welcoming visitors to the library.

Ann McLaughlin, Library director, Thomas Crane Public Library, speaking on behalf of the Board of Trustees of the Thomas Crane Library, expressed thanks to the PTO.

"The front of the library will be much nicer with a welcoming garden. We appreciate your willingness to take on this project, and look forward to working with you, and enjoying the garden," she added.

Downtown Revitalization With Concourse

destination" without the city promoting private investments to reestablish downtown as the heart of retail and shopping in the city.

According to the study, in the past 35 years, only three new developments have occurred in or adjacent to the Quincy Center URD: the Stop & Shop building garage, Presidents Place, and Quincy Fire and Mutual building. Of the three, only the Quincy Fire and Mutual building was redeveloped without the support of city grants.

Harrington said that 39 percent of the URD area is vacant or used for surface parking, making up over $1.3 million in developable lot area. Plans for the concourse are set to improve public access to the Hancock Parking Lot, and evaluate the Ross Garage for either improvement or relocation.

The plan also claims that the city is seeking a developer who will create retail space along Quincy Center with office space located above it. Harrington said that 75 percent of the retail spaces are less than 15,000 square feet in area, and most are irregular in shape, which should prove a disadvantage in development.

Harrington also said that the irregular street network would be improved, and that the downtown intersections are substandard, with inadequate signage, narrow streets, and many are in disrepair.

Plans also include several public squares and parks scattered throughout the downtown, which are set to include trees and outdoor furniture.

A 20-year URD Plan cost estimates are $18,633,557, but only $17,172,000 was designated in the plan as a funding source, thus far. Cost estimates are set to cover the demolition of the Ross Garage, street and public space improvements, construction of a new garage at the Hancock Lot, evaluations, administration and legal costs.

City Council President Douglas Gutro questioned Commissioner Steven O'Donnell as to plans to provide flooding relief as part of the concourse project.

"We have all good intentions of doing something with Bigelow Street," said O'Donnell if we can get DCR to come up with the money to pay for it, but right now that portion is not funded as part of this section, and MASS Highway won't pay for it either."

After Gutro expressed concerns over impact on the American Legion Post, Harrington assured the committee that Legion property will not be altered at all with the construction of the concourse.

Ward 1 Councillor Leo Kelly, chairman of the Downtown Committee, praised Harrington and Calnan for their work.

"This is the kind of answers that most councillors have been looking for," he said.

Nominations Coming In For Sun 'Citizen Of Year'

Nominations are coming in for The Quincy Sun's 22nd annual "Citizen of the Year" award.

Established in 1985, the award recognizes an individual for outstanding community service or a special achievement.

Last year, George White, a 40-year member of the Quincy Christmas Festival Committee – including 25 years as committee chairman – was honored for bringing holiday joy to many thousands of all ages.

White was selected for the honor from among 35 nominees submitted by Quincy Sun readers. A panel of judges representing a cross-section of the community made the final decision.

Again this year, Sun readers may nominate the person they feel is the most deserving of the award.

A nomination ballot to help the selection process appears on Page ?? of this week's issue of The Quincy Sun.

After nominations close Sunday, Dec. 31, a judging panel will be selected to make the final choice from nominations submitted.

If you know someone you would like to see recognized with the 2006 award, fill out the ballot and mail it to:

The Quincy Sun
Attn: Citizen of the Year
1372 Hancock St.
Quincy, MA 02169

Those submitting nominations should identify themselves. They can also attach to the ballot a letter detailing the reason for their nomination.

Nominees can be someone in elective office, a member of an appointed board, a clergy member, a teacher or school administrator, a police or firefighter, someone in the business community, a sports figure or an "unsung" neighbor or friend who has given freely of his or her time to a worthy project or cause.

Those nominated in the past are eligible to be nominated again this year. Since this is not a popularity contest, each nominee has an equal chance of being selected regardless of the number of nominations received. Anyone nominated just once has the same chance of being the award recipient.

The name of the winner will be announced in The Quincy Sun in January.

"We are pleased to have DiCesare Publishing Co. on board as the publisher of WAVES," said Peter Forman, president of the South Shore Chamber, one of the state's largest chambers with more than 2,000 members. "The company has provided our members with an entirely new, beautifully-designed publication that features well-written articles on the news and topics that are shaping the business climate on the South Shore. AMONG THOSE ATTENDING the Massachusetts Beverage Association's recent Member Appreciation Night at Granite Links Golf Club in Quincy were (from left) Terry Connaughton, executive director of MLBA; A. Raymond Tye, Scott Behman, a partner in Gibson & Behman (general counsel to MLBA), and Pat Cross, of IVA/MLBA.

Mass. Licensed Beverage Association Honors Philanthropist At Quincy Meeting

The Massachusetts Licensed Beverage Association (MassLBA) and Irish Vintners Association (IVA), representing more than 5,000 on-premise beverage alcohol licensees across Massachusetts, honored area philanthropist A. Raymond Tye at their second annual Member Appreciation Night held recently at the Granite Links Golf Club, Quincy.

Terry Connaughton, the organization's new executive director, said the event was intended to showcase Tye's many contributions to the alcohol and beverage industry. Additionally, the MLBA/IVA showed its appreciation for Tye's contributions with a check in the amount of $1,000 toward the Ray Tye Medical Aid Foundation.

The organization is a non-profit organization whose mission is to raise funds to help provide medical assistance for those in need.

Connaughton, in presenting the check from MassLBA/IVA to Raymond Tye, said, "Those of us in the restaurant and liquor industry salute both your business expertise and what you have done for the industry, as well as your strong sense of humanitarianism in helping the less fortunate. We hope that in some small way this check will help further that mission."

Raymond Tye is remembered as the individual who built United Liquors, one of the region's key liquor distributors. Tye sold the business to the Martignetti family earlier this year and coincidentally "passed papers" on the transaction on Oct 11, the day of the event.

The Granite Links event was sponsored in-part by the law firm Gibson & Behman, a national firm with corporate headquarters in Burlington. Gibson & Behman serves as general counsel to the Massachusetts Licensed Beverage Association. Other sponsors included Hallsmith-Sysco Foodservice, Amity Insurance, and Anheuser-Busch and others.

The Irish Vintners Association under the auspices of Massachusetts Licensed Beverage Association is an organization that is dedicated to promoting the protection and profitability of the state's on-premise beverage alcohol licensees. The Association can trace its history to Ireland and back hundreds of years. The organization's founder, Patrick Cross, owner of The Thirsty Scholar in Somerville was on hand to honor Tye.

Restaurant and tavern owners interested in additional membership information should call 781-229-0984 or visit www.masslba.org for further details. MLBA maintains offices at One Mountain Road, Burlington.

Bay State Offering Free Counseling For Alcohol Problems

The Family Project at Bay State Community Services in Quincy offers free counseling for individuals with alcoholism and their family members.

The Family Project is a research study to find out whether adding family counseling to one-on-one recovery counseling leads to more sobriety for individuals with alcohol problems. The study is being conducted by researchers and clinicians at Harvard Medical School and Bay State Community Services. Counseling is provided free of charge by licensed, masters-level therapists.

To see whether adding family counseling to one-on-one counseling increases sobriety rates, half of the participants in the program are randomly assigned to receive free family counseling and on-on-one counseling. The other half are randomly assigned to receive one-on-one counseling but do not receive family counseling. Treatment includes 24 counseling sessions over 12 weeks for all participants in the study.

Daurice Cox, PsyD, Director of Clinical Services at Bay State Community Services, said she is pleased that Bay State can offer this opportunity to patients and their family members. Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin and his son Matthew, recently volunteered for "Family Time To Give," a day that assisted the Cradles to Crayons organization, which provides supplies for children of low-income homes.

The Coughlins helped to collect supplies for Cradles to Crayons, and helped to organize, pack and redistribute them.

Cradles to Crayons relies on donations of gently-used toys and school supplies. The organization redistributes the supplies to families in-need, through various social service agencies, and helped 25,000 children in 2005.

Sixteen volunteers, including a representative from Quincy's Quilter's Compass, stitched 700 colorful blankets of Polartec, donated by Marden Mills, said Kevin Coughlin. Sponsorship donations raised $268,000 for the organization.

NFPA And UL Urge Safe Decorating Practices

Keep That Holiday Cheer: Avoid Fires, Falls Or Shocks

Christmas trees are among the most popular decorations of yuletide, but they also can be deadly.

In 2000-2004 on average, one out of every 22 Christmas tree fires in homes resulted in a death, according to the National Fire Protection Association (NFPA).

To help families avoid such tragedies this holiday season, Underwriters Laboratories Inc. (UL) and the NFPA are partnering to remind people that a little common sense and precaution can help create a safer holiday season.

NFPA statistics show that, on average, live and artificial Christmas trees are the ignition sources of 300 reported U.S. home structure fires each year resulting in 14 fatalities, 21 injuries and $16.8 million in property damage.

"The last thing you want during the holidays is a blazing Christmas tree," said Lorraine Carli, NFPA's assistant vice president of communications. "By following simple safety measures like making sure your tree is well watered, and keeping open flames, such as burning candles, away from the tree will help keep you and your home safe."

In addition, 44 percent of Christmas tree fires are caused by an electrical problem or malfunction. Decorators should make sure that any electrical cords they are use are in good working order.

"Damaged or misused electric light strings and extension cords, if left unchecked before you put them up, can deliver shocks and potentially cause home fires," John Drengenberg, consumer affairs manager for UL, said. "If they are damaged or have frayed wires, you should buy new ones. They are relatively cheap and incredibly good insurance for keeping your holiday season safe."

UL reminds consumers to inspect light strings for cracked sockets and frayed, bare or loose wires. Look for the holographic UL Mark on light strings and electrical decorations.

Operation Decoration 2006:

Tips for Keeping the Home Safe This Holiday Season

Christmas Trees

• Regularly check your tree for fresh, green needles. Trees that have dried out over several weeks burn faster than fresher, well-watered. Remember to keep your tree watered at all times.

• Make sure your tree stand holds at least 1 gallon of water. As a general rule, stands should provide 1 quart of water per inch of trunk diameter. The average 6-foot tree has a 4-inch diameter trunk and can consume as much as 4 quarts or 1 gallon of water per day.

• Keep your tree at least 3 feet from fireplaces, radiators, space heaters, heating vents and other sources of heat. Don't place the tree where it blocks an exit.

Lighting

• Look for the UL Mark on light strings, electrical decorations and extension cords. The UL Mark means that UL engineers have tested representative samples of the product for foreseeable safety hazards such as fire and electric shock.

• Ensure outside lights, decorations and extension cords are rated for outside use. Lights intended for indoor-only use bear green holographic UL Marks. Light strings intended for indoor and outdoor use bear red holographic UL Marks.

• Carefully inspect each electrical decoration - new or old - before plugging it in. Cracked sockets, frayed, bare or loose wires can cause a serious electric shock or start a fire. Replace damaged items with new, UL-Listed decorations.

• Don't use staples or nails to hang light strings. Instead, purchase plastic hooks or clips designed for hanging light strings.

• Check packaging to determine the maximum number of strings that may be connected or use this rule of thumb: Connect a maximum of three midget (push-in bulbs) light strings or up to 50 bulbs of light strings with the screw-in bulbs (C7s and C9s).

• Don't overload extension cords by plugging in too many decorations.

• Turn off all electrical lights and decorations before leaving home or going to bed.

• Read and follow the manufacturer's instructions for electrical decorations.

Candles

• Keep candles away from combustible materials, such as decorations, paper, wreaths and boughs.

• Place candles away from places that could be knocked over by a person or pet.

• Use sturdy, non-combustible candleholders that can collect dripping wax and won't tip over.

• Extinguish a candle when 2 inches of wax remains or a half-inch if the candle is in a container. This prevents heat damage to the surface and stops glass containers from breaking.

• Always keep candles, as well as matches and lighters, out of the reach of children, and don't leave children unattended in a room with lit candles.

• Never use lit candles to decorate Christmas trees.

• Extinguish candles when leaving the room or going to sleep.

Ladders

• Use wooden or fiberglass ladders when near power lines and electrical wiring. Metal ladders conduct electricity.

• Use the right ladder for the job, ensuring it extends 3 feet over the roofline or working surface.

• Set the ladder on a firm, level surface and avoid soft or muddy ground.

• Never exceed the ladder's weight limit or the maximum load rating.

• Never stand on a step ladder's bucket shelf. Read and follow the warning stickers for highest standing levels.

• Only one person on the ladder.

• Don't carry equipment while climbing. Wear a tool belt or have someone hand equipment to you.

• Face the ladder when climbing up or down, keeping your body centered between the side rails.

For more information on decorating safety, visit http://www.ul.com/newsroom or http://www.nfpa.org.

Holiday Decorating Ideas

Deck The Halls For Less

(NAPS)- The holiday season is a time for making your house bright and festive as the days shorten. Now, new technology lets you light your home without lightening your wallet.

Most decorative holiday light strings use standard incandescent bulbs. However, these bulbs consume a great deal of electricity and frequently burn out. That's why more and more people are turning to Light Emitting Diode products, also known a LEDs. You may know these little red lights as the red numbers on the display of your clock radio or the mulitple red dots in the thrid-brake light on several different automobiles, but now these colorful light sources are making inroads into the festive holiday lighting market. The U.S Department of Energy is working cooperatively with research institutions and private companies to accelerate the development of better and more efficient LEDs to replace traditional lightbulbs.

LEDs are solid-state devices that have the potential to revolutionize the lighting industry, with the promise of highly efficient and durable products. LEDs, when used in decrative holiday light string, consume approximately 0.05 watts of power-nearly 90 percent less power than a regular incandescent miniilight. LED holiday lights also last a long time and produce little heat, helping to eliminate fire hazards. Not only that, but LED lamps will not shatter, and they are rated for thousands of hours of service-more than 20 times longer than incandescent strings.

LED strings are available in a broad range of colors, and include regular strings as well as styles such as icicle-style strings, rope lights and holiday ornaments. LED strings are available with lamps that change from one color to another and with commercial-quaility plugs that allow more than 100 strings to be connected end to end. There are even screw-in LED blubs for converting your incandescent strings to LED-enabling consumers to save up to 90 percent of the electricity that would have ben consumed by incandescent lamp. LED strings give you a different look as well. Where traditional lights blink on and off, LEDs can offer a shimmering effect, making LEDs and attractive choice for beautiful holiday decorating. You can also create interesting effects-and save money-by using timers. Timers let you have lights on after dark when they're visible-and when you're home to enjoy them. Some companies are also offering LEDs connected to solar panels-which makes them cost nothing to operate. To learn more about LED lighting, visit http://www.netl.doe.gov/ssl/

Increase Comfort And Savings This Winter

POINTS FOR HOMEOWNERS

(NAPS) - Don't let your heating bills leave you in the cold. While high fuel prices mean heating your home can take a bite out of your budget, you can reduce home heating costs and protect your property by following a few simple money-saving tips.

• Check your roof. Replace loose or missing shingles, and be sure the flashing around the chimney or vent pipe is watertight.

• Look for leaks around doors, windows and the entry points for pipes and ducts. Apply caulk, weather stripping, plastic or door sweeps as necessary to seal off leaks and prevent drafts

• Visit a home improvement center to find out how much insulation is recommended for homes in your area, then check the insulation in your attic to be sure it's adequate.

• Prepare your home heating system by changing or cleaning your furnace filter, clearing away debris from intake and exhaust vents and making an appointment with a service technician to inspect your system.

• Minimize the use of ventilation fans, which can quickly suck heated air out of your house.

• Check the temperature of your hot water heater to be certain it isn't set too high, and wrap your water heater in an insulated blanket to prevent heat loss.

• Open curtains and blinds on the sunny side of your house when the sun is shining, and close them when the sun sets.

• Don't heat rooms or areas of your house that you do not use regularly. Closing vents in those areas or turning back thermostats can significantly reduce heating costs.

• Use your thermostat as a tool to effectively control heating costs. This means not setting it above the desired room temperature, because it will not heat your home more quickly, and your furnace will work harder. Similarly, setting your thermostat too low will cause your furnace to work harder to reheat your home during the day.

A programmable thermostat automatically raises and lowers the temperature in your home at preset times. Homeowners who purchase a Luxaire brand programmable Talking Thermostat from Johnson Controls will appreciate the thermostat's EZ Talk feature that audibly guides them through every step of programming their heating/cooling system thermostat. The user-friendly thermostat also offers a number of additional features, including alerts and easy-to-read, lighted LCD display that shows current temperature, set points and the heating or cooling mode of operation.

THIS IS A HAMMER

Reader Solutions

DEAR HAMMER: I'm responding to the reader who has gummy residue stuck on the clear plastic lid of a record player. Here is another solution: Go to your nearest craft store that sells scrapbook supplies and by a product called Un-Du. It is used to remove any self-adhesive type sticker or label and can be used to remove any gummy substance left behind from one as well. It is safe for old photos and works on mirrors, plastics and even cleans gummy scissors. I have not yet found a product it does harm to. Once the removed sticker dries it can even be reused! It is truly a fabulous product! —Kelly B., via e-mail

DEAR KELLY: Fantastic advice! I hadn't thought of craft stores, and this product sounds like just what is needed to remove the sticker residue without damaging the surface. Un-Du Adhesive Remover can be found in the scrapbooking supply section of most craft stores.

DEAR HAMMER: I had a problem like the one in your column about new shingles looking too new for view. The roofer took off some shingles on a less conspicuous place on the side of my roof, put the older shingles where they would be seen from the street and put the new ones in the less conspicuous place where it did not matter what they looked like. —Ina G., via e-mail

DEAR INA: I hadn't thought about that option, but it sounds like a good one! If a professional roofer is making the repairs, ask him if he can do this, or otherwise camouflage the shingles so that they blend in with the rest of the roof. Do-it-yourselfers can also do this, of course — just remove the old shingles very carefully so they aren't damaged.

Rotator Cuff Injury Sidelines Golfer

Q. My husband recently injured his rotator cuff and has had to stay away from playing golf. How can he condition his rotator cuff muscles to prevent this from happening again once he is injury-free?

A. The rotator cuff is a group of four muscles and their tendons that are responsible for connecting the upper arm and shoulder blade. This group of muscles also helps to lift your arm up over your head and also rotate it toward and away from your body.

Rotator cuff injuries can vary from tendonitis and bursitis to tears. Each causes different degrees of limitations and discomfort. The causes can be from normal wear and tear, a sudden fall where you use your arms to break your fall, heavy lifting, poor posture or repeated stress upon the shoulder joint, such as when playing golf.

Repetitive stress on the shoulder joint results in many of the rotator cuff injuries that golfers experience. Although golfers may find these injuries to be very common among golfers, they can take steps to lower the risk. Here are some tips to help your husband stay injury-free.

• Stay fit. Keeping your whole body strong, functional and flexible will prepare you for the demands that golf places on the body while playing or practicing. The stronger and more stable the muscles and joints of your shoulder, back, arms, hips and legs, the better control you'll have. These are prime areas for overuse injuries.

• Warm Up! Golfers often overlook the importance of warming up. Take a few minutes to elevate your heart rate. This will loosen up your muscles and joints. A light jog will do. Complete a stretching routine that loosens the muscles from your neck, shoulders, back, forearms, wrists, lower back, legs and calf. Take 20 to 30 seconds for each stretch, and repeat two or three times. This may take some time to complete, but it will take much longer to recover from an injury.

• Develop proper swing mechanics. Take lessons if needed. Poor mechanics over time can also lead to rotator cuff injuries.

• Listen to your body. When your body is tired or weak, take that as a warning to get some rest. Lack of rest or fatigue makes you more susceptible to injuries, so heed your body's warning.

Always consult a physician before beginning an exercise program. Pilates: Great Exercise Or Great Hype?

By LIZ NEPORENT

(NAPS) - Somehow, an exercise originally meant to help wounded soldiers caught on with Jennifer Aniston, then Oprah and then just about everybody else in America. But is Pilates really right for everyone? Here's a closer look:

What Is Pilates?

Pilates (pronounced Puh-Lat-Ez) is a series of low-impact exercises meant to strenghthen core muscles-namely, your abs and lower back. Individual Pilates exercises emphasize stretching and body movements and don't require traditional weights.

What Pilates Can And Can't Do

If your goal is to slim down, have firmer muscles, flatten your belly and reshape your entire torso area, then Pilates can work wonders. In fact, it first caught on with dancers for exactly that reason. Also, if you're looking to reduce stress and strengthen bones, Pilates is worth your time.

But if you have a lot of weight to lose, Pilates alone won't do the trick. You'll have to pair it with cardio activities such as daily walks and cut some calories out of your diet. Do that and you'll be looking and feeling great in no time.

Who Can And Can't Do Pilates?

Pilates can be done by just about anyone, either in a gym or at home. For instance, Mat Pilates requires nothing more than bare feet, comfy clothes and an area about the size of a beach towel.

There are people who should avoid Pilates, though. For instance, Pilates isn't right for someone recovering from a severe back injury or someone with a significant misalignment in the spine. Also, while Pilates can be done during pregnancy, it should only be done with a professional Pilates trainer, not on your own.

Getting Started

How can you give Pilates a try? Most health clubs and gyms offer Mat Pilates classes. You can also learn more about Pilates at www.pilatesstyle.com and www.pilates-pro.com, and if you want to try Pilates at home, there are plenty of DVDs to choose from.

The "Pick Your Level: Weight Loss Pilates" DVD is good because it's uniquely designed for all fitness levels-allowing each move to be done at a beginner, intermediate or advanced level. The DVD entitled "10 Minute Solution: Rapid Results Pilates" is also nice, because it offers five quick 10-minute workouts. Both are $14.98 and available in stores and online at www.collegevideo.com.

Stroke Screenings At Squantum First Church

Life Line Screening will conduct screenings to reduce the risk of stroke Wednesday, Jan. 17 at the First Church of Squantum, 164 Bellevue Rd.

Appointments will begin at 9 a.m.

A stroke, also known as a "brain attack," is ranked as the third leading killer in the world, and the second among women. Through preventive screenings, the risk of having a stroke can be greatly reduced.

Screenings are fast, painless and low cost. They involve the use of ultrasound technology, and scan for potential health problems related to: blocked arteries which can lead to a stroke, aortic aneurysms which can lead to a ruptured aorta, and hardening of the arteries in the legs, which are a strong predictor of heart disease.

Also offered for men and women is a bone density screening to assess their risk for osteoporosis.

All four screenings take less than an hour to complete. A complete vascular screening package, including the stroke/carotid artery, abdominal aortic aneurysm and ankle brachial index (hardening of the arteries) screenings is $109. The complete vascular package with the osteoporosis screening is $129.

To schedule an appointment, or for more information, call 1-877-237-1287. Pre-registration is required.

Enjoy The Colder Months Without Dry Skin

(NAPS) - The colder months are notorious for inflicting dry, irritated, flaky skin. Fortunately, a few tips from skin care experts can make it easier to keep skin glowing and healthy, whatever the weather does.

The combination of lower temperatures and reduced humidity associated with the colder months naturally draws moisture from the skin, making it feel flaky, scaly and even irritated and itchy. According to experts, the key to keeping itching and scratching at bay is protecting your skin with the right moisturizer. Here are a few more tips:

• Keep skin hydrated

Probably the most important thing you can do to prevent and treat dry, itchy skin is to moisturize every day. Look fro creams formulated with glycerin-a key moisturizing agent- and oatmeal to soothe the itch. Eucerin Calming Creme contains both ingredients and it's a moisturizer that's specifically made for the daily maintenance of persistently dry, itch-prone skin. It is even safe for very sensitive skin and for use on children.

• Limit exposure to water

Believe it or not, water can be very drying to the skin. Keep your showers short, and use lukewarm water, rather than taking long soaks in a hot bath or shower.

After stepping out of the shower, pat you skin almost dry with a towel. Immediately after toweling off or even washing your hands, lock in moisture by applying lotion or cream while your skin is still damp.

• Wear, soft, baggy clothing

Dress in breathable fabrics such as cotton and avoid clothing made of wool or heavy material that can be uncomfortable, especially for excessively dry skin. Tighter clothes are more abrasive and trap in perspiration, which softens the outer layer of skin, breaks down its protective barrier and worsens dry skin.

• Use a humidifier

Don't assume that staying out of the cold will solve your winter skin woes. Even staying indoors won't keep your skin moisturized.

A heated room has only about 15 percent relative humidity, leaving your skin feeling dry and tight. This can be avoided by adding humidity to your surroundings with a humidifier or placing pans of water near radiators.

DENTISTRY for the 21st Century

by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.

IMPLANTS SIMPLIFIED

The most natural-looking tooth replacement technique available today is dental implantation. It involves the surgical implantation of a small titanium post in the upper or lower jaw. A dental prosthesis is later affixed to a post in the implant to act as the actual replacement tooth. Intended to replace the root of the missing tooth, implants can serve as anchors for various types of dental prostheses, including single crowns, bridges, and partial or full dentures. Implants become firmly anchored into the jawbone through a process known as "osseointegration," which is a natural process by which the bone becomes one with the implant, creating a strong bond that establishes a stable anchor for overlying replacement teeth.

If you are missing one or more teeth and would like to smile, speak and eat again with comfort and confidence, there is good news! Dental implants are teeth that can look and feel just like your own! Do you have questions about implant dentistry? We want to provide you with the best dental care possible. Our goal is to be known as dentists who are gentle, caring, and friendly. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street, where we use the most modern techniques and equipment. We want you to look and feel your very best. Call us at 617-479-6220 today for the professional attention and home care guidance that will make a difference in your oral health care regimen. We offer the services of anesthestology with a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Visit us on the web at www.quincydentist.com.

P.S. Dental implants do not sacrifice the quality of adjacent teeth because, unlike a dental bridge, those teeth are not altered to support the implants.

Quincy Looks To Build On 2005 Season Success

By SEAN BRENNAN

GIRLS' BASKETBALL

The 2006-07 edition of the Quincy girls basketball team will look to reach the gold standard set by the 2005-6 team when they open their season this Wednesday night on the road against Norwell High School.

Last year's Presidents' team finished their regular season with an impressive 15-9 overall record and a 9-3 record in the Atlantic Coast League, which was good enough for a second place finish behind Whitman-Hanson High School. The Presidents went on to win a tournament game for the first time in 25 years, and made it all the way to the semi-final round of the Division 2 South Sectionals.

"Last year's team made it to the tournament (for the fourth year in a row), and knocked off #6 Holliston (54-39) and #3 Burke (54-45) before falling in the semi-finals to #2 Hopkinton," head coach Jeff Bretsch said. "It was by far the most successful season for a Presidents team, but we did graduate a number of seniors from the team, including our leading scorer Jessica Page."

For this season's team to be successful, the Presidents will need to lean on the seven returning players from last year's team, and more importantly the team's three returning starters.

Senior captain Brighid Kyle (F) and junior captains Meagan Tobin (SG) and Marybeth Torpey (PG) all come back this season with experience and moxie that should help alleviate the loss of Page.

"It really helps that the team will have back all three of these players," Bretsch said. "Having our #1, 2 and 3 options back and them playing at point guard, shooting guard and small forward is a positive. We have back the leaders we need in the backcourt and at small forward, and the key to our success will be the experience that each of them brings back from last year. All three should be big-time contributors this season."

Senior Hope Collins (F) and juniors Liz Bock (C), Kathryn Carella (F) and Julie Kisielius (G) round out the remaining returning starters for the Presidents and all four should play major minutes this year.

"This year's team has a lot of talent returning," Bretsch said. "The biggest adjustment that this team will have to deal with is figuring out who will score. I have the kids to do just that, and we will probably have a multi-pronged attack on offense all season long. We will need to use our speed and ball-handling because I see us using a up-tempo style. Defense will be big for us, and with the speed and talent we have it should be one of our strengths."

Senior Jacqueline Provenzano (G), a transfer from Florida, juniors Kerri Ryan (C) and Hilary Mills (F), sophomore Alyssa Mullen (F) and freshman Leslie Campbell (F) round out the rest of the roster.

After finishing last year in second place in the highly competitive ACL, Bretsch expects his team once again to be in the mix for another run at the league championship.

"The Atlantic Coast League is a very good basketball league," he said. "But I feel like we will have a solid team. We will be deep and we have a lot of kids who will compete. I don't expect there to be a lot of easy games, and with all of the new talent that we do have, it may take a while to blend together as a team. What I want to see is steady improvement as the season moves forward, and if that happens we should be in great shape come tournament time."

'Involvement With Junior Golf Is His Legacy

Ken Campbell Inducted Into PGA Hall Of Fame

Ken Campbell, a former Quincy resident and a 1948 graduate of North Quincy High School, was recently inducted into the PGA Hall of Fame for the Northeast District.

Mr. Campbell's golf career began as a young boy. He started off as a caddie at Wollaston Golf Club before joining the varsity golf team at North Quincy High School. At North, Campbell helped the Red Raiders to back-to-back state championships in 1947 and 1948.

Campbell would later go on to play on the PGA tour and the Senior PGA tour. He had a handful of top finishes in local state opens, New England championships and Senior Tour events, but his most memorable event was the 1983 New England Senior Championship. Campbell won this event, and as a result, he was named the New England Player/Professional of the year for 1983.

He spent the majority of his professional life as a club pro at two local golf courses. Campbell was the golf pro at Ponkapoag Golf Course for 20 years, and he was the pro at Newton Commonwealth for 15 years. His time spent as a local golf professional is when Campbell made his indelible mark on the local golf scene.

During his time at Ponkapoag and Newton Commonwealth, Campbell became a pioneer for the advancement of junior golf. He was instrumental in the development of junior tournaments and the advanced instruction of the game for younger players.

"He earned the respect of his peers as a very good player and a very good PGA professional," son in-law and Braintree Municipal golf pro Bob Beach said. "It all cumulated with his win at the New England Senior Championship in 1983. But Ken's most important golf achievement was his involvement in junior golf. He gave back, without profit, by giving instructions to other golf pros about junior golf, and by running junior camps. The legacy that he has passed on is through his involvement with junior golf."

Campbell, throughout his years as the club pro at Ponkapoag and Newton Commonwealth, organized and started a number of junior events that he used as a way to incorporate learning and a competitive balance on the links.

He ran the New England Junior Tournament at Ponkapoag for 20 years, and while the golf pro at Newton Commonwealth, he ran the New England Junior Team Tournament. Campbell was also involved in organizing and running local CYO golf tournaments.

"He started many great junior tournaments during his time as a golf pro," Beach said. "He loved giving instruction to junior golfers, and although he was a real good golfer, his induction into the PGA Hall of Fame for the Northeast District was based on this involvement and his development of junior golf."

Campbell, who was inducted into the Hall of Fame on October 28th, 2006 at Braeburn Newton Country Club, now resides in Florida. Since his retirement, Campbell has become an avid fisherman and gardener, and he enjoys spending time with his grandchildren.

Campbell's golf legacy is now being carried on by his two sons, Andrew and Jim, and his son-in law Bob Beach.

Andrew is the club pro at Black Hall C.C. in Lyme, CT., while Jim is the club pro at Cape Cod National in Brewster. Beach is the club pro at Braintree Municipal Golf Course, MA.

LOSS OF CONTROL (ARMS)

A control arm is a suspension component that attaches to the chassis and manages the motion of the wheels in accordance with the body of the vehicle. Each of the several control arms (upper and lower) utilizes bushings at points of attachment. These bushings absorb all of the vehicle's front-end loading during braking, cornering, and even steady highway driving. With worn bushings, drivers are likely to experience front-end vibration and/or shimmying. Mileage and age may conspire to weaken bushings. If so, the control arms will oscillate, and there may be a clunking sound. Ask your auto technician about the need for new control arms and bushings to restore handling and feel to your vehicle.

At LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO, we feel that handling is an important part to a safe vehicle. Control arms, and their attaching bushings, can wear out with use over time. It's important to have your car, truck, or SUV checked out by a professional when you sense vibrations, or shimmying. You can trust our expert mechanics, located at 258 Quincy Ave., Braintree, to perform safe repairs. Questions? Call 781-843-1550. Sunoco and most major credit cards honored.

North Quincy Team 'Small But Quick'

GIRLS' BASKETBALL

By SEAN BRENNAN

The 2006-2007 North Quincy varsity girls basketball team, under the direction of head coach Doug MacFarlane, will be looking to make the post-season tournament for the eighth time in the last nine years.

Last year's team finished their regular season with a 11-7 record, before falling to Fontbonne Academy, 73-43, in the first round of the post-season.

"Our team this season is going to be small, but quick," MacFarlane said recently. "If we are going to compete against teams with taller players we are going to have to be an up-tempo, fast paced team. The keys for us this season will be our ability to push the ball on offense, and defensively we need to get into the other team's faces. I see us playing a lot of man-to-man and full court zone on defense. We can not let teams attack us, we need to be the team that is on the attack."

Although the Red Raiders may be lacking in height this season, the team does return its top player from last year's team. Junior forward/guard Rebecca Goreham, a two-time Atlantic Coast League all-star, gives the Red Raiders a weapon on the offensive and defensive side of the court. Goreham will be the main player for the Raiders in 2006-7, and she has the chance this season to become the school's all-time leader in rebounding.

"Rebecca is a great player," MacFarlane said. "She is our best player and she will probably receive the most attention from other teams, but her ability will definitely give us an advantage when we step onto the court."

The team will also rely heavily on its seniors to provide the rest of the team with guidance throughout the long season. Their experience will be a key component to how well the Raiders do this year.

Seniors Megan Therrien (G/F) and Lauren Stille (PG), who along with Goreham are the team's captains, both have the experience and the basketball IQ to help North Quincy this year.

"Therrien brings a lot of experience to the team, and Stille is a dog on defense," MacFarlane said. "Stille is very quick, and her speed is a bonus when it comes to defensive coverage. Both of these senior captains will play a big part in our success this season."

Other seniors to keep in eye on as the winter progresses are Shannon Malone (F), Danielle Kelly (SF/SG) and Carolyn Cunningham (C/F).

"One of our biggest weakness may come from the team's lack of an outside scorer and deep threat," MacFarlane said. "But Danielle Kelly has the chance to be that weapon. She can shoot."

Besides Goreham, the rest of the juniors on the team include MaryKate Stille, Kasey O'Connell (G), Paige Bonanni (G), Rachel Goreham (F) and Brianne Carnell (F), a first-year transfer from Archbishop Williams High School.

"Stille is our quickest and our best defensive player," MacFarlane said. "O'Connell and Bonanni can both handle the ball, are quick and will see tons of playing time this year. Carnell, who is new to the team this year, could be big for us on the boards."

Sophomores to look out for include Catherine O'Connell (6ft./F), Kathleen Lynch (F), Jessie Howlet and Siobhan Carnell.

"Some of these sophomores will spend some of the year at the varsity and jayvee levels," MacFarlane said. "O'Connell is six feet and could be good on the boards, while Carnell has surprised us in practice with her scoring and shooting ability."

The team may find a roster space for freshman Rushri Wigesundera.

"Rushri is a great athlete and she runs the floor well. She has a chance to contribute this year," MacFarlane said.

"We look like we will be very competitive, and we should give other teams a lot of trouble, but scoring will be a problem," MacFarlane said. "Our goal is to make the tournament. Our senior experience will play a big part in off-setting our lack of height, and our team speed should be a bonus."

The Red Raiders tip-off their season this week with games against Brockton H.S. (12/11) and Malden H.S. (12/13) before hosting Plymouth South H.S. on Friday (12/15) in the team's home opener.

Players Showing 'Great Commitment'

Transitional Year For Red Raiders

BOYS' BASKETBALL

The North Quincy boys basketball team opened their 2006-2007 season Wednesday with a home tilt against Barnstable High School. This year's Red Raider team looked different on the court and on the sidelines at the 6:30 p.m. tip-off.

Gone from last year's team is former head coach Jim Rendle. Rendle, now the athletic director for the city's two high schools, hands the reins over to the former North Quincy J.V. coach, Kevin Barrett. Barrett, who has been on the North Quincy coaching staff for the past four seasons, takes over a team that returns just a handful of players from last year's 17-6 team.

The 2006 Red Raiders ended the season as co-champions of the Atlantic Coast League with Quincy High School, and made the Division 1 South Sectional tournament as the #5 seed. In the post-season, North Quincy fell in the first round to #12 Framingham, 60-44.

"Last year's team was a senior laden team," Barrett said. "For this year's team to be successful, the kids who didn't see much time, and the kids who are up from the J.V. squad are going to have to make that transition to varsity basketball."

Barrett, who directed the jayvees last season to a 17-3 record, feels comfortable with the players he has on this year's varsity roster.

"I have coached every one of the kids on this year's roster at the J.V. level," Barrett said. "Once they get acclimated to the varsity game we should be fine. It may take a little longer this season to be as cohesive as I would like, but all the kids have shown a great commitment through playing in summer leagues and tournaments that were made available. This experience should translate to the court this season."

Players returning this season for the Red Raiders include senior tri-captains John Huerth, Terrell Johnson and Matt Edgerly. All three will be starters this season for the Red Raiders. Juniors Dennis Martin and Marcellus Lee are also returning from last year's team.

"The strengths of this year's team will be our size and our quickness," Barrett said. "One drawback for the team may be the lack of varsity experience on the roster, but the aggressive style of play that we plan to use should help balance any drawback that may present."

With a new coach and a handful of new players, the Red Raiders should be an exciting team this winter, but playing in the deep and talented ACL will present a challenge to Barrett and his team.

"We were co-champs last year, and we handled ourselves well in the ACL," Barrett said. "I have the advantage of being familiar with every player and knowing what each kid can bring to the court having coached them before. The need to make that transition, and when they do we should be in great shape."

The Red Raiders, after opening the season on 12/13 versus Barnstable, travel to Whitman-Hanson on 12/19 before coming back home on 12/22 to play against Falmouth High School.

Lady Presidents Travel Basketball

The Lady Presidents Travel Basketball teams continued their winning ways this past weekend on the road against Rockland.

Coach Peter Papile and Coach Rob Cerasoli were disappointed this weekend, as the Rockland 5th grade team was forced to forfeit its game because it did not have enough players. With the forfeit, the team will take a 2-0 record into the next game against Pembroke.

Christine Kelliher is demonstrating solid team support by attending every game and practice even though she is out due to an injury.

The seventh grade team relied on their half-court zone offense to build a 16-7 halftime lead. The team was lead offensively by Lizzie Kelly (6 points), Erin Chiocchio, Janelle Leone and Shannon Moriarty. Donna Niosi provided the team with the defensive spark it needed in the second half to help the Lady Presidents pull away from Rockland.

Coach Parry and Coach Bloomer remain impressed with the team's unselfish play as 10 of the 15 girls on the team scored in the 34-11 win.

The eighth grade team came out strong in the first half, and lead 19-2 at intermission. Forward Shelby Oliver had another strong game (14 rebounds) and defensively point guard Courtney Peterson contributed four steals and Uyen Vu had five steals.

The final score was Quincy 25 and Rockland 12.

Next week the teams will look to extend their winning streaks when they travel to Pembroke.

A Job Well Done

On Monday, Dec. 4, at approximately 5:30 p.m., Officers Joseph Paccioretti and Barry DeFranco responded to Quincy Street on a report of a "child down in the street." Upon arrival, Fallon Ambulance Paramedics attended to a semi-conscious 21-year-old man from Charlestown found lying on the sidewalk.

LT. DAN MINTON

Officer Paccioretti interviewed a 17-year-old female, who stated she was coming back from the store and called "911" when she came across the unknown victim. The paramedics treated the victim and made him more coherent.

Officer Paccioretti believed the victim was under the influence of drugs and questioned him. The victim said he just "shot up with heroin." At this time, a person who wanted to remain anonymous, came forward and told the officers that he/she saw the reporting woman and her sister carry the victim out of their house and lay him down on the sidewalk.

When confronted, the reporting woman denied this and reiterated that she did not know the victim. The officers then went to the home and the witness said he/she saw the victim dragged from and questioned a woman living there. After some intense questioning, the woman admitted that she and her younger sister, who was the person on the sidewalk with the victim when police arrived, did move him out to the sidewalk. The older sister said that she had been taking Klonopin (her own prescription) with the victim "to get high."

The older sister said that the victim also took Klonopin, but that he brought his own. She said that she did not see the victim shoot heroin but he told her that he did. It was soon after that the victim passed out. This information was given to the paramedics to treat the victim, who was then transported to Quincy Medical Center.

Officer Paccioretti checked warrants on the sisters and the victim and learned that there was a default warrant out of Charlestown District Court for the victim. The victim was placed under arrest at the Medical Center and under guard until released from medical care. He was then transported to the station for booking and held for court the next day.

In this case, the sisters acted recklessly, leaving the victim out in the cold in an unconscious state. They would have been in very serious trouble if not for responsible people who called "911". The Quincy Police Department "thanks" the anonymous citizen who stepped forward to tell the police officers at the scene of his/her knowledge, which helped clarify the situation and focus on the sisters.

Nice work!

SCOTT DEWARE

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

It has been said that probably the most discontented people in this world are those who set standards of performance and behavior for themselves and others which few can meet. It has also been said that nothing gives a man a sense of failure so often as an overdeveloped sense of perfection.

Have you ever thought what a paradise this world would be if everything and everyone in it were perfect? But we know this is not the way it is . . .

We all have to fulfill our destiny in the world that way it is, not the way we would like to have it. We have to live with people the way they are, tolerant of their faults and grateful for their virtues. All in all, it is not a bad world in spite of its imperfections.

The perfectionists of this world would be happier, indeed, if they would be satisfied to work merely to make things better without demanding that they be perfect.

Quincy Community United Methodist Church To Host Service Of The Longest Night Dec. 21

Quincy Community United Methodist Church, 40 Beale St., Wollaston, will host its second annual Service of the Longest Night Thursday, Dec. 21 at 7:30 p.m. in the church chapel.

The service gets its name for the Winter Solstice, the longest night of the year.

"The service is very simple and gentle, consisting of music, Scripture lessons, readings, prayer, and quiet reflection," said the Rev. Dr. Susan F. Jarek-Glidden, pastor. "Its purpose is to provide a safe place for people who are dealing with grief and loss of any kind, whether that grief and loss are recent or decades old."

For some people, the holiday season can be very stressful and, sometimes, very unhappy, the Rev. Dr. Jarek-Glidden said.

"Facing the first Christmas without a loved one's physical presence, dealing with an imminent death, living with an illness that places a question mark over the future, coping with the loss of a job, facing life after divorce or separation, and sometimes just life in general can make holiday celebration very difficult, if not impossible."

The Service of the Longest Night is intended to be a resource for people in stressful and unhappy situations.

The public is invited to attend.

For more information, call the church office at 617-773-3319.

Birthday Cake For Jesus Part Of Family Friendly Christmas Eve Service

Quincy Community United Methodist's 7 p.m. Christmas Eve service Sunday, Dec. 24 will feature a birthday cake for Jesus.

"The early Christmas Eve service is specifically designed for families and is more informal than the 11 p.m. service," said the Rev. Dr. Susan F. Jarek-Glidden, pastor of Quincy Community. "The 7 p.m. service includes lots of Christmas carols, and there is no sermon."

An usual feature of the service is Jesus' birthday cake. "Some people may think having a birthday cake for Jesus is rather strange," Rev. Dr. Jarek-Glidden said. "However, I think a birthday cake helps children understand that we're celebrating the birthday of Christ. After all, what's a birthday without a birthday cake?"

The service will conclude with singing "Happy Birthday" to Jesus.

Those attending the service will be invited to the church's Fellowship Hall for a piece of cake.

Quincy Community United Methodist Church is located at 40 Beale St., Wollaston.

For more information, call 617-773-3319.

A spun glass heart ornament was initially meant to be given to people who are experiencing a difficult holiday season. Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Make your holiday preparations one step at a time in order to avoid being overwhelmed and leaving things undone. That confusing family situation continues to work itself out.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Ease this year's holiday money pressures by letting your thrifty side guide you as you look for those perfect gifts that typically reflect your good taste and love of beauty.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) You'll have a good handle on potential holiday problems if you delegate tasks to family members, friends or co-workers — most of whom will be more than happy to help out.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Right now you are especially vulnerable to holiday scams that seek to take advantage of your generosity. Best advice: Check them out before you send out your checks.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) The upcoming holiday season gives the Big Cat much to purr about. Relationships grow stronger, and new opportunities loom on the horizon, just waiting to be pounced on.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) A changing situation brings conflicting advice about how to go forward with your holiday plans. Your best bet: Make the decision you feel most comfortable with.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Holiday plans get back on track after some confusion about the direction you expected to take. A potentially troublesome money matter needs your immediate attention.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Your holiday preparations are on track. But you need to confront a personal situation while you can still keep it from overwhelming everything else.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Tight financial matters ease a bit during this holiday season. But the sagacious Sagittarian is well-advised to keep a tight hold on the reins while shopping for gifts.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Don't put off making decisions about this year's holiday celebrations, despite the negative comments you've been getting from several quarters. Do it NOW!

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) The holidays will bring new friends and new opportunities. Meanwhile, be careful to use your energy wisely as you go about making holiday preparations.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) There's good news coming from a most unlikely source. And it could turn out to be one of the best holiday gifts you have had in years. Remember to stay positive.

BORN THIS WEEK: You are respected for your honesty and loyalty. You make friends slowly — but with rare exceptions, they're in your life forever.

Citizens Bank Supporting Salvation Army's Kettle Campaign

Citizens Bank of Massachusetts announces the locations of 50 specially-marked green kettles as part of the Massachusetts Salvation Army's 2006 Kettle Campaign.

The kettles are located throughout Massachusetts and will be available through Dec. 24.

In Quincy, kettles are located at the Stop & Shop at 495 Southern Artery and the Stop & Shop at 65 Newport Ave. in North Quincy.

Citizens Bank Foundation will match donations up to $250,000 collected at the specially-marked green kettles in Massachusetts. Citizens is partnering with the Salvation Army on this campaign to meet the growing demand for emergency food, shelter and clothing this winter in communities across the state.

"This is the first time in the history of the Salvation Army's Kettle Campaign that we will have kettles in cities and towns in Massachusetts in a color other than our traditional red," said Lt. Col. Fred Van Brunt, State Commander of the Massachusetts Salvation Army. "Changing the colors of some of these kettles from red to green and having the Citizens Bank Foundation match donations collected at these new green kettles is an eye-catching way to let people know the need and demand for assistance is changing everyday, and that there is a special opportunity this year to support more of our neighbors who are in need."

The Salvation Army's Kettle Campaign has been the organization's signature fundraising initiative for more than 100 years. Last year's campaign raised $2.9 million and provided more than 26,000 food vouchers, nearly 55,000 articles of clothing and more than 150,000 new toys for disadvantaged individuals, families and children in Massachusetts.

Alzheimer's Support Group Meets Dec. 19 At River Bay Club

The Norwell Visiting Nurse Association (VNA), in conjunction with the Quincy River Bay Club, announces they will be co-sponsoring an Alzheimer's Support Group.

The group will meet every third Tuesday of the month at the Quincy River Bay Club, located at 99 Brackett St., in Quincy. The primary focus of the group is challenges associated with early to mid-stage Alzheimer's.

The next meeting will be held on Tuesday, Dec. 19 from 6 to 7:30 p.m.

As Alzheimer's progresses in a loved one, caregivers are faced with new challenges and concerns. The increased dependence on the caregiver to assist with normal activities of daily life can greatly impact a caregiver's life. This group will serve as an outlet for caregivers to learn more about the disease and how to cope with the challenges he/she will face.

"Our program will combine an educational forum addressing specific Alzheimer's issues with a supportive environment for Alzheimer's caregivers," said Renee McInnes, RN "The goal of the group is to offer useful solutions as well as assistance and camaraderie for caregivers."

There is no charge for this meeting. Light refreshments will be provided.

All interested parties are encouraged to attend.

The group is funded by the South Shore Elder Services Title IIIE Grant under the Older Americans Act.

For more information about the Alzheimer's Support Group or the Norwell VNA, call Renee McInnes, RN at 781-659-2342.

Putting Merry In Christmas

Helping Hands Brighten Holiday For Needy Families

By MIKAELA SLANEY

Many helping hands have reached out to brighten the holiday season for Quincy families in need.

The Salvation Army assisted 391 local needy families and will continue through Christmas, according to Major Linda Jones, Corps officer of the Salvation Army.

"There has been a little increase of requests compared to all the years that I've been here," said Jones, who has been with the organization for six Christmases.

There has also been an increase in generosity, she said. The Salvation Army collected more in kettles as the same day in 2005.

"The Greater Quincy area is most kind and generous," she said. "Perhaps last year people had given so much for the natural disasters that they were tapped out."

According to Jones, needy families file for assistance on designated sign-up days. Families with children 12 and under are given gift cards the day of the application. They choose four toys, a stocking stuffer, and an article of clothing per child. Families who don't have children are mailed food vouchers for the grocery store.

Clothes are donated by individuals and organizations. Toys were either donated, or purchased by the Salvation Army. The Hanover branch has a greater storage capacity, and those with larger used goods are invited to donate at the Route 53 drop-off point.

Father Bill's Place has received a flood in generosity, according to Caitlin Bell, development director.

"People have been very generous," she said.

Father Bill's Place, a well-known transitional shelter in Quincy, received help from private donors and businesses this season.

One notable donor, Granite Communications, donated nine fully-decorated Christmas trees for children in the Father Bill's family program, as well as donating a financial contribution. Raytheon corporation and Braintree Rotary Club also conducted toy drives to benefit the children of Father Bill's.

"Today we went to families to drop off the trees and toys," said Bell. "It was a little like playing Santa Claus. One of the children was home and she was there when we plugged in the tree. Her eyes lit up. It was one of the most rewarding experiences I've ever had."

City Awarded $1,185,754 For Affordable Housing

State Senator Michael Morrissey announced Tuesday that Quincy has been awarded $1,185,754 in funding by the Department of Housing and Community Development.

The funds will go toward the development of 11 new rental units, 10 of which will be reserved for affordable housing, at 356 Washington St.

"There is still a lot of work to be done to build more homes in Quincy that are affordable for working families," said Morrissey. "These units represent a step in the right direction in bringing more affordable housing opportunities to Quincy."

Rep. Rondald Mariano added: "Quincy is very fortunate to receive this grant from the DHCD, and the money will certainly be put to good use."

"The funds for the program were made available through a unique mix of state, federal and private resources," said Rep. Bruce Ayers.

"Increasing affordable housing in Quincy is a top priority," added Rep. Stephen Tobin, "and these funds will help us achieve that goal."

For more information about the Department of Housing and Community Development's program call Phil Hailer at 617-573-1104.

Mayor's Breakfast Raises $14,000 For Scouting

Quincy Medical Center CEO Court Clerk Magistrate Receive Good Scout Awards

Two community leaders were honored at the annual Mayor's Boy Scout Breakfast at which $14,000 was raised for the scouting program in Quincy.

Dr. Gary Gibbons, MD, president and CEO at Quincy Medical Center and Arthur Tobin, former mayor now Clerk Magistrate at Quincy District Court received the Good Scout Award.

The awards were presented at a breakfast hosted by Mayor William Phelan, and the Boston Minuteman Council in the Ballroom at Granite Links Golf Club last week.

The Good Scout Award embodies the spirit of helpfulness to serve others on an individual and community basis.

In accepting his award, Dr. Gibbons proudly displayed his original compass as a Boy Scout and noted:

"I think the greatest thing scouting gave me wad sense of community and respect for one's self, for one's family and for one's community."

He urged members of Troop and Pack 42 St. John's Church, and Troop[24, First Church of Squantum, in attendance to take a dream today and use all their talents to make it a reality.

He spoke of his dream:

"One thing that we are doing at the Medical Center, a dream that I have always had as a vascular surgeon focusing on diabetes, is to one day make it so that this city of Quincy is going to be the first ever to have a disease management initiative.

"Working with the mayor, the legislators and everyone to take that dream. So, if you have diabetes or you are obese, we are going to be the national emblem for control of the things associated with diabetes.

"Get kids and parents eating right again. Control this thing and we will be the model for this city and for the country. It is already underway."

Tobin praised the business community," he said. "I think that they don't get the recognition they deserve. They are the unsung heroes of our community."

He cited Anthony Agnitti, Daniel J. Flynn, III, and Thomas P. O'Connell, co-chairman of the breakfast as examples.

"The business community stood tall to form a partnership with our education system and they helped out with supplies and expenses making sure the students have the things they need."

"When the mayor has his charity golf tournament at this golf links, all the money raised goes to a literacy program, so our young children can read, can grow up to be the future of this city."

Other speakers were Matt Thornton, Scout Executive, Boston Minuteman Council and Ray Theberge, chairman Great Blue Hill. Chet Curtis of New England Cable News and Quincy resident, was the emcee.

Past recipients of the Good Scout Award are:

Anthony Agnitti, Michael Bellotti, Mark Bertman, Henry Bosworth, George Burke, Robert Curry, Rick Fitzpatrick, Daniel Flynn, Paul Harold, David McCarthy, John O'Connor, Don Uvanitte, Thomas Williams and Ronald Zooleck.

Breakfast committee members were:

James Barbieri, Michael Barry, Kim DiBona, James Coyle, Becky Dowd, Edward Hanratty, Stephen Howard, Kathleen Kelly, Paul Kenney, Jack Moore, William Moran, Joseph Palumbo, Robert Rizzi, Dean Rizzo, Raymond Theberge and Lou Trubiano.

Appoints 'Vision Committee'

Phelan Looking At City Cultural Center

Mayor William Phelan has organized a "Vision Committee" to discuss the potential of creating a cultural and performing arts center in Quincy.

Comprised of local civic and business leaders, the committee will focus on the feasibility of such a facility and the potential benefits to the city.

Appointed to the committee to date are:

Phelan, who is also a member of the committee, said he plans to add the committee in the coming weeks.

"I believe that cultural and performing arts center could be an economic engine for Quincy and a regional destination point," said Phelan. "It's my hope that the committee discuss specific plans for locations, operations, and potential management for such a facility. The concept is very exciting, but we want to take an exhaustive look at how such a facility would operate and be sustainable."

The committee has begun its meetings and is in the preliminary stages of scouting locations. Concurrently, the committee is reviewing existing models of cultural and performance centers throughout Massachusetts including Memorial Hall in Plymouth, the Nickerson Theatre in Norwell, the Ellison Center in Duxbury and various other locations.

"Quincy is a great destination," Phelan said. "We have historic attractions, our shore front, and an amazing array of great restaurants. A cultural center would augment our city in a way that would draw thousands of people from outside to Quincy and significantly benefit our local economy. It could also provide a home to some of our local cultural organizations. We have a great committee that will kick the tires on this concept and I am very excited about this project."

LAW ENFORCEMENT CLASSES at Quincy High School recently completed their second annual food drive for 15 needy families in Quincy. The students, faculty and support staff donated entire dinners. Dan Minton of the Quincy Police Department. The Law Enforcement classes at Quincy High School are under the direction of James Flahive.

THE HISTORY CHANNEL

• On Dec. 19, 1732, Benjamin Franklin of Philadelphia first publishes "Poor Richard's Almanack." The book, filled with proverbs preaching industry and prudence, was published continuously for 25 years and became one of the most popular publications in colonial America, selling an average of 10,000 copies a year.

• On Dec. 18, 1865, following its ratification by the requisite three-quarters of the states earlier in the month, the 13th Amendment, banning slavery, is formally adopted into the U.S. Constitution.

• On Dec. 20, 1892, Charles and Frank Duryea's third automobile was the first to use pneumatic tires. Before the pneumatic tire, wheels were often made of solid rubber. This made travel a bumpy experience, as the streets of 1892 were made of dirt or cobblestone.

• On Dec. 21, 1937, the Lincoln Tunnel was officially opened to traffic, allowing motorists to drive between New Jersey and Manhattan beneath the Hudson River.

• On Dec. 22, 1949, Australian twin brothers Robin and Maurice Gibb are born. Together with their brother Barry, they later formed the Bee Gees (for "Brothers Gibb"). After adding a drummer and bassist, the group began racking up such hits as "To Love Somebody" (1967) and "I've Got to Get a Message to You" (1968).

• On Dec. 24, 1953, "Dragnet" becomes the first network series with a regular sponsor when Fatima cigarettes signs on to back the show. The program was one of the first dramatic series in a medium that had been dominated to that point by anthology shows.

• On Dec. 23, 1968, the crew and captain of the U.S. intelligence-gathering ship USS Pueblo are released after 11 months imprisonment by the government of North Korea. The ship, and its 83-man crew, was seized by North Korean warships on Jan. 23 and charged with intruding into North Korean waters. Both captain and crew were horribly treated and later recounted their torture at the hands of the North Koreans.

Dear Santa

Dear Santa:

I really did try to be good all year. Cross my heart.

But I know I didn't keep my word as I promised last year. I said I would write to you early (by Thanksgiving) to make it easier for you to pack your sleigh. No more last minute requests,...

But, here I am again. Late again.

I hope that doesn't make me naughty, Santa.

I have a lot of nice people on my list. Some of the gifts as you know, I ask for in a humorous vein – some in a serious.

I really would appreciate it if you could deliver as many of these gifts as you can when you and Rudolph and the other reindeer reach Quincy. Glad you have Rudolph, Santa. It could be a foggy Christmas Eve.

I don't want to be a pain, Santa. Just want to remind you once again: we are the Quincy that pronounces it Quin-zee. Wouldn't want you to mix us up with those other Quincys that erroneously pronounce it Quin-cee. You might get lost.

So, Santa, please drop off the following:

Mayor BILL PHELAN and the School Committee shovels with blue and white ribbons to break ground for that long sought new Quincy High School...Register of Probate PAT McDERMOTT, Ward 4 Councillor JAY DAVIS, School Committee member ANNE MAHONEY and STEVE HAROLD, who played important local roles in Gov.-elect DEVAL PATRICK'S election, front row seats to his inaguraton...A set of nomination papers for state Treasurer TIM CAHILL to be opened at a later date. The ones that say "For Governor"...DOUG GUTRO, a second term as City Council president on a unanimous vote...Councillor JOE FINN, a lucky coin to toss to help decide whether to run for mayor...If you have an extra one, Santa, give it to former Councillor MIKE CHENEY who has been thinking of a political comeback...City Clerk JOE SHEA, that election day he is still dreaming of-when every registered Quincy voter actually votes...Senator MIKE MORRISSEY and Reps. BRUCE AYERS, RON MARIANO and STEVE TOBIN, another package of political clout to make sure Quincy gets its share of Beacon Hill goodies...JOHN "JAKE" COMER, past national commander of the American Legion, success in his mission and that of the Citizen Flag Alliance for a Constitutional amendment to protect Old Glory from abuse...School Supt. RICHARD DeCRISTOFARO and Public Works Commissioner STEVE O'DONNELL, just one inch snow storms...Quincy Business Association's RICH GORMLEY and MARALIN MANNING, Quincy 2000 Collaborative's SEAN GALVIN and DEAN RIZZO, and Quincy Business Council's DAN FLYNN, a united effort to bring new business to Quincy...Police Chief ROBERT CROWLEY a year without major crimes...Fire Chief TIM PETTINELLI, a year without deadly fires and false alarms...Fr. BILL McCARTHY and JOHN YAZWINSKI, the miraculous day they are waiting for when they can close Father Bill's Place because it and other shelters for the homeless are no longer needed because there are no more homeless. What a day that would be Santa!...Majors DOUG and LINDA JONES, of the Salvation Army's Quincy Temple Corps, kettles filled to the brim these last few days before Christmas to help Quincy families in need...School Committee member LINDA STICE, the "Warm Heart Award" for quietly going down to Peru on her own alone to help orphaned children. She's not looking for any recognition, Santa, but she sure deserves it...BILL DRAICCHIO, City Hall's "Candy Man", a candy store of his own. He's got more than enough candy to stock one...ROGER BROUSSEAU, popular long-time manager of the Quincy Neighborhood Club, happy retirement and good fishing...CYNTHIA MOLER and LISA MURPHY, a trip back to their Quincy roots...Purchasing Agent LAURIE ALLEN, the best buys in the world...Health Commissioner DREW SCHEELE, all the flu vaccine he needs...Discover Quincy's MARK CAREY, an invasion of tourists . . . TOM GALVIN, a new box of old Quincy postcards to keep his "Scenes From Yesterday" Sun fans happy. . . FRANK McCAULEY, good digging for his Quincy's Yesterdays column . . . Warmest wishes to Fr. BILL MULLIN, Rev. ANN SUZEDELL, VIRGINIA SWALLOW, MARGE NASH, retired Fire Chief ED BARRY, VIN MOSCARDELLI, former Asst. City Clerk TOM BURKE, SHARON (PAOLUCCI) SWATEK, CHARLIE RYEBERG, BOBBY PETTINELLI, JOHN WALSH, former principal NQHS, his wife SHIRLEY, and JOHN DONLON...All my love to DOROTHY, GAIL, LINDA, DONNA (D.J.), DOLLY, BOB, FREDDIE, JIM, AMY G., MICHELLE, KIM, BRIAN, KELLIE, LINDSAY, JAY, MICHAEL, CAITLIN, SEAN, AMY B., JULIE, WENDY, DAVE, FRED, BEN...

And Santa, SHARRON BEALS is still keeping vigil every Christmas Eve at the Beechwood Community Center, hoping to catch you coming down the chimney. As I've mentioned before, she has that copy of her favorite "Thought For Christmas" she wants to personally give to you to take back to Mrs. Claus. Sharron doesn't give up, Santa. She'll be waiting for you.

Her "Thought For Christmas" goes like this:

"Do you know what would have happened if it had been the Three Wise Women instead of The Three Wise Men? They would have asked directions, arrived on time, helped deliver the baby, cleaned the stable and made a casserole, brought practical gifts and there would be "Peace On Earth".

I'm sure I've forgotten some people, Santa, including good friends. But to all of them and all of you, a very Merry Christmas, Happy Chanukah, and a Happy Healthy New Year.

MERRY CHRISTMAS from QUINCY, MASS.

Largest Christmas Tree in United States. 85 feet high contributed by Retail Merchants.

CONTINUING ON WITH a Christmas tradition, this is the 12th year we have published this 1934 postcard. This 85-foot Christmas tree was decorated with over 600 lights and two stars on the top that blinked alternately. Its placement in front of the Granite Trust Bank building was with the approval of bank president Theophilus King. He had built the art deco building in 1929 on the site of the old Bethany Church. King was Howard Johnson's banker and convinced him to open his second store, a restaurant, in the bank building at One Chestnut Street on the left. Johnson had his first office here as well. Homer's Jewelry store was under the awning on the right, now home to Rogers Jewelry Store. To contact Tom Galvin, e-mail tmgalvin@verizon.net

Marie's Kitchen

BY MARIE D'OLIMPIO

Stuffed Roast Pork With Sweet, And White Potatoes

All of us are having Christmas dinner at our daughter and son-in-law's Nancy and Jed's home, with all of us are bringing something.

My something will be a roast stuffed pork with roasted sweet and white potatoes.

Roast Stuffed Pork

1/2 pound mushrooms (fresh or canned)
1 stalk celery
1 cup stuffing mix (soaked)
1 small onion (chopped)
1/8 cup white wine
2 tablespoons oil
1 tablespoons Bell's seasoning (or a teaspoon thyme)

In hot oil, sauté the celery and onion. Add the mushrooms and the wine. Add the stuffing mix and cook until well blended. If dry, either add water or chicken stock.

Season the pork roast with salt and pepper and a smidgen of olive oil. Either have the butcher slit the top or side of the roast depending on which kind you purchase. Fill the cavity with the stuffing pressing it as tightly as possible. I usually place tooth picks to secure it if needed. Roast at 350 degree oven with 15 minutes to the pound.

Roasted Sweet and White Spuds

6 large white potatoes (any kind will do)
3 large sweet potatoes
1 large onion
salt and pepper to taste
3 tablespoons olive oil

Peel and cut the potatoes in quarters and then again in halves. Cut the onion in pieces. Place in a roasting pan. Add the salt and pepper and the oil and mix well. You can also add butter or margarine if desired.

Bake in a 400 degree oven until they are brown. Turn once in awhile. They take about an hour and a quarter to cook depending on the amount used. Merry Christmas.

Central Middle School Raises Money For Less Fortunate

Central Middle School Social Studies Teacher Bill Pavao recently led a coordinated effort among staff, students and their parents to raise money to buy food items to re-supply the food pantry at Interfaith Social Services.

The Central students are members of the Youth Council, who are encouraged to be involved in community service projects. This year, the Youth Council also coordinated with the PTO to raise money via a bake sale to support Interfaith Social Services.

Central's PTO President, Joanne Minton, sponsored a pizza sales program, with all proceeds going to the cause.

Another program within the school, "Team Harmony," shopped for the food to be donated and visited the food pantry.

The concerted effort by Central's students gave them a first-hand experience of how they can make a difference for those who are in need.

Thomas Pitts Decorated With Army Commendation Medal

Army Pfc. Thomas J. Pitts Jr. has been decorated with the Army Commendation Medal for supporting the mission of Operation Iraqi Freedom.

Pitts is a combat logistics patrol assistant gunner/wheel vehicle drive. He has two years of military service.

Pitts is the son of Thomas J. Pitts of Endicott St., and Patricia Cavallaro, both of Quincy.

The private is a 2004 graduate of Quincy High School.

The medal is awarded to individuals who, while serving in any capacity with the Army, have distinguished themselves by acts of heroism, meritorious achievement or meritorious service.

In Iraq, the soldier serves as a member of the Fires Brigade, 4th Infantry Division (Mechanized) headquartered at Camp Liberty. Soldiers from Fort Hood's 4th Infantry Division assigned to various special troops battalions, companies and batteries perform duties at several camps and forward operating bases in Iraq. Operation Iraqi Freedom is the official name given to military operations involving members of the U.S. armed forces and coalition forces participating in efforts to free and secure Iraq. Mission objectives focus on force protection, peacekeeping, stabilization, security and counter-insurgency operations as the Iraqi transitional governing bodies assume full sovereign powers to govern the peoples of Iraq.

Tips For A Safe Holiday Season

Safety tips for the holiday season are offered by the Massachusetts Emergency Management Agency.

"As the Holiday Season approaches, it becomes necessary to remind everyone of the importance of taking simple safety precautions around the home and on the road," suggests MEMA Director Cristine McCombs. "Every year, during what should be the most joyous of times, too many families experience preventable tragedies. Please take the time to ensure that this will not happen to you and yours."

The recommendations for a safe holiday:

• Inspect Smoke and CO Detectors- Ensure all smoke detectors and carbon monoxide detectors are in place, have fresh batteries, and are functioning.

• Exercise Caution with Holiday Lighting- Take care when burning candles. Be sure they are kept away from decorations, window curtains or other combustible materials by utilizing a one-foot safety radius. Do not leave children unattended in a room with lit candles. Always keep candles, as well as matches and lighters, out of the reach of children. Never display lighted candles in windows or near exits.

• Test Tree Trimmings- When decorating with lights, be sure to purchase only those labeled by a testing laboratory. Never use candles to decorate Christmas trees. For outside decorations, use only those lights labeled for outdoor use. Do not overload electrical outlets, and always unplug all lights before leaving home or going to bed. Never put electrical lights on a metal Christmas tree.

• Planning Holiday Parties- Decorate only with flame-retardant or noncombustible materials. Avoid using candles during parties. If guests will be smoking, provide them with large, deep ashtrays and check them frequently. After the party, check inside and under upholstery and in trashcans for smoking materials that may be smoldering.

• Keep Christmas Trees Fresh- Choose a fresh Christmas tree and secure it in a sturdy stand. Place the tree away from heat sources and exits, watering it daily. For artificial trees, be sure it is labeled as fire-retardant. If there are stockings hung on the mantel, do not use the fireplace for fires.

• Inspect Fireplaces- Have the chimney inspected by a professional prior to the start of every heating season and cleaned if necessary. Creosote, a chemical substance that forms when wood burns, builds up in chimneys and can cause a chimney fire if not properly cleaned. Always protect family and home by using a sturdy screen when burning fires. Remember to burn only wood - never burn paper or pine boughs, which can float out the chimney and ignite a neighboring home. Never use flammable liquids in a fireplace. When purchasing a factory-built fireplace, select one listed by a testing laboratory and have it installed according to local codes.

• Be Cautious With Portable and Space Heaters- Place space heaters at least three feet away from anything combustible, including wallpaper, bedding, clothing, pets and people. Never leave space heaters operating when not in the room or when going to bed. Do not leave children or pets unattended with space heaters and be sure everyone knows that drying wet mittens or other clothing over space heaters is a fire danger.

• Cook with Care- When cooking, do not wear loose fitting clothing. Open flames or hot burners can ignite it. Always turn pot handles in. Do not store items on the stovetop, they could catch fire. Keep kitchen appliances clean and in good condition, and turn them off after use. Do not overload electrical outlets, and do not use appliances with frayed or cracked wires.

• Designate a Driver- When attending a party, always designate a non-drinking driver. When hosting a party, make sure there are non-alcoholic beverages available for guests who are driving.

• Buckle Up- During the holiday months, people travel more than ever. Wearing a seat belt is the easiest and best way to prevent injury in a motor vehicle collision. Ensure that all passengers are also wearing safety belts. Also be sure to have an automobile safety kit in case the car breaks down.

• Purchase a Weather Radio/Monitor Local Weather Reports- Stay informed about possible storm warnings by purchasing and listening to a NOAA Weather Radio station. Remember that New England weather can be very unpredictable.

George Burke Donating $100,000 To Charities

By MIKAELA SLANEY

Notable political figure and lawyer of 47 years, George Burke designated $100,000 to be transferred from his retirement account to various charities that serve the people of Quincy.

Burke is the former City Council President, former District Attorney and State Representative.

"I think we all have a duty to share what we have and make this world a better place to live in," he said.

The Internal Revenue Code of 1986 was amended allowing donor a maximum transfer of $100,000 from their retirement account in either 2007 or 2008. The donation will be transferred tax free.

The scholarships are to be redistributed as follows:

• $35,000 to the Newman Catholic Center at UMass Amherst.

• $10,000 to the George Burke Fitness Center at QHS which is to be refurbished, with gym equipment transferred to the new QHS after construction is complete. Burke was the captain of the QHS basketball team in 1950.

GEORGE BURKE

• $10,000 to Father Bill's Place, in honor of Rev. William McCarthy, for whom the place is named, for his 80th birthday.

• $10,000 to St. Ann's Church, of which Burke is a member.

• $6,000 will be added to $85,000 of Burke's scholarship funding for $1,000 Quincy and North Quincy High School scholarships, donated over the past 15 years. • $6,000 to the UMass Amherst Department of Athletics, basketball program.

• $5,000 to Boston College Law School, where he served as class president, and graduated in 1959.

• $1,500 to the UMass Amherst library.

• $1,500 to the UMass Amherst theater group. • $1,000 to Thayer Academy, where Burke completed a post graduate year, after graduating QHS. While at Thayer Academy, Burke broke two basketball records, the first for the most points in a single game, and the second for the highest average per game, he said.

• $1,000 to the Maria Droste Foundation, which provides counseling for the poor.

• $1,000 to the Boy Scouts of America foundation, in honor of Archie Briggs, Burke's scoutmaster while in his teens.

• $1,000 to the Community Action Program for the poor.

• $1,000 to the Salvation Army.

Board Revokes Downtown Beer, Wine License

The License Board at Tuesday's meeting voted to revoke the beer and wine license of Classic India, 1591 Hancock St. for failure to renew its state license.

Chairman Joseph Shea said notices were sent to the restaurant at Quincy Fair Mall with no replies. Also telephone calls were not returned. Shea said all licenses must be renewed by Dec. 31. after inspections are complete and payments are made for the licenses.

Shea said Classic India has been closed since Nov. 1 and that the board will now send a letter to the Alcohol Beverage Control Commission. (ABCC)

Shea said with the cancellation of that beer and wine license means it will be available to someone else.

Shea said he also send letters to D-Dee's on Newport Ave., China Pearl Corp., 237 Quincy Ave. (former International Buffet), Acapulco's, Hancock St.. Alba's Restaurant, 1495 Hancock St. and Alba's Trattoria, 1586 Hancock St.

Atty. Chris Harrington, counsel for D-Dee's told the board that D-Dee's would like to reduce its occupancy from 100 to 98 patrons.

At 100 patrons, restaurants are required by law to have a sprinkler system. Under 100 patrons, it is not needed.

Fire Chief Robert Pettinelli told Harrington that a physical change to the building has to be done before the board can reduce the amount.

Jay Duca, director of inspectional services said D-Dee's has to apply for a building permit with a scaled plan.

Leo Keka, owner of Alba's promised all inspections would be done by Thursday. (tomorrow)

Acapulco responded to the board's letter and has renewed their license.

Shea said the board is ready to renew all the licenses by Dec. 31. All payments for the licenses musts be made by Dec. 29.

Shea said licensees must have proof of payment of their real estate tax, parking tickets, worker's compensation laws and abide by the sprinkler law.

• Continued until Jan. 9 a request of Michael Neal, doing business as Cateringsmith Cafe, 500 Victory Rd. for a common victualer license.

• Granted a garage repair license to Khen Phung, doing business as South Century Auto Collision & Service Center, Inc., 33 Newport Ave. Also a permit to have no more than 16 vehicles on the premises. Tax Tips From the Experts By Tom Hurley

Preparation is key

There is still time to plan for 2006 tax filing. Here are some last minute suggestions that can help save you money. (But remember, you must take action before December 31, 2006.)

Charitable contributions, either cash or in many cases the fair market value of property, can be used to reduce your income taxes when itemizing deductions. There are special rules limiting donations of motor vehicles; ask your tax preparer for details.

Do you own stock or mutual funds? Capital gains or losses this year will affect your tax liability. Losses in a security can be taken as a deduction up to $3,000 against ordinary income or used to offset capital gains in others if sold by Dec. 31. If it's a security you want to keep you can buy it back in 31 days.

If you owe a significant amount of state income taxes for 2006, consider prepaying the amount owed by December 31. You will receive a federal income tax deduction in 2006 for the amount. Make sure you are not subject to alternative minimum tax.

Interest on home mortgages is deductible, including the interest on a January 2007 payment if prepaid by December 31, 2006. Homeowners may also be eligible for tax credits on energy - efficient upgrades.

Each week I'll publish articles dealing with tax issues, including tips and traps, to help determine the best tax strategy for you.

Tom Hurley, CPA, is president of South Shore Tax Services, a local, independent tax preparation service. They're located at 716 Hancock St., in Quincy; he can be reached at (617) 376-6226

Impact Quincy Honors Six As Community Heroes

Impact Quincy honored six recipients with its annual Community Heroes Award last week at a ceremony in the second floor conference room at City Hall.

The recipients:

Andrew Scheele, Commissioner of Public Health, city of Quincy Health Department; Patricia Henley, Director, Coordinated School Health Program for D.P.H.; Dianne Moriarty, residing Judge of Drug Court, Quincy District Court; Robert F. Crowley, Chief of Police, Quincy Police Department; Peter Turowski, Liquor Inspector, Quincy Police Department; and Paul F. McDevitt, President and Founder of Modern Assistance Programs, Inc.

For the past few years, Impact Quincy has sponsored the Community Heroes Award event to recognize individuals who have been strong advocates for the prevention of substance abuse, and for their contribution to making the city of Quincy a healthier community.

Impact Quincy is a community-based coalition that is currently working on an underage drinking campaign in collaboration with key members of the Quincy community. It is a program of bay State Community Services (BSCS), and is funded by the Massachusetts Department of Public Health and the Substance Abuse and Mental Health Service Administration.

Mixed Feelings On Building Moratorium

By MIKAELA SLANEY

The possibility of imposing a building moratorium mounts as the City Council continued debate Monday night as to whether it will curb unwanted development in neighborhoods.

The moratorium is designed to block commercial growth on a temporary basis, but the City Council is split as to whether it will prove affective, and whether the wording of the order is suitable.

Ward 6 Councillor Brian McNamee spoke out against the order, finding fault with the fact that some businesses may be classified as exceptions to, when the majority of surrounding neighbors give the business approval. McNamee asked how it could be an affective moratorium if it only pertained to some projects and not others.

"It's in good taste, but it doesn't taste good," he said.

Councillor John Keenan fought for a quick vote on the order, saying that procrastination may kill it for several years. Keenan did not get his wish, and the debate continues.

Helping Hands Brighten Holiday For Needy Families

www.fatherbillsplace.org.

The Lodge of Elks also did their part, recently delivering 200 baskets of holiday turkeys and trimmings to Quincy families in need, according to Joseph Hardcastle, secretary of the Elks.

The baskets were funded by Elk member contributions, and between 30 and 35 members distributed baskets throughout the city, he said.

"I want to thank the membership, those who contributed. It was very successful. It's a worthwhile cause, and that's what we're here for, to help our neighbors," Hardcastle said.

He repeated the Elks' motto: "Elks care. Elks share."

He also said he wanted to thank John M. McHugh, past exhalted ruler, and chairman of the Christmas Basket Committee.

"He's the one that made it all happen. It was his efforts that made it a huge success," said Hardcastle.

The Saint Vincent DePaul Society of St. John's Church added another year to their 26 years of service fulfilling gift requests of over 103 families in need from within the parish, according to Bill Lawless, president.

"We might have put out around 1,500 (gift request) cards this year," he said.

Each adult gets two requests and children get from four to six requests in envelopes, mounted on their Giving Tree. There are several envelopes per family, he said.

"The numbers keep going up from when we started this 26 years ago, when it was maybe 15 families," said Lawless. "We have great support from the people of St. John's.

"People give what they can. We get some envelopes that have four quarters in them, and some that have two $100 bills. The people who gave the four quarters gave what they could, and that's just as important."

Lawless said that the Saint Vincent DePaul Society works with other agencies throughout the city to ensure that all people in-need receive some holiday joy.

Lawless said that he wanted to thank Rev. McCarthy who originally established the Giving Tree program, and Father Richard Cannon, current Pastor of St. John's.

Toys for Tots collected over 30 boxes of toys for children prior to the Christmas cut-off date, to help between 75 and 100 local children this year, according to Mary Crowley, commandant of the Post Caddy Detachment. They distribute collection boxes for toys at local businesses throughout Quincy.

"It's really been overwhelming and people have been very generous," she said. "The families are very grateful. They come down here and just can't thank us enough."

Crowley said that she understands the need for her program and that there is no reason for families not to seek assistance.

"Just running a household today, it's very expensive to heat it and pay the bills," she said. "There just isn't a lot of money left over for Christmas. I just want people to know that they can come on down."

Crowley said toys for the 11 through 13 age group were slightly depleted this year, and said she hopes that donors will keep older children in mind next year.

John Twomey, a Caddy Detachment member who volunteered with Toys for Tots for the past few years, delivers collection boxes throughout the city. He said that the experience is rewarding "just knowing that the kids will have something under their tree... If they have a tree, and knowing that they won't go without on Christmas Day."

Steven Mullen, a Postal service member formerly with the navy, said that he had been there since the Toys for Tots program was brought to Quincy, 15 years ago.

"It's really grown," said Mullen. "It's certainly up from where it started, a grass roots campaign."

Mullen said that one donor in particular, Tom "Dash" Riprock, has donated 25 brand new bicycles to donate to children each year, each purchased from his own pocket.

"He's really quite a guy," said Mullen.

The Salt Box also recently held a fundraiser to benefit the Toys for Tots program, and contributed $2,000 in proceeds, said Mullen.

Fire, Police Departments Update Council On Conditions

By MIKAELA SLANEY

Fire Chief Tim Pettinelli and Police Chief Robert Crowley met before the City Council Monday night to update the council on service quality throughout the city.

Pettinelli expressed concerns over the heightened fire safety risks during the holiday season, especially during evening hours when people are likely to light holiday lights, or use space heaters to compensate for increased heating bills.

Pettinelli proposed a Rescue 1 truck to be installed for the evening hours during the holiday season. Under Pettinelli's advice, the truck will be in service between the peak danger hours of 6 p.m. to 8 a.m. during December, January and February. The Rescue 1 truck is to carry specialized fire-fighting equipment that would prove useful in the event that a fire truck is in use when another fire breaks out.

Pettinelli visably stirred the Council when he gave a statistic claiming that the Rescue 1 truck had been out of service for 75 percent of Fiscal Year '06.

Crowley answered concerns whether police coverage was adequate for the city, especially in targeted crime spots. He named Fenno Street as a popular hang-out area for youths, which often results in minor crime.

Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymondi specified IHop breakfast restaurant and the surrounding area as a previous problem area. He citing problems that occured during the early hours in the morning when IHop was a 24-hour restaurant. He said that they were forced to change their hours of operation to counter the mounting problems.

Crowley assured the Council that additional police officers would not be necessary for problem areas.

"Research tells us that it's not the number of officers, but what those officers do once they are there," he said.

In all, the Council praised the Fire and Police Departments for their consistant good work, and said that they were above average, statistically, with cities of equally dense population.

Milton Hospital Recognized For Outstanding Stroke Care

Milton Hospital has been recognized for the efficiency of its stroke response procedures.

The hospital gained Level 1 Recognition Achievement for meeting stroke treatment criteria defined by the American Stroke Association (ASA), in keeping with the ASA's "Get With The Guidelines (GWTG) - Stroke" program. The ASA is a division of the American Heart Association.

"GWTG-Stroke" helps ensure continuous quality improvement of acute stroke treatment and ischemic stroke prevention. It emphasizes the importance of establishing team-oriented procedures to treat and discharge stroke patients appropriately. Milton Hospital's stroke response averages 15 minutes "from door to CT scan", 30 minutes quicker than benchmark requirements.

Stroke team leader Debra Sullo, RN, BSN, CCRN, director of the intensive care unit, critical care unit and cardiac rehabilitation program, was invited by the ASA to speak at an October conference of hospital clinicians to outline the keys to Milton Hospital's success.

Ellen Lanza, RN, CCRN, ICU Clinical Manager and Stroke Team Data Collector and Mary Keady, RN, BSN, ED Clinical Manager presented Milton Hospital's "door to CT scan" process and how it has evolved to quicker response times.

"Our success can be attributed to our strong stroke team, who is very committed to the stroke response program," Sullo said. "As a result of our efforts, we are able to quickly identify potential stroke patients in cooperation with ambulance services, and have developed a system that helps quickly mobilize our stroke team."

"Patients also benefit from our physical layout and available resources; when seconds count, a shorter trip from the emergency room to a CT scanner to a treatment room can literally save a life," Sullo said. "Finally, without the timely communication between the ED and Radiology staff, achieving these great results would not have been possible."

The hospital's stroke team is now working on the next level of recognition, which requires more stringent compliance with "GWTG-Stroke" guidelines.

FOOT NOTES

by Joel Chariton, D.P.M.
Diplomate, American Board of Podiatric Surgery
Diplomate, American Board of Podiatric Orthopedics

FLAT FEET

Many people have what are called flat feet while others have the opposite issue – high arches. Neither foot shape will necessarily give you problems, but they can. As people age, lack of exercise and weight gain can contribute to the cause of flat feet. It your flat feet are causing you pain, get some good, supportive shoes such as a well-made sneaker. You can always add an arch support to your insole if the shoe doesn't have a good one. If good shoes and an arch support don't work, talk to your podiatrist about the possibility of wearing an orthotic in your shoe. The doctor can determine which one is right for you.

To determine the best treatment for flat feet and other foot conditions, a podiatrist will examine the foot, perform a gait analysis, and look at the patient's medical history, past medical problems, length and frequency of symptoms, types of current activity, and pain and problems in other parts of the body. We offer comprehensive care for flat feet and all podiatric concerns for feet of all shapes, sizes, and ages. Call us at 781-986-3668 for an appointment at 999 North Main Street, Randolph, in the MEDICAL OFFICE BUILDING. Office hours also available at the Quincy Medical Center and Milton Medical Building. I am affiliated with the Brockton and Good Samaritan Hospitals.

HINT: Flat feet can cause heel spurs or plantar fascitis.

A Job Well Done

"Don't talk to strangers" and "Don't take rides from strangers."

On Thursday, Nov. 30, at approximately 10:20 p.m., Officer Dan Parisi was on patrol traveling southbound on Billings Road, approaching West Elm Avenue, when he observed a Jeep ahead of him fail to obey a stop sign. Officer Parisi followed the Jeep westbound on West Elm Avenue and observed the driver fail to obey another stop sign at Muirhead Street.

LT. DAN MINTON

As the Jeep traveled westbound on Elm Avenue, Officer Parisi put his blue lights on and the Jeep began to pull over by Marlboro Street, then turned right onto Marlboro Street and abruptly picked up speed. The Jeep then stopped a block away and Officer Parisi approached the male driver and female occupant, asking for his driver's license and registration. The driver said that he did not have his license with him, so Officer Parisi requested Communications check his license status.

As Officer Parisi waited in his cruiser for the information, the driver opened his door and began walking towards the cruiser. The driver said, "I would like to talk to you about this situation." The officer scrutinized the driver's behavior and believed that the driver was about to flee, so he ordered the driver to put his hands on the cruiser.

Officers Lane Watkins and Terry Downing arrived. Communications informed the officers that the driver's (suspect) license was suspended. The suspect was placed under arrest and transported to the station.

Officer Parisi then spoke with the female passenger, a 44-year-old Norwood resident. She stated that earlier in the evening she had an argument with her mother in Norwood, then left the house to go for a walk. She said the suspect pulled up to her in Norwood Centre and after a brief conversation, asked her if she wanted a ride home. She said that she did not know the suspect but got into the Jeep.

As the rode together on Route 128, the passenger realized that he was not taking her home. She stated she asked the suspect to stop and let her out but he refused, then drove fast and recklessly. The victim said she asked him if she could use his cell phone. He responded that it didn't work, even though she could hear it ringing. The suspect told her that his cell phone could not make outgoing calls.

The victim said she was scared when the police stopped the car because the suspect said, "I think I'll run but I don't know if I'll make it." He also told her to tell the police that she is his girlfriend and to ask if she can drive the Jeep home. The suspect, a 24-year-old Boston resident, has been charged with kidnapping, operating to endanger, and operating after a license suspension. A further check showed that the suspect is on parole and has an extensive criminal record that includes assault.

In this case, the victim was very fortunate that Officer Parisi initiated the stop of the suspect. The situation was quickly turning bad for the victim and it was the officers' actions that prevented her from a perilous situation.

The message of avoiding strangers and their cars has been drilled into our children from an abundance of sources, whether it be the family, the schools or the police. Yet, here is an adult violating two of the most crucial safety rules!

After reading this story, whether you are a parent, a family member, a teacher, etc., take a moment to remind those important to you about the "dangers of strangers."

For the officers involved in this case, "Nice Work!"

Each week in The Quincy Sun, the "Quincy Police Hot Spots" page provides readers with numbers to call to report crimes. The telephone number for the "Drug Hot-Line" is 617-328-4527. You will not be required to provide identification or address, although it would be helpful.

Anonymous information via a letter or by leaving a message doe not provide an opportunity for the detectives to ask questions to gain further knowledge. Even without identifying yourself, your information can be corroborated (validated) in many ways, such as surveillance, which was used in this particular case.

Some people are reluctant to report suspicious activity for fear of having to testify or of retaliation, but by calling the hot-line with detailed information, the Drug Unit will be working with you to eradicate drug users in your community.

Last-Minute Gifts

OK, here it is — the week before Christmas and you still have no idea what to give the do-it-yourselfer in the house. Or, the kids want to give something useful, but that $1,200 custom tool station is a little outside their budget. Never fear — even in the last-minute holiday rush, a few useful little items are available that a DIY-er will love.

• Make it portable. A tool belt or bag will stop those repeat trips to the garage for little items. Many are available for as little as $25 and are fairly lightweight but durable.

• Quick rethreads. A tapping tool is a handheld item with a screwdriver grip that quickly forms new threads in stripped screw holes. Instead of rigging up the power drill, just grab the tapping tool, place the right-sized bit on, and repair the hole with a few short twists.

• Easy picture hanging. An electronic stud sensor and a laser leveler make hanging pictures, shelves and other walls items fast and easy. If your DIY'er doesn't have these, get them. The sensor and leveler can be bought separately for less than $20 apiece, and combination units are also available for $40 and up.

• Focus on safety. Put together a gift basket, or have the kids create a group of gifts, that protect the DIY'er while working. A set of dust masks, safety goggles, a full filter mask, heavy-duty work gloves, a first-aid kit and a fire extinguisher are all important items to have nearby when doing any home-improvement work.

• Let the DIY'er decide. Not sure what they need? Purchase a gift certificate, take him or her on a shopping trip (especially during the after-Christmas sales), or just ask.

No matter what you decide upon, your DIY'er will appreciate the thoughtfulness of any gift, no matter how small or how many he already has. After all, keeping two of everything on hand is just good sense!

Reduce Home Heating Costs, And Protect Your Budget

TIPS FOR HOMEOWNERS

(NAPS)- Don't let cold weather and higher energy bills get you hot under the collar. Energy experts offer these steps to help control your heating costs and protect your budget from unexpected increases in natural gas and electricity rates:

Shop around for your energy provider.

Many states allow you to buy natural gas and electricity from and independent marketer. Check and see which companies offer the most desirable plans.

Consult and expert.

Seek out an energy marketer. These professionals work with consumers to determine their best energy choices based on usage, climate, home size and other factors.

Check to see if you can lock in your energy rates.

Enrolling in this type of plan will help protect you from spikes in energy rates. Much like a fixed-rate mortgage, a fixed-rate energy plan helps you stabilize your budget and prepare for the heating season.

Conserve energy by managing your thermostat.

Setting the thermostat to 55 degrees, or lower, at night or when leaving home can lead to savings of as much as 20 percent on your heating costs. You should also wear warm clothing inside and set your thermostat to 68 degrees or lower during the day. You can save up to 5 percent on heating costs for every degree you lower your heat during the winter.

Don't cook your clothes.

Use cold or warm water when washing clothes-it's the detergent, not water temperature, which determines how clean your clothes are going to be. Avoid overdrying clothes when using the dryer.

Use energy efficient appliances.

When installing a new water heater or furance, research which options are the most energy efficient. You'll save on energy costs ad you might be pleasantly surprised to learn that you quailify for a rebate from your energy provider if you choose energy efficient models.

Inspect and maintain your furance.

Ensure your furance is operating at peak performance by having an annual inspection and routine system maintenance performed.

Clean filters and vents.

Dirty or clogged furnace and air filters can demand more energy and slow the heating of your home.

Make sure your house is properly insulated.

Poorly insulated doors, windows and vents cost you money. You can reduce the amount of energy needed to heat and cool your home by having a professional check that your home has the proper insulation.

For more information on how to control energy costs, visit www.mxenergy.com.

Buying First Home Need Not Be Overwhelming

(NAPS)- Are you one of those people who considers life pretty good? You're thinking about getting married and you have a good job, a nice car and money to pay off the student loans. You have spare time to spend hangin' out with your friends.

The only negative in your life right now is having to pay rent and dealing with roommates. For many Americans in their late 20s and early 30s, the "whoosh" sound of paying rent each month eventually turns thoughts of owning their own piece of the American dream. However, the process of actually buying a home can seem overwhelming-even daunting-to some.

"First-time homebuyers can feel intimidated by or even 'out of control' during the whole home-buying process," says Jin Ferriter, executive vice president for GMAC Mortgage. "But there's hope. An experienced loan officer, combined with innovative products and services, can help first-time homebuyers better understand their financing options and boost their confidence in purchasing their first home."

Ferriter, who has more than 25 years' experience in mortgage lending, offers the following tips for first-time homebuyers:

1. Save, Just A Little Bit More

Of course, it's important to save money for the down payment and closing costs. But there's more to buying a home than figuring out if you can pay a monthly mortgage payment. There are costs similar to renting, but now you must be prepared to maintain a home, too. Weekly shopping trips to your local big-box home store to purchase everything from decorating items to a lawn mower can add up quickly. That's why many mortgage lenders recommend that first-time homebuyers have a least three to six months in additional savings. An excellent way to save cash is with a money market account from GMAC Bank (www.gmacbank.com), which can be opened with as little as $50.

2. Check Your Credit

An individual's credit score will have a significant impact on his or her mortgage loan approval and interest rate. A good first step in the home-financing process is to check your credit history. You can request a free credit report from any of the three credit-reporting bureaus: Equifax, TransUnion or Experian. Carefully review your report and contact the credit-reporting bureaus to correct any misinformation.

3. Get Preapproved

Before you start working with a real estate agent, consider contacting a mortgage lender to obtain a preapproval credit decision. A loan officer will review your financial status, including your income, cash flow and credit score, to help you determine the maximum monthly housing payment for which you may be able to quailfy, and, if qualified, "preapprove" your mortgage before you've found a home. Armed with a credit preapproval, you can start searching with a much better idea of price range you should be looking in, and in turn save time as you'll know the right homes to focus on.

As you start thinking about and preparing for the preapproval process, start shopping for the mortgage lender from which you would like to obtain a mortgage for you new home. Because this process is new, it's easy to go with the first lender or loan officer you meet. Instaed, take your time and shop around. Start by asking friends, co-workers and family members for recommendations. When you've identified two or three loan officers, ask for references. Remember, obtaining a pre-approval may offer more confidence and certainity to home sellers.

In addition to pricing (interest rate and closing costs), focus on customer service as well as other services and tools that a mortgage lender may be able to offer you. For example, in addition to offering the preapproval program, GMAC Mortgage offers a feature called "HomeCommand," which allows you to cap a mortgage rate for up to 126 days while you shop for your dream home, as well as a free hime-finder service that can give you a jump on other house hunters, alerting you to homes that hit the market that match your search criteria.

4. Don't Be Afraid To Ask Questions

Once you've found your new home, the mortgage lender will help you through the details of the loan process. From application to closing, your loan officer will work through the financing process with you, just as your real estate professional will in the home-buying process. Your mortgage loan officer can also be a valuable source of information, so be sure to take advantage of his or her expertise. Throughout the process, read all loan documents carefully and involve an attorney, if necessary.

5. Inspect It

Before you commit to purchasing a home, don't forget to hire a licensed home inspector to conduct a thorough assessment of the property. An inspector can alert you to any major problems with the home, and/or help you understand potential short-term and lon-term home maintenance issues.

Buying a home for the first time can seem like you're riding on a roller coaster. But by doing your homework, asking lots of questions and taking your time, you can stay in control and discover an overwhelming sense of accomplishment in buying your first home.

Updating Homes Can Be Easy, Inexpensive

Keeping A Home Safe For Years To Come

(NAPS) - Apparently, there really is no place like home. According to a recent AARP study, roughly 90 percent of Americans age 50 and older wish to stay in their current home and community as they age.

However, staying in your home may require updates or changes to ensure that it remains a safe and comfortable environment for years to come. Low lighting, stairs with no handrails, loose area rugs, entrances with many steps, and hard-to-grasp faucet handles and doorknobs are just a few features that make staying in your home more difficult as you grow old. Fortunately, homes can be updated, often in easy and inexpensive ways.

"We know people love their homes, and want to stay in their homes for as log as possible, which is why it's important to make simple changes to your home," says Elinor Ginzler, Director of Livable Communities at AARP. "There are easy and inexpensive ways to update your home to accommodate everyone and you don't have to be an expert. The earlier you start identifying and planning for improvements, the better your chance of enjoying your home for years to come."

The following tips can make your home safer and more comfortable:

• Install handrails on both sides of all steps (inside and out) and secure all carpets and area rugs with double-sided tape.

• Install easy-to-grasp shaped handles for all drawers and cabinet doors.

• Use brighter bulbs in all settings and install nightlights in all areas of night activity.

• Add reflective, noslip tape on all noncarpeted stairs.

• Install lever handles for all doors.

• Place a bench near entrances for setting down purchases and resting

• Install closet lights, as well as adjustable rods and shelves.

• Install rocker light switches; consider illuminated ones in select areas.

Local hardware stores carry many of the products to make these simple updates. For more extensive renovations, homeowners should consider hiring a contractor who is licensed, certified and bonded to do work in the particular location.

A Certified Aging in Place Specialist (CAPS) is a professional designation signaling that contractors have had specified additional training, but homeowners should ask for documentation that the contractor is licensed or certified and bonded.

To learn more or to get a copy of AARP's new publication, "Home Modification: Your Key To Comfort, Safety, and Independent Living" (also available in Spanish) visit www.aarp.org/home design or call (888) OUR-AARP and mention the publication number, D18524.

Targeting A Home's Hidden Allergens

(NAPS) Invisible objects can be hurtful, especially when it comes to the pollen, pet dander, ragweed and dust mites found in many homes.

Increasingly, health-minded homeowners are looking for vacuum cleaners that offer the healthier advantage of targeting hidden allergens. Here are some hints on what to look for.

• Superior cleaning. A vacuum should have superior cleaning power on all surfaces.

• HEPA filtration. In addition to superior suction power, the vacuum's HEPA filter should trap and seal in 100 percent of pollen, mold spores, ragweed and dust mites.

• Everyday convenience. Look for features that make it convenient. A fingertip power control means not continually reaching down to turn the vacuum on and off. A brush on/off switch offers greater flexibility to clean carpets as well as bare floors. A 35-foot power cord gives greater reach to clean larger areas more easily. Additionally, an extra-wide cleaning path and anti-clog hose can make cleaning faster.

Some vacuums include advanced features to give them an even healthier advantage. The BISSELL Healthy Home Vacuum is one vacuum that includes two proprietary technologies that help families create a healthier home.

To keep the vacuum cleaner and fresher, Microban anti-microbial product protection is built into key components of the Healthy Home Vacuum and fights the growth of odor-causing microbes such as bacteria, mold and mildew within the vacuum.

To help the 38 million Americans who are allergic to dust mite allergens, full-size samples of Acarosan dustmite powder and Acaarosan dust mite control spray come packed in with the vacuum.

Presidents Seek Continued Success

BOYS' BASKETBALL

By SEAN BRENNAN

The Quincy Presidents are a South Shore basketball powerhouse. Under the direction of head coach Bob Fisher, the Presidents have laid claim to two straight Atlantic Coast League championships, while going a remarkable 34-8 over the last two years. Last year's team finished the regular season at 17-3, before losing in the first round of the Division 2 South Sectionals to Bishop Feehan, 71-66 in overtime.

The 2006-2007 team will have to deal with the loss of a handful of players to graduation, including Lovell Johnson, John Orlando and Joe Griffin, but this year's team does return two league all-stars from last year's team. Senior captain Steve Connolly, a two-year starter at forward, and sophomore sensation Doug Scott (point guard) return to the starting five this winter.

"We lost a few players from last year's team that were major contributors on both offense and defense," head coach Bob Fisher said. "But we do return two real good players in Connolly and Scott. These two were league all-stars last year, and both should be able to use their experience on the court this season."

The Presidents, who were co-champions of the ACL last year with North Quincy, may need the first few weeks of the season to jell as a team, but Fisher believes that once the season gets rolling his team should be able to build on the success the team has had the last two seasons.

"It will take us awhile (to get where we need to be)," Fisher said. "So far in preseason, we are not executing the way I would like defensively, and there are some concerns about our offensive shooting and scoring. But we do have strong ball-handling skills, a solid ability with our guards to get penetration into the paint, and a real good inside presence. It has been helpful that our season begins later than some teams because it has given us the time to work on the things that need working on"

The Presidents, under Fisher, like to run and apply pressure on offense and defense, and so it comes as no surprise that this year's rotation should be eight to nine players deep.

"We like to use pressure, we like to press and we like to run," Fisher said. "We plan on using a number of players."

Besides Connolly and Scott, players who will see time on the court include senior forwards Matt Boyle, Jared Tucker and Kinsin Theorodis. Juniors Paris Amado (guard), DeShawn Matthews (forward), Martin Bowes and Sean Boyd (guard) will also play roles for this year's team.

"Tucker and Boyle should help us up front this year, and Matthews is a good post player who will see more varsity time this year," Fisher said. "Sean Boyd will probably be our first guard of the bench, and he could see some time in the starting lineup."

The Presidents maybe less talented than the two previous teams Fisher has had, but Quincy is still the two-time defending ACL champion, and other teams in the league will be gunning for them again this season. Fisher understands this, but his main concern is getting his team ready for the long haul.

"I'm not worried about the ACL right now," he said. "It is not a major concern. Before we can worry about other teams, we need to worry about ourselves. It (the ACL) is a very competitive league and every team presents a challenge and problems, but if we play like I know we are capable, we should be fine. In this league, you need to play well every night to compete. We may have a bullseye on our backs (from being league champs), and we need to rise to the challenge. We're not as talented now as we will be in the middle of January."

The Presidents opened their season against Silver Lake Regional High School on 12/19, and play on the road this Friday against Nauset High School, before returning after Christmas to host Silver Lake on 12/27.

KIERSTEN SULLIVAN, age 27, daughter of John and Pattie Sullivan of Dale Ave., Quincy, recently completed her first marathon at the Breakers Marathon in Middletown, RI. Sullivan began training for the race this past summer, and has set her sights on the 2007 Boston Marathon.

Quincy Moving On With New Talent

BOYS' ICE HOCKEY

The thing with high school sports is that every four years great players leave, and new players need to step up. The 2006-2007 Quincy hockey team is going to have to make that transition this season, but luckily for fans of the program, the Presidents are once again loading up with talent.

Last year's team finished the regular season at 13-6-1, before falling in the first round of the Division 2 South Sectionals to Boston Latin, 4-2. The Presidents graduated senior league all-stars, Matt Giordani and Mike McKeon, who combined, accounted for 40-45 goals while playing on the team's first line, senior defensemen Mike McPherson and Steve Graham and starting goalie Alex Smith.

"We will be looking to replace 45 to 50 or so goals from last year's team," head coach Bob Sylvia said recently. "Giordani and McKeon were great players for us, but they have moved on, and we need to do the same."

This year's team will be led by captains Mike Leone (Sr./Defense), Jonathan Conso (Sr./Forward), Casey Conley (Jr./Forward) and Ted Walsh (Jr./Forward).

"Our captains are our mainstays this season," Sylvia said. "The team will be leaning on them and will be counting heavily on their leadership as the season progresses."

The Presidents will have three freshmen playing big minutes this season, and that is something that previous Quincy teams have not had. Freshmen Jim Finn (defense), Kevin Keith (forward) and Matt Troy (forward) should all play a role in the success of the program this winter.

"We have three freshmen who will contribute to the team this year," Sylvia said. "That doesn't happen all the time, and we are excited about the possibilities. We are going to be young and raw, but many of the younger players experienced playing at the varsity level last year. And with our four captains leading the way, we should only get better as the year moves on."

Quincy's other goal came from junior Mike Lebel. Sophomore Jeff Giordani stopped 24 shots in net.

"The game was like two teams looking in the mirror at themselves," Sylvia said. "Neither team deserved to lose, and the final result is proof of that."

The Presidents, who will have played on 12/20 versus Rockland, next travel down to Nauset High School on 12/23 for another ACL matchup.

North Quincy Boys Defeat Barnstable In Opener, 82-77

The North Quincy Red Raiders and new head coach Kevin Barrett opened the 2006-2007 basketball season with a big win over Barnstable High School, 82-77, last Wednesday night.

The Red Raiders (1-0) showed some of the grit and determination that made them co-champions of the Atlantic Coast League last season by overcoming an early 18-3 deficit.

"We withstood their knockout punch," Barrett said. "It buckled us a little, but we bounced back."

North Quincy's Marcellus Lee's 26 points helped lead the Raiders back into the game. Junior forward Dennis Martin contributed to the win with 17 points of his own, and senior forward Dennis Ray dropped 15 points on Barnstable in the win.

The Red Raiders took on Whitman-Hanson High School this past Tuesday (12/19) in another Atlantic Coast League contest, and the team hosts Falmouth High School this Friday at 6:30.

Girls, Boys Track Teams Open Winter Season

The varsity boys and girls track teams at Quincy and North Quincy High Schools team up to form one city-wide high school program. The Quincy/NQ boys' team is coached by Peter Chrisom, Jr. and the combined girls' team is coached by Geoff Hennessy.

Both teams got started on the winning track last week with wins over Atlantic Coast League rival Sandwich High School at the Reggie Lewis Center in Boston. The boys defeated Sandwich, 57-39, and the girls won, 47-43.

In the boys' meet, sophomore Jeff Pereira won the 50-yard hurdles (9.1 seconds) and the long jump (19-2 ft.) to lead Quincy/North Quincy (1-0) to victory. Junior Matt Meyers finished first in the 2-mile race with a time of 10:31.2, and Danny Jackson took top honors in the 55-meter race with a winning time of 7.1 seconds.

The Quincy/North Quincy 4 x 200-meter relay team of Jackson, Pereira, sophomore Pat Watkins and junior Greg Ingram were victorious with a time of 1:45.

In the girls' meet, Rachael Casanoff won the one-mile race in a time of 6:22 to help her team start the season at 1-0. Lily Man won the 600-meter with a finishing time of 6:22, and Mary Schwartz took first place in the 100 dash with a time of 3:30.2.

Kelly Pineo took top honors in the shot put and Rebecca Stanton topped the high jump for Quincy/North Quincy.

This past weekend the Quincy/NQ boys track team participated in the Winter Festival Invitational at the Reggie Lewis Center. The festival included 23 high school teams from the state and the Quincy/NQ team had personal best showings from a handful of its team members.

Jeff Pereira finished in the top five in the long jump event, and he qualified for states with a jump of 19-2 feet. In the shot put event, Joe Page finished in the top five and qualified for states with a throw of 44 1/2 feet.

Team members Matt Meyers and Matt McGroarty (2-mile), Rob McGroarty (1-mile) and Dio Coveais (the 1000) all finished their events with personal best times.

Sprinters Danny Jackson (7.13 sec) and Pat Watkins (7.14 sec) each qualified for the states in the 55-yard dash.

The combined boys track team has 53 team members this winter, the highest turnout in years for a varsity track team.

SEEING THE LIGHT

One of the more unsettling experiences drivers have is to see the 'CHECK ENGINE" light suddenly appear on the dashboard. To those unfamiliar with the working of modern cars, this can seem to be a warning that the engine is about to explode. The reality is far less catastrophic. The warning involves the electronic control module (ECM), which is a computer that controls the operation of the engine in an efficient manner that enables it to conform to strict emissions standards. When any of the various sensors that monitor the emission-related systems detect a problem, it trips the 'CHECK ENGINE" light and stores a trouble code. An automobile technician may retrieve this stored cod, then diagnose and fix the problem.

The "CHECK ENGINE" light is not always a horrible and serious problem. However, at LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO, we recommend you bring the car to us, located at 258 Quincy Ave., E. Braintree, as soon as you can following a 'CHECK ENGINE" light's appearance. By addressing the issue quickly, you can prevent possible engine wear, which will save you money in the long run. Questions can be answered by calling 781-843-1550. Please have a safe and happy holiday season!

HINT: While an emission-related problem may not necessarily leave you stranded by the side of the road, it will likely compromise gas mileage.

SPOTLIGHT ON HEALTH & FITNESS

Enjoy a Guilt-Free Holiday Season

It's the holiday season, and not only are the days shorter, but so is the amount of time you have to dedicate to your fitness program.

Keeping a realistic and effective fitness routine during the busy holiday season can be challenging. But there is hope! With planning and some minor changes, you can enjoy a fit and guilt-free holiday season. Here are some suggestions:

• Add yourself to your "to-do" list. Just as you make lists to purchase presents or attend holiday parties, place time for yourself on your important list of things to do. If YOU don't make the time to take care of yourself, it won't find you.

• Set realistic goals. Setting a goal of losing body fat, gaining muscle or training for a marathon during one of the busiest times of the year can be challenging. Switch to a maintenance plan if you know you will experience a change in your schedule and responsibilities during the holiday season. When your schedule returns to normal, your body will be ready to kick back into high gear.

• Plan ahead. Anticipate the change in schedule and priorities you'll face as the holidays approach. Modify or condense your workouts to receive the same amount of cardiovascular and strength-training benefits within the time available. For example, if you are accustomed to exercising five days a week, strengthening a different muscle group each day, an effective modification could be switching to three days a week using full-body exercises with one day of rest in between.

• Keep an exercise journal. Journaling can be a great way to hold yourself accountable and stay committed to your exercise routine during the holidays. Having to write down your activities can encourage you to stay active, even when you feel otherwise.

Enjoy the holidays, and when you don't have time to do anything else, KEEP MOVING!

Always consult a physician before beginning an exercise program. The Problem And Types Of Treatment

Be Aware Of Pulmonary Arterial Hypertension

Imagine not being able to walk to the mailbox, climb the stairs or complete regular, everyday activities due to severe shortness of breath or dizziness.

For people with pulmonary arterial hypertension, or PAH, that's the reality.

While health and wellness should always be top-of-mind, National Pulmonary Hypertension Awareness Month offers an opportunity for us to learn about PAH, a rare but life-threatening condition that is often challenging for doctors to diagnose the right way.

The Problem

"PAH is a condition in which the blood vessels ("blood pipes") in the lungs become thicker, constricted or plugged, making it more difficult for the heart to pump blood through the lungs," said Dr. Francisco J. Soto of the Medical College of Wisconsin in Milwaukee, Wis. "Over time, the heart cannot keep up and less blood is pumped to lungs to pick up oxygen, which leads to the symptoms of PAH. Eventually the heart fails, resulting in death.

For some, the disease has strained their system to such an extent that the need for a heart and/or lung transplant becomes necessary. Without treatment, patients have an average survival time of less than three years from the time of diagnosis.

No one is quite sure what causes PAH. In some cases, it appears to happen for unknown reasons, other times the condition appears to be genetic. PAH can also be causes by medical conditions such as congenital heart disease, liver disease or scleroderma. Although PAH is rare, it can happen to anyone at any age. It is most common in young women between the ages of 20 and 40 years old and there are nearly twice as many females as males with the condition.

The Symptoms

Symptoms of PAH include extreme and progressive shortness of breath, dizziness and fainting spells. Often, active, busy adults suddenly find themselves facing a shocking and grim diagnosis because PAH usually does not become symptomatic until it's in an advanced state.

Elizabeth Bosarge, 43, had been feeling exhausted and dizzy for weeks and soon found that she was unable to climb stairs without assistance. When she went to her doctors, she was stunned to find that she had a very advanced stage of PAH. Like Bosarge, others diagnosed with PAH have difficulty doing simple things such as walking or standing for long periods of time.

For 27-year-old Tammie Sharp, walking from her car to her house without experiencing dizziness or Nassau was nearly impossible.

Types of Treatment

Historically, there have been limited medical options for this rare condition.

Fortunately, medical advancements for PAH have shown promise. Two oral PAH medications have been approved by the FDA and encouraging research is on the horizon.

"The medical breakthroughs are leading to effective and more convenient treatment options that may help those living with those living with this devastating disease better manage their symptoms," said Dr. Soto.

Many patients who receive appropriate treatment experience improvement. Bosarge has lived with PAH for the past five years, despite the fact that doctors originally told her she would only have two months to live. Sharp is no longer in need of a lung transplant.

Easing Test Anxiety: A Parent's Role

(NAPS) Sweaty palms, accelerated heart rate and nausea are all common symptoms among students who suffer from test anxiety.

The anxiety some students experienced before an exam is so strong that it can lead to poor performance and disrupt their ability to learn.

Parents play an important role in helping their child ease test-taking anxiety by providing support, encouragement and a positive learning environment.

Dr. Andrea Pastorak, child psychologist for Kumon Math and Reading Centers, offers the following tips for parents to help children relax and approach exams with confidence:

• Encourage the child to space out studying and homework assignments so they won't e foreed to cram the night before the test. Daily practice is the key to mastering a subject.

• Provide a quiet, well-lit area with little distractions to help the child focus and study efficiently.

• Practice with the child to ensure comprehension and mastery of the concepts being tested. If the child doesn't understand a topic, seeing it on a test will increase anxiety.

• Encourage the child to do well, but don't add pressure or negative consequences tied to test results. It's important that the child knows you'll be proud and offer support regardless of the outcome.

• Keep a positive attitude about tests. Test taking is part of life, and the sooner a child can master the experience of testing the easier the process will become.

• Mark down test days on the calendar together so the child is aware of testing dates and can plan ahead.

• Make sure the child gets enough sleep the night before the test. Feeling alert and rested will help in performance.

• Prepare a healthy breakfast for the child the day of the exam. A heavy or high-sugar breakfast may cause the child to be groggy or hyper. Fuel the child's brain and body with a nutritious meal.

• Make sure the child gets up early enough to arrive on time for school. Rushing creates panic and increases anxiety.

• If the child continues to struggle on tests, talk to him or her about it and meet with the teacher to learn new ways to help.

• Praise and reward the child for hard work preparing for the test. Positive reinforcement encourages a child to keep up the good work.

Remember, easing test anxiety is a process and there is no quick fix. Be patient with the child and help him or her gain the skills needed to overcome this challenge. Doing well on a test is important, but not as important as helping the child gain confidence, life skills and character.

HEALTHY GUMS LINKED TO OVERALL HEALTH

Healthy gums not only contribute to better oral health, they also can improve overall health. According to the latest research, periodontal (gum) disease may lead to the worsening of such health problems as diabetes, respiratory disease, heart disease, and even premature births. For example, preliminary studies have found that diabetics with gum disease can reduce their blood-sugar levels to normal by treating their gum problems. In addition, a large-scale study shows that pregnant women with moderate-to-serious gum disease were twice as likely to give birth to premature babies as women with healthy gums. These findings and others should lead patients with heart disease, diabetes, and respiratory disease, as well as pregnant women, to pay greater attention to the health of their gums.

Whatever your age, it's important to keep your mouth clean, healthy and feeling good. And it's important to know the state of your periodontal health. There's nothing like a bright smile, filled with sparkling teeth and healthy gums. Call us at 617-479-6220 today and discover how a few simple measures can bring quick relief as well as enhance your dental health! We will do everything we can to insure that your visits to us will be as comfortable and pleasant as possible. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street, where our entire staff is very proud to offer many professional services to all our patients. Remember that preventative dentistry is the lowest cost, most convenient way to retain your smile. We offer the services of anesthesiology with a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. The Garden Bug

Mistletoe

Norse mythology tells of the god Baldur dying from mistletoe poison. His mother Frigga, goddess of love, washes away the poison with her tears. When her son revives, she kisses everyone passing underneath the mistletoe out of happiness and gratitude — a custom still popular today during the holidays. In the wild, this parasitic plant stays evergreen, providing food for herbivores and nesting sites for birds during the winter.

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

Christmas is one of the busiest and happiest times of the year for millions of Christians throughout the world. Gifts are exchanged and Christmas cars exchanged, expressing sentiments of joy, goodwill, health and happiness. . . A typical card may carry this message: "Love was born at Christmas. . . We wish you love and joy at this beautiful season." . . . The custom of exchanging Christmas cards began, we are told, in memory of the gifts the Wise Men brought the Christ child when He was born in Bethlehem.

Christians feel reverence for that momentous event that took place in Bethlehem nearly 2,000 years ago. People enjoy singing the joyous and holy carols that have expressed that reverence in song down through the ages. . . There is a warmth of giving and the thrill of receiving. The spirit of the season surrounds us and reaches into our innermost self, brings out hidden feelings of joy and happiness that causes us to think: "Peace on earth, goodwill toward everyone."

Yes, another year has come and gone. . . almost!

And so, we at the Deware Funeral Home, wish you the best. We wish you a Merry Christmas and a New Year filled with happiness, health and prosperity. . .

"In addition to our Sunday School students, everyone at worship – if they want to participate – will be part of the pageant," said the Rev. Dr. Susan F. Jarek-Glidden, church pastor. "Without giving away too much, just let me say this: in this pageant, everybody – and I mean that literally – gets a starring role."

In addition to the pageant, there will be traditional lighting of the fourth Advent candle, as well as some Advent songs and Christmas carols.

The service will conclude with the lighting of Jesus' birthday cake, which will be shared at the coffee hour that follows the service.

For more information about the Christmas pageant, call the church office at 617-773-3319.

Bell-ringers were: Barbara Culkin, Glenn Alinson, Arthur and Audrey Sullivan, Carol Swanson, Rob Levancy, Norm Daniel, Marjorie Ciavardone, Stephanie Swanson, Martha Swanson, Don Young, Mark Goodwin and the Rev. John Swanson, church pastor.

"It never ceases to amaze me, we are a small church and each year I am convinced that we won't be able to cover a whole day, yet it is never a problem. People just love to do this," Swanson said, noting the church manned the kettle from 9 a.m. to 8 p.m.

'Heart To Heart' Tree At United Methodist

Quincy United Methodist Church, 40 Beale St., Wollaston, is hosting a "Heart to Heart" tree on the second floor of the church outside the sanctuary now through Dec. 24.

A donation of $2 per heart ornament is requested.

A spun glass heart ornament was initially meant to be given to people who are experiencing a difficult holiday season. "Although most of the hearts are still given to people who are hurting," said the Rev. Dr. Susan F. Jarek-Glidden, "some individuals have given them to people who have made a difference in their lives, such as mentors, friends, family members, and neighbors.

"It's a way of expressing feelings, a way saying 'Thank you' as well as 'I care.'"

For more information, call the church office at 617-773-3319.

Neighborhoods, Banner, Flag In Spotlight

By TOM HENSHAW

Someday it may be called the Year of the Neighborhoods.

It started in January when Mayor William Phelan promised a two-year fight by his administration to improve the quality of life in Quincy's neighborhoods and kicked it off himself by including a "Neighborhood Improvement Survey" with the city census.

The visible result was the naming of a code enforcement officer, a crackdown on illegal rooming houses, an ordinance against excessive paving of house lots, speed traps in residential streets and a $2.2 million campaign to repair and improve city sidewalks.

At year's end, the mayor was calling for creation of design guidelines to help developers and municipal agencies to better fit their developments into character of the neighborhood.

The city's financial position continued to improve as Standard and Poors, the bond rating company increased its bond rating from "A" to "A+," saving the taxpayers hundreds of dollars in interest paid on bond indebtedness.

But the stories that caught everyone's attention involved the displays of a controversial banner and flag.

The banner strung across the facade of United First Parish Church read "People of Faith for Marriage Equality" in support of same-sex marriage remained in place legally for 60 days despite protests of those opposed to its message.

And the flag of the People's Republic of China flew alongside the American flag briefly over the Wollaston headquarters of the Chinese United Association despite the protests of veterans who saw it as the flag of their old enemy, Communist China.

Here is a summary of events in Quincy in the year 2006:

JANUARY

Mayor William Phelan, starting his third term in office, pledged to focus the next two years on preserving and strengthening the neighborhoods, improving the quality of life for senior citizens while attracting the right kind of development in the right places.

In his inaugural address, the mayor predicted that the long-awaited new Quincy High School was "closer to reality than ever before" and vowed to continue to strive for excellence and provide the resources to make the schools "the heart of our neighborhoods."

4 To 9 P.M. Celebration Sunday

Over 10,000 Expected At City's First Night

More than 10,000 revelers from Quincy and the South Shore are expected to usher in the New Year at Quincy's family oriented First Night celebration Sunday.

The 4 to 9 p.m. festivities offer an eclectic entertainment lineup, two fireworks displays, KidsFest, ice sculptures, A Grand Procession Parade and a variety of other activities.

The distance between the 17 venues is minimal, making them easier to attend regardless of the weather.

There will be free parking beginning at 4 p.m. at the Ross parking garage off Granite Street, Hancock parking lot, at Chestnut Street across from Quincy District Court and Presidents Place Parking Garage, off Hancock Street in Quincy Square. The MBTA Red Line will be in operation bringing revelers to the Quincy Center station.

The First Night button is the ticket to all performances. Buttons may be purchased through Saturday, Dec. 30th at the City Clerk's Office, Richard J. Koch Park & Recreation Complex, Thomas Crane Public Library, Quincy Credit Union and participating Dunkin' Donuts locations.

Cost of buttons is $7 per individual and a "Family Pack" of five is available for $20. Pre-event purchases are encouraged as the prices increase $7 per button, three for $20 and $30 for the "Family Pack" on event day and will be available beginning at 2 p.m. in the button booth outside City Hall.

Outdoor festivities include a Grand Procession parade beginning at 6:15 p.m. and two fireworks displays; the first at 6:30 p.m. followed by the Grand Finale fireworks capping off the evening at 9:15 p.m. The fireworks display will be at Faxon Field at the intersection of Southern Artery and Coddington Street.

Ice sculptures will grace the entrances to the venues. Artist Billy Poe of Brookline Ice Company will be outside City Hall to carve the large "First Night Quincy 2007" sculpture, which requires over 2,400 pounds of ice. In total more than 8,600 pounds of ice was used to create all sculptures.

Visit the city's web site, www.ci.quincy.ma.us for details on First Night Quincy, or contact the Quincy Park Department at 617-376-1251 for more information.

9/11 Motivates Jeffrey Clifford

Former Quincy Resident Welcomed Home From Iraq

By MIKAELA SLANEY

Jeffrey Clifford of Hanson, formerly of Quincy, recently returned from a year-long deployment in Fallujah, Iraq to a warm reception and welcome home party.

He was greeted upon his return to Fort Devens by 15 family members, and was the honoree at a "Welcome Home Party" at the Knights of Columbus, North Quincy, that boasted a guest list of over 200.

Clifford trained for combat for four months at 29 Palms Marine Base in the Mojave Desert in California before serving seven months in Fallujah, a city at the heart of the Sunni Triangle in the Al Anbar Province of Iraq. Fallujah is known as an area with a high number of armed insurgents, Clifford said.

While in Fallujah he patrolled the area as vehicle commander of the lead HMMV vehicle in a mobile assault platoon with the first battalion. HMMVs carry heavy machine guns, and are used by marines to engage the enemy in different situations.

As the vehicle commander of the lead "point vehicle" HMMV, Clifford had to spot improvised explosive devices (IEDs or roadside bombs), spot potential ambushes, stop suspicious vehicles and persons for a weapon search, and search houses and courtyards for weapons.

JEFFREY CLIFFORD

Clifford served as the navigator for the platoon responsible for ensuring the safe arrival of eight vehicles to their destination, and was assigned the field interrogator for the platoon.

Clifford said that the most rewarding experience that he had while on deployment was helping "Baby Maryam," a child suffering from severe health problems. Baby Maryam was transported from Iraq to America where she could be treated for a condition that caused her bladder to develop on the outside of her body. Clifford said that he took pride in helping her reach the attention that she needed.

"Saving Baby Maryam was definitely one of the most rewarding experiences, and making a contribution to the War on Terror by capturing a number of agents," he said. "That was something that I was happy to do, to help contribute. I would do it again."

Clifford said that he decided to return to action in the wake of the Twin Towers tragedies.

"My motivation, if I had to say one motivation, was Sept. 11, 2001. That definitely inspired me," he said.

He is the assistant general counsel and manager of the Compliance and Enforcement Unit of the Massachusetts Dept. of Industrial Accidents, and a Marine combat infantry veteran of Operations Dessert Shield and Desert Storm.

He enlisted with the first Battalion, 25th Marines, based out of Fort Devens, Ayer, MA in 2005.

Raised in Quincy, he is a graduate of UMass with a BA in arts and Catholic University School of Law, Washington D.C., with a Juris Doctorate degree.

In 1998 he worked as an assistant District Attorney in the Norfolk County District Attorney's Office, where he prosecuted cases out of the Quincy District Court.

His wife, Jeannine Clifford, and three children, Juliette, 6, Jacqueline, 5, and Jeffrey Jr., 2, reside in Hanson.

"We're so proud of him, he did an amazing job," said Jeannine Clifford.

Quincy Police Department's 28-Member SCUBA Unit Formally Commissioned

The Quincy Police Department's first SCUBA Unit was formally commissioned recently and placed into service. The Quincy Police SCUBA Unit was formed to conduct counter-terrorism deterrent searches of critical maritime infrastructure located in Quincy.

The unit will conduct subsurface inspections of piers, docks, ships and energy transfer facilities located in the Fore River Basin. The above security measures are routinely conducted in the inner Boston Harbor by Boston, Everett and the Massachusetts State Police Departments. Until now, no such counter-terrorism measures were taken to protect the communities surrounding the Fore River Basin.

The existence of the Quincy Police SCUBA Unit will enhance the combined efforts of local, state and federal law enforcement agencies to protect the Port of Boston, which includes Quincy, Weymouth and Braintree.

The unit is comprised of 28 Quincy Police officers and is under the command of Lt. Donald Greenwood of the Quincy Police Department's Homeland Security Unit. All members of the Quincy Police SCUBA Unit are volunteers.

Funding for the formation of the unit was received by the Quincy Police Department from a Homeland Security grant. Unit equipment includes dry and wet suits to ensure all-season capability.

All SCUBA Unit members completed five courses to become certified as police divers. These courses included: Basic Scuba Diver, Advanced Open Water Diver, Rescue Diver, Dry Suit Diver and Police Search Diver.

The 28-man unit was equipped and received initial traing from Mr. Al Anzuoni of South Shore Divers Incorporated, located in Weymouth. Advanced specialized training will be provided to the unit by federal agencies such as the U.S. Customs Agency, the U.S. Naval Explosive Ordinance Disposal Unit and the U.S. Coast Guard.

The John Hancock Plunge

Want to get off to what you might call a refreshing start for the New Year?

Or call it a courageous one.

And help a worthy cause at the same time.

Well, you're invited to be at the Mound Street Beach in Quincy Point Saturday, Jan. 20 at 11 a.m.

And take the John Hancock Birthday Plunge, Quincy's new version of the L Street Brownies.

KELLY

Uniform of the day: swimsuit, speedo, or a costume of your choice in which to take the plunge into the nice, cool waters of Mound Street Beach. Brrr!

But it is all for a worthy cause. Registration fee is $10 per person. Proceeds go to the Interfaith Social Services.

The event, coinciding with Hancock's birth Jan. 23, 1737 is being sponsored by the Quincy beaches and Coastal Commission of which Ward 1 Councillor Leo Kelly is chairman.

HANCOCK

Kelly is a Hancock booster. He thinks the latter has been somewhat slighted not only in history but in his hometown of Quincy.

"You hear a lot about John Adams and John Quincy Adams, but not too much about John Hancock," Kelly says. "He was not only the first signer of the Declaration of Independence, he was the president of the Continental Congress which is like being the first president of the United States."

"He later became governor of Massachusetts. And many people wanted Quincy to be named Hancock in his honor."

One reason Hancock doesn't get as much attention as the Adams presidents is the fact that his birthplace was destroyed by fire in 1759 while the Adams birthplace and the Adams Mansion, home of four generations of the family, are still here as main tourist attractions.

The Adams Academy, home of the Quincy Historical Society, was built over the cellar of the Hancock birthplace on Adams Street. The Academy was a gift from John Adams who selected the site himself in honor of his boyhood friend and fellow patriot.

Kelly several months ago, had a copy of the Declaration of Independence hung in the City Council chambers along with a glass case of pewter figures of Hancock, Adams and Thomas Jefferson. At his own expense.

Hancock's signature on the Declaration of Independence is, perhaps, the world's most famous autograph.

And that has given Kelly another idea to keep Hancock in the local spotlight.

He is planning a penmanship contest for elementary school students with the blessing of School Supt. Dr. Richard DeCristofaro.

Getting back to the Hancock Plunge the names of those taking part will be entered into drawings for prizes. And there will be refreshments-hot, of course.

Those hearty souls wanting to take the plunge can register by making out a $10 check payable to Interfaith Social Services and sending it to: Quincy Beaches and Coastal Commission, care of Chickie Abdallah, treasurer, 48 Silver St., Quincy, MA 02169.

And will Kelly be taking the plunge himself?

"Well," he says, "I promise to dunk my big toe."

That could get you tossed in, Leo.

LOYAL READER: Jessica Creswell of Grandview Ave., Wollaston, has to be one of our most loyal readers.

She says she really enjoys The Sun. So much so, she has copies of every issue for the past eight years.

That's loyalty.

SMILE DEPT: Fr. Raymond Kiley of St. John's Church, who likes to mix a little humor with his homilies, told one that goes like this:

A grandmother was lamenting to a friend that she has traditionally sent checks to her older grandchildren but they never called to thank her.

But this year, she told her friend, she sent checks and they not only called but came to see her.

"What made them change," her friend asked.

"Well," she replied, "this year I didn't sign the checks."

HAVE A HAPPY, Healthy New Year, everyone.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A 1941 real photo postcard view of an Eastern Mass Street Railway trolley heading down Babcock Street from near The Bit in Houghs Neck. Sea Street is just out of sight on the right. The old single-track trolley line in Houghs Neck ran the length of Sea Street except for a half-mile stretch along Babcock Street from here to Manet Avenue where it rejoined Sea Street. The destination sign on the trolley reads Boston Limited, but the car is going the other way. Busses replaced the trolleys in Houghs Neck in April 1948. There was a grocery store and bakery in the building shown here for over 25 years. The Brown family first operated it in the 1920s and then the Stokoes ran it until World War II. The building is still standing although it has had some architectural changes and is now number one Babcock Street. Today, there is a large "Welcome to Houghs Neck" sign near where the man is standing. To contact Tom Galvin, e-mail tmgalvin@verizon.net.

Praise For Lt. Minton, Police, Fire Departments

As I read Lt. Dan Minton's latest column entitled A Job Well Done, I wanted to just say that his weekly columns contain valuable information and each week his commentaries get better and better.

This most recent piece about getting into a stranger's car explained just what could happen. He's got great common sense too.

As a police officer, myself, known to write a thing or two, I met Dan for the first time earlier this year. I told him his columns were really good. He replied coming from me that was a great compliment.

One year ends, another begins. I hope none of us ever forgets those that serve and protect us here in Quincy.

Whether, police or firefighters who are always there when we need them and without whom we would be in dire straits.

Without public safety, what would we have? We should never forget the job they do everyday. We should never take them for granted.

I haven't the foggiest idea why I became a police officer, but I do remember how sad I was when a childhood friend of my mother, Officer Franny Johnson was killed in the line of duty on Boston's Tremont St. back on March 17, 1969. Perhaps, he inspired me, I don't know.

Thanks to all the members of the Quincy Police and Fire Departments for being there for us. A job well done.

Lemon Shrimp And Kathy's Date Surprise

At our daughter Nancy's Christmas party for her employees, there were countless appetizers at the table, but one was unique because it was the first time I had ever seen it. It will be great for New Year's Eve.

It was brought by Kathy and very easy, but very delicious.

Kathy's Date Surprise

1 package dates (pitted) enough almonds to fill the dates bacon strips cut in half

After all the dates are pitted in case you can't find those that are, stuff each one with an almond. Wrap half slice of bacon around each one. place a toothpick in each one and bake in a 350 degree oven in a baking dish until bacon is crispy. The combination of the bacon with the sweetness of the dates is incredible.

The other appetizer is one I prepare and also great for New Year's Eve. And especially for shrimp lovers.

Lemon Marinated Shrimp

2 pounds fresh or frozen shelled and deveined shrimp
1/2 cup lemon juice
1/4 cup cooking oil
3 tablespoons olivė oil
2 tablespoons fresh parsley
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/4 teaspoon pepper

First boil the shrimp until pink. Drain. If large shrimp you can cut them in half lengthwise.

Combine the lemon juice, cooking oil, olive oil, parsley, salt and pepper. Pour over the shrimp until well coated.

Refrigerate for several hours stirring once in awhile.

When it's time to serve the shrimp, simply drain off the liquid and arrange in a platter lined with lettuce leaves. Happy New Year!

Nancy Allen (back row, center) and Donna Crosta (back row, right) hand deliver the latest batch of "comfort cushions" to Margarete Banner, Recreational Therapist in the Transitional Care Unit at Quincy Medical Center (back row, left) and Angela Ashbridge, a recent Quincy Medical Center patient from Weymouth (front). The church has sewn, stuffed and delivered more than 1,000 of the pillows to Quincy Medical Center, this year.

FEBRUARY

Radio station WJDA, the voice of the South Shore for 57years, was sold for $4.5 million to the Principle Broadcasting Network, a Christian-oriented music and talk network of stations.

"It's getting harder and harder to make it as a stand alone station," said Jay Asher, the president and CEO and son of the founder of the station.

The Historical District Commission left in limbo plans by the United First Parish Church to display a 34 x 4 feet banner supporting gay marriage from the 367-year-old Stone Temple where Presidents John and John Quincy Adams once worshipped and are entombed.

The commission ruled the banner was too big and the configuration would compromise the integrity of the architecture but the church was given until March 7 to revise it application.

Mayor William reappointed 40 members of his administrative staff with a notable exception — Treasurer-Tax Collector James Chiccino.

Phelan gave no reason for the omission but he warned the rest of the staffers, "It is important that we remember the basic mission of public service."

City Council President Doug Gutro and City Clerk Joseph Shea announced plans to hold a half-day training session for their staffs on "Community Disersity and Cultrual Competency."

Quincy escaped the wrath of a northeast storm that some meteorologists called a blizzard even though some 15 inches of snow fell on the city accompanied by near gale for winds of 35 miles an hour and temperatures well below freezing.

"Nothing of an emergency nature happened," said Tom Gorman, the director of Emergency Management.

The City Council passed an ordinance calling for a $50 fine and possible eventual court action for property owners who fail to remove snow and ice from sidewalks in front of non-residential buildings.

Mayor Phelan formed a "Smart Zoning" Committee to address and review existing city ordinances and the zoning code to enhance and improve the quality of life in the city.

Noting that the city's energy bill has nearly doubled since 1998, Council President Gutro filed an order establishing a special committee to check energy efficiency of all public buildings.

Eighteen new police officers graduated from the Police Academy and were expected to be in uniform and on the streets sometime in April.

Fire Chief Timothy Pettinelli reminded Quincy residents that carbon monoxide alarms would be required in all residences with potential source of the deadly gas by March 31.

Matt Delorey, 23, a student at Quincy College who fought in both wars in Afghanistan and Iraq, was the first to receive a tax-free state bonus of $1,000.

Alarmed by a high number of disturbance calls, police and other officials met with the City Council's Ordinance Committee to consider changes in the "Keeper of a Disorderly House" ordinance.

George White, who volunteered 40 years as a member and chairman of the Quincy Christmas Festival Committee, was named The Quincy Sun's Citizen of the Year for 2005.

The 2006 city census forms went into the mail, including for the first time a two-page "Neighborhood Improvement Survey" added by Mayor Phelan to identify neighborhood concerns and issues.

Radio station WJDA, the voice of the South Shore for 57years, was sold in February for $4.5 million to the Principle Broadcasting Network, a Christian-oriented music and talk network of stations. A record 4,000 turned out for the 18th annual Quincy Lunar New Year Festivals at North Quincy High School, celebrating the Year of the Dog with the Asian community.

North Quincy beat Quincy at basketball 67-59 before 1,400 fans to tie the Presidents for the Atlantic Coast League North Division title, each with 10-2 records.

Deaths in February included:

Mayor Proposes Code Enforcement Officer

(Cont'd From Page 11)

2006 In Review

MARCH

Mayor William Phelan presented the City Council with a proposed ordinance that would permit the creation of the position of code enforcement officer.

"My goal of strengthening our great neighborhoods would, be augmented by dedicating a position to deal with the issues that plague our neighborhoods and detract from the quality of life in our city," he said.

The mayor also reintroduced to the City Council his Neighborhood Stabilization Plan, a program that potentially would allow a grant of up to $500 to Quincy residents 62 years of age or older who have lived in their property for 20 or more years.

"This initiative would recognize the people that helped build our city and make it great," said the mayor. "Our goal is to get people to reinvest in our neighborhoods and this program would be a valuable help for our seniors."

The intersection of Hancock Street and Billings Road was designated Captain E. Alan Brudno Square in memory of the Quincy boy who grew up around the corner and lost his life as a result of the Vietnam War.

The 79-year-old St. Joseph's parochial school in Quincy Point, faced with an expected deficit of $100,000 and declining enrollment, announced plan to close at the end of the school year.

The City Council paid tribute to Radio Station WJDA, which had served the South Shore area for 57 year but was sold this year for $4.5 million to Principle Broadcasting, a Christian music and talk network.

Citations were presented to Jay Asher, the owner and son of the founder; Joe Catalano, "the voice of WJDA," and Mike Logan, "the man you turn to for all the news you need to know."

The way was cleared for United First Parish Church to raise a 34-foot, 9-inch banner in support of same-sex marriage when church father agreed at a Zoning Board of Appeals hearing to cut the display time from 90 to 60 days.

Quincy College signed a transfer agreement that would allow Quincy College students who complete an Associate's degree to enroll in baccalaureate degree programs at Cambridge College.

Diana Ong, fluent in Mandarin Chinese with reading proficiency in French and Japanese, was named an assistant to Mayor Phelan.

Representative Bruce Ayers was cited by MASSPIRG for his stand against a bill pending in the state legislature that would lead to a liquefied natural gas (LNG) plant on Outer Brewster Island in Boston Harbor.

Quincy received a grant of $473,640 from the Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA) to elevate or retrofit 17 flood-prone properties.

More than 450 friends of Father Bill's Place raised more than $50,000 for homeless women at the Open Your Heart Dinner Dance at Lombardo's in Randolph.

The Quincy Point Congregational Church presented a check for $10,000 to the Quincy Public Schools' Project Access, which provides rights and special services to homeless children. The money was raised through sale of a church-produced CD.

Cadette Senior Girl Scout Troop 4202 and Junior Girl Scout Troop 4157 were recognized by the City Council for earning the highest awards in their levels, the silver and bronze awards, respectively.

"It's refreshing," said Councillor Jay Davis. "I think these young women are what is right about Quincy."

Quincy, which planted 450 new trees and replaced 250 others last year, was named Tree City USA for the 10th straight year by the National Arbor Day Foundation and the State Office of Environmental Affairs.

Sean Galvin, a partner at Galvin Construction Co., was introduced as the new president of Quincy 2000 Collaborative, the city's public/private partnership for economic development.

Richard Gormley of Sovereign Bank was elected president of the Quincy Business Association.

Hank Conroy, who coached the Quincy High football team from 1964 to 1977, including an undefeated season in 1970, was inducted into the Massachusetts High School Coaches Hall of Fame.

United First Parish Displays Marriage Equality Banner

(Cont'd From Page 12)

2006 In Review

APRIL

A banner proclaiming "People of Faith For Marriage Equality" went up on the façade of United First Parish Church and Pastor Sheldon Bennett said it would remain there for 60 days while the state legislature debated a same sex marriage amendment.

"Our primary purpose is to publicly proclaim that as people of faith we support marriage equality and that marriage equality affirms the core values as Unitarian Universalists," said Bennett.

Not all Quincy clergymen went along with Bennett's view. The Rev. John Swanson, pastor of the Union Congregational Church of Wollaston, called the banner a "narcissistic" display of an "in your face attitude."

"The Founding Fathers of this country made two assumptions when they wrote the U. S. Constitution," he said, "one, that America would always be a Judeo-Christian country and, two, that the family unit of a mother and father would always be intact.

"Today both these assumptions are under attack and what a travesty that the final resting place of John Adams, author and driving force behind our constitution, has been desecrated."

The controversial statement eventually went for naught when the legislature failed to act on the amendment in constitutional convention.

Police were in an all-out search for the writer of noted threatening sexual assault written on pages torn from American Girl magazine and wrapped in girls' underwear and left on porches, mostly in the South Quincy area.

Mayor William Phelan and the City Council expressed concern that, in the event of a shutdown of the New England Fertilizer Co. plant, some 275 tons of sludge would be hauled from the old Fore River shipyard by truck rather than rail.

"On-site storage, odor, heavy truck traffic through neighborhood streets, and the leaking of sludge material from non-watertight trucks onto city streets are all concerns that are raised by this proposal," said the mayor in a letter to Patrick A. Laskey, executive director of the MBTA.

Laskey apologized for not keeping Quincy informed of the plan, telling the Council's Oversight Committee" "We assumed that everyone knew about it. We should have been more thorough in our outreach."

MySpace.com may be "a place for friends," but Dan Feeney of the Norfolk District Attorney's office warned an audience of parents at Quincy High School that "in many aspects it is like a Disneyland for predators."

State Trooper David McSweeney advised MySpace members not to post real names, not to arrange face to face meetings with strangers and not to respond to messages that are threatening, hateful or uncomfortable and instead report concerns to police.

City Council President Doug Gutro asked the MBTA to reconsider the reduction of commuter rail service to Quincy on the Boston to Kingston rail line. In cutting the Quincy stop, the MBTA noted that the city also has a Red Line stop on the subway.

Frank McCauley, freshly retired after 32 years as mayor, city councilor and school committeeman in Quincy, began writing the weekly "Quincy's Yesterdays" column in The Quincy Sun.

The William B. Rice Eventide Home, long a landmark among the graceful green estates on Adams Street, announced plans to replace the 70-year-old existing building with a completely new three-story building constructed behind the old one.

The Dorothy Quincy Homestead, the home of four degenerations of the Quincy family and the girlhood home of the wife of John Hancock, was designated a National Historic Landmark.

Mayor Phelan named a task force to better identify and enforce ordinances regarding illegal rooming houses.

Deaths in April included:

Lorraine Rodgers, 51, of Quincy, a U. S. Adult figure skating champion in 2005.

Clement F. Crowley, 84, of Quincy, who trained and seconded boxers for 50 years.

John F. Wipfler, 88, of Wareham, formerly of Quincy, the city's first labor adviser.

Annette M. Suk, 100, of Duxbury, a retired employee of the Bargain Center in Quincy.

A PASSERBY STOPS to check the message "People Of Faith For Marriage Equality" on the 34 by 4 foot banner displayed at historic United First Parish Church. The banner, dedicated April 2, remained for 60 days. Quincy Sun photo/Noreen O'Shea

Robert S. Katz, 82, of Newton, longtime newspaper man who closed out his career as advertising representative for The Quincy Sun.

Robert G. Fitzgerald Sr., of Milton, co-owner of South Shore Buick in Quincy.

FY07 Budget Would Increase Education 5% But 100 Fewer Workers

(Cont'd From Page 13)

MAY

Mayor William Phelan submitted a proposed budget of $237,502,017 for Fiscal 2007 to the City Council, an increase of $10,719,712 over Fiscal 2006. Projected revenues for Fiscal 2007 were estimated at $238,860,942.

Education, which accounts for 31 per cent of the expenditures, would increase by five per cent but the budget allowed for a decrease of 100 in the number of city employees and funding for the new position of code enforcement officer.

"We're going to continue as long as I am the mayor to invest in our future by investing in our schools," said Phelan.

City's Bond Rating Improves To 'A+'

2006 In Review

(Cont'd From Page 15)

JULY

Mayor William Phelan announced that Sandard and Poors, the bond rating company, had increased Quincy's bond rating from "A" to "A+," enabling the city to save hundreds of thousands of dollars in future debt payments.

"We continue to improve our city's financial strength and it is being recognized," said the mayor. "The rating increase will help us save significant taxpayer dollars going forward."

Standard and Poors cite Quincy's low debt burden, continued strong property tax base growth, growing revenue flexibility, higher reserve levels and excess levy capacity as reasons for the improve rating.

Mayor Phelan told the state he would like to see the city take over control of state-owned land along Wollaston Beach, Furnace Brook Parkway and Squantum Point Park.

In a letter to Stephen Burrington of the Department of Conservation and Recreation, he cited the state's neglect in maintaining the property and asked for a meeting to discuss Quincy taking it over.

Later, he pulled back his request for a meeting when he got a personal telephone call from Lt. Gov. Kerry Healey proposing that she visit the sites to investigate the problem herself.

"She was taking it seriously," said Phelan. "The lieutenant governor deserves a chance. Let's see how they do."

An explosion blew Robert Donnelly out the back door of his home on Craig Avenue, Quincy Point, and investigators traced the cause to flammable cleaning fluids that infiltrated the sewer system.

The Mayor's Office of Constituent Services competed work on the city's first "Good Neighbor Guide," a handy booklet reviewing, in English and Chinese, the quality of life ordinance in the city.

SEPTEMBER

An apparently innocent but ill-conceived attempt to fly the flag of the People's Republic of China alongside the American flag over a Wollaston building touched a nerve in Quincy.

To some in the city's burgeoning Asian population it was the non-political flag of their former homeland.

But to veterans and others, particularly those who fought Communists in Korea and Vietnam, it was still the flag of the enemy.

The Chinese and an American flag flew briefly over the headquarters of the Chinese United Association at the corner of Hancock and Beale Streets but was taken down when the protests started.

Deval L. Patrick of Milton won the Democratic nomination for governor, sweeping to victory by a large margin over rivals businessman Christopher F. Gabrieli and Attorney General Thomas F. Reilly.

Timothy P. Murray, the mayor of Worcester, won the nomination for lieutenant governor in Quincy by 206 votes over Deborah Goldberg of Brookline with Andrea Silbert of Harwich trailing badly.

The voter turnout was 15,399 or 28.62 per cent of those registered, a little higher than expected but still light.

Despite complications, the $7 capital improvement project on Wollaston Beach was reported to be only six months behind the original schedule.

"The contractor anticipates being substantially completed by mid-November," said the State Department of Conservation and Recreation.

Phil DiBona of Milford, Conn., who grew up in Quincy, was reunited by surprise at a DAV meeting with John Simko, a man whose life he saved wile they were serving with the 45th Division in Italy 60 years ago.

Mayor William Phelan submitted to the City Council plans to unite multiple public health agencies from different cities in a mutual aid agreement to help each other in the event of an emergency.

"There is an enormous value to pooling resources and expertise," said Council President Doug Gutro.

The City Council expressed concerns for the safety of Quincy residents and firefighters with the continued paving over of gas electricity gate boxes throughout the city.

The war on water pollution took to the streets when MIT freshmen stenciled warnings against dumpling on the streets next to storm drains that lead to Wollaston Beach and Boston Harbor.

The 14th annual U.S. Marshal William F. Degan Memorial Road Race was held on Pageant Field and also in Iraq, where 60 American law enforcement officers stationed in Baghdad held their own race in Degan's honor.

The fifth anniversary of the 9/11 terror attacks that took 3,030 lives, including those of 343 firefighter and 75 policemen, was observed in a solemn remembrance ceremony at Central Fire Headquarters,

Less than four days after a smoky fire threatened to end Bob Barker's life's work, he was back at the old stand repairing typewriters as he had done for 58 years,

Chinese Flag In Wollaston Sparks Controversy

(Cont'd From Page 18)

OCTOBER

The furor over the display of the flag of the People's Republic of China in Wollaston raised up a notch when the flag reappeared alongside the American flag over the headquarters of the Chinese United Association.

Letters to The Quincy Sun continued to flog the red flag with its five gold starts as representative of Chinese communism and not a real cultural symbol or national flag.

"We talked to the building inspector (Jay Duca) and the Mayor's office and there is no legal issue," said a spokesman for the CUA.

"It's down now. We flew it one day (Oct. 1) for the National Chinese Independence Day."

Some 60 demonstrators, many of them veterans of the Korean and Vietnam wars, held a weekend protest rally in front of the building as Mayor William Phelan called for calm in the midst of the furor.

"They have every right to fly the flag," he said. "It may not have been a great idea to have raised the flag without warning. It's best to take it down and let things calm down."

The North Quincy High School football team entertained Plymouth North in the first game to be played in Veterans Memorial Stadium after its near $700,000 renovation that included new turf. The visitors rolled to a 40-16 win.

City Council Welcomes New Code Enforcement Officer

By MIKAELA SLANEY

Newly elected code enforcement officer Kenneth Burke met high expectations from the City Council when he was introduced at the City Council's meeting last week.

The code enforcement position was created out of the need to control consistent quality-of-life violations throughout the city, noticeably trash, illegal parking and the posting of unauthorized signage.

Burke's position was designed to warn offenders when they break city codes, and then fine persistent violators as a last resort.

Previous City Council meetings drew a split decision over whether to create the position. Some thought that violations would decrease if people had someone to alert them that the codes exists, others thought it was too simple of a solution to such a large problem, and the responsibility should be split among all police officers.

"I didn't support the position, but if it works then I will support the position. I'm looking for results," said Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymondi, who has been a strong opponent in the past.

"I'm expecting big things from you," said Ward 6 Councillor Brian McNamee.

Ward 4 Councillor Jay Davis said that he has known Burke personally for several years, and has established a reputation for being level headed, diffusing situations without conflict, and treating people with dignity and respect.

"You're a good person for this job, you get a lot more with honey than with vinegar."

Help With Simple Wills Monthly

Atty. Ed Conroy will be at the Council on Aging office, 83 Saratoga St., North Quincy, every third Friday of the month to assist the elderly with a free explanation of simple wills.

QCAP'S Emergency Food Center Holiday Appeal Receives $1,000 Donation From Quincy Elks

Quincy Community Action Programs, Inc. announces it has received a $1,000 donation from the Quincy Lodge of Elks No. 943 to support the organization's Emergency Food Center (EFC).

The donation helps kick-off the group's annual Emergency Food Center Holiday fund drive. This year QCAP must raise $100,000 from private sources to keep the doors open at Emergency Food Center, which distributes over 4,500 emergency food orders each year to feed hungry families in Quincy and on the South Shore.

"QCAP's Emergency Food Center is the only food program in Quincy that is open five days a week, year round. This means we are there for a family that has run out of food, as well as for the many seniors and disabled people who rely on a monthly food order from us as a main nutrition source," said Beth Ann Strollo, QCAP's Executive Director.

"The Elks' generous donation gets our annual holiday fund drive off to a great start. We are so grateful for their support. They are among the many in the community who are concerned about hungry people and who give generously to help keep this lifeline available to thousands of needy households," said Strollo.

For over 35 years, QCAP has been providing emergency food assistance from its Southwest Community Center located in Brewers Corner in Southwest Quincy. The Emergency Food Center (EFC) distributes enough non-perishable and fresh foods including meats, dairy and produce to feed a family for three days. Households that are experiencing extreme emergencies may receive food orders more than once a month. In addition, QCAP distributes holiday food orders that contain a turkey or ham and all the fixings at Thanksgiving, Christmas and Easter. Over 2,600 unduplicated people received emergency food from QCAP's EFC last year – a 7% increase in the number of people seeking help.

QCAP operates the Emergency Food Center on a slim budget, with just one full-time and two part-time staff, and a team of volunteers who donated about 6,000 hours per year. The organization must raise funds from the private sector, including residents, businesses, foundations, and organizations to keep the EFC running. Seventy-eight (78%) of the EFC budget comes from private sources including foundations and private donors. QCAP maximizes every dollar donated by purchasing most of the food for $.18 per pound at the Greater Boston Food Bank.

To make a donation to QCAP's Emergency Food Center call Tracy Donahue, QCAP Director of Development at (617) 479-8181 or mail a check, made payable to QCAP, Inc. to the Emergency Food Center Fund, 1509 Hancock Street, Quincy, MA 02169.

Tax Tips From the Experts
Planning for the Self-employed

Last week i discussed last minute planning tips that you could save on income taxes for 2006. This article deals with tax issues for self-employed individuals.

Many people overlook paying bills relating to self-employed business by December 31. Most self-employed individuals are cash basis taxpayers which means a deduction in the year the item is paid.

Consider prepaying some of your expenses. The One Year Rule allows taxpayers a deduction in the year of payment as long as the payment does not create an asset or secures an advantage to the taxpayer of having a useful life exceeding one year from the date of payment. There are exceptions to this rule so use care and consult your tax advisor.

If the business use of a vehicle exceeds 50% consider purchasing a new one. Vehicles with gross weight of 6,000 lbs are not subject to luxury auto limitations. As a result you could get a deduction up to $25,000 if you purchase and take possession of the vehicle before December 31.

Consider a retirement plan with a 401(k) feature if you do not have one presently. You can make a 401(k) contribution for yourself equal to 100% of your self-employed income not exceeding $15,000 ($20,000 if over age 50). In addition you can contribute and additional 25% of your income to the non-401(k) portion of the retirement plan. The total contribution may not exceed $44,000 and the plan must be established before December 31. However contributions to the plan may be made 2007 and still deducted on your 2006 income tax return.

Patrick Carries City In Governor's Race, Voters OK Preservation Act

(Cont'd From Page 19)

2006 In Review

NOVEMBER

Deval L. Patrick of Milton swept to a large margin election victory both in Quincy and statewide to become the first black governor in Massachusetts history and the first Democrat in 14 years.

His margin in Quincy was 14,914 to 10,864 for Republican Lt. Governor Kerry Healey with independent Christie Mihos and Green Rainbow Party candidate Grace Ross far back in third and fourth places.

Fifty-four percent of the city's 54,503 registered voters went to the polls, a little higher than the 48-to-50 per cent expected.

State Treasurer Tim Cahill of Quincy easily won a second term with 88 per cent of the vote over Green Rainbow challenger James O'Keefe and Bill Delahunt won another term in Congress over Republican Jeffrey K. Beatty and independent Peter A. White.

Other Democratic incumbents reelected included Sen. Edward Kennedy, State Secretary William Galvin and State Auditor Joseph DeNucci. Martha Coakley was elected attorney general, succeeding Thomas Reilly, who didn't run.

State Sen. Michael Morrissey and State Reps. Bruce J. Ayers, Ron Mariano and A. Stephen Tobin were reelected unopposed.

Quincy voters accepted the Community Preservation Act, adding a surcharge to their tax bills to finance acquisition of open space but a law that would permit the sale of wine in grocery stores was turned down.

Memorial services were held in Arlington National Cemetery and St. Mary's Church in Quincy for Air Force Major Charles L. Bifolchi, missing in action in Vietnam since 1968 whose remains were found after 38 years.

Mayor Phelan named a nine-member Sea Street Safety Advisory Committee to help make Sea Street, the main artery to Houghs Neck, a more pedestrian friendly and safe roadway.

Michael Ryan, the DPW's director of buildings and maintenance, told the City Council's Education Committee that 2010 is the expected completion date for the new Quincy High School.

"We're on schedule and everyone's working hard to make it happen," he told the Council.

Major crime statistics released by the FBI showed Quincy to be second in Massachusetts and 76th nationally as the safest city in America. Only Newton was rated higher in the Bay State.

"This is a testament to the job that the Quincy Police Department and Chief Robert Crowley are doing on a daily basis," said Mayor Phelan.

Lt. Col. Robert A. Frazier, a decorated veteran of the Iraq war and a Quincy native, was the keynote speaker at Quincy's annual Veterans Day observance, Ernie Arienti, president of the Quincy Firefighters' Union, expressed concerns of firefighters over current conditions in the fire stations to the City Council's Public Safety Committee.

"We all knew that there were risks that go along with this job when we took the job," he said, "but we thought the city would give us proper tools and the training to minimize the risks."

Mayor Phelan called for the creation of design guidelines to guide developers and municipal agencies in protecting the character and aesthetics of the area when they plan multi-unit projects in Quincy's neighborhoods.

"I have continuously heard that the overdevelopment of our neighborhoods is an issue that greatly concerns our residents," he said.

THREE NEW MARINES Matthew Tobin (left), Robert Connell and Sean Joyce (right) step smartly down Hancock Street with former Mayor and Quincy District Court Clerk Magistrate Arthur Tobin, Police Chief Robert Crowley and Mayor William Phelan in Quincy's Veterans Day parade Nov. 11. "Design guidelines would wet the standards by which we, as a community, expect our neighborhoods to be treated. New development should fit the character of our existing neighborhoods."

The Rev. William Harding, pastor of Bethany Congregational Church, returned home after a 14-month tour of duty as a chaplain in Iraq.

Lt. Brendon McShane, executive officer of the USS Constitution, spoke of the priority given the US Navy by John Adams as the presidential wreath was laid on the tomb of the second president in First Parish Church on his 271st birthday.

"If he was here today he would see a powerful force," said McShane. "I think he would be pleased with the navy's reputation over the past few centuries."

Health Commissioner Andrew Scheele reported that Quincy had enough vaccine on hands and promised to meet the coming flu season.

The Police Crime Prevention unit held a four-week Senior Citizen Police Academy in Cantonese and Mandarin, two Chinese languages.

Students, teachers and parents at the Bernazzani School paid special tribute to teacher Jane Farrell-Smith, who died at age 45, by planting daffodils in her honor in front of the school.

Tom Stansbury of the Veterans Services Department was named Citizen of the Year by the Jewish War Veterans.

Patrice Sullivan won her third straight women's singles title and Ron Abell captured his second men's single crown in the 36th annual citywide tennis tournament.

Quarterback Matt Boyle passed to Alex Chan for a touchdown late in the fourth quarter to give Quincy a 10-7 victory over North Quincy in their 74th Thanksgiving Day football game. It was Quincy's eighth straight win over the Raiders.

Deaths in November included:

2006 In Review

DECEMBER

The new residential property tax for Fiscal 2007 was set at $10.44 per thousand valuation, an increase of only 11 cents over the Fiscal 2006 levy of $10.33. The commercial tax rate was fixed at $22.40 or 183 per cent of fair market value.

The new rate was estimated to increase the tax paid on the average home in Quincy at $98.

The property tax levy for Fiscal 2007 would be $146,359,623, up from $139,310,371 in Fiscal 2006. The levy limit under Proposition 2 is $155,055,727.

City Councillor Daniel Raymondi said he was disappointed to see that the average value of houses in Quincy, based on recent sales, had increased from $356.100 to $362,100 in spite of a recent slowdown in sales.

"All this value is being borne by the residential homeowner," said Raymondi. "I'm hoping these values will decrease by next year."

"The good news is that the tax rate is not as bad as expected because of new growth and local receipts," said Councillor John Keenan, chairman of the Finance Committee.

New Year's Resolution: Clear Away Clutter

With the new year almost here, you're probably putting together a list of resolutions to declare on the first of January. And it's likely that one resolution is to clear away clutter around the house and workshop. We all get busy as time passes, and things tend to pile up. So, to keep this resolution, get organized beforehand.

First, realize that completely cleaning out the clutter may take longer than a day. It may take a few weeks or months, depending on the time you have available to actually clean and store things. And things may become more cluttered at first, as you pull old items out of closets and storage bins. So make a schedule that is as realistic as possible, delegating a few hours a day to cleaning.

Don't be afraid to adjust your schedule as needed. If you reserved four hours for cleaning on a Saturday, but a home-improvement task is more pressing, reschedule the cleaning or reduce the number of hours you assigned to it.

Go room by room (or shelf by shelf in the garage or workshop) and list what items are there, what you regularly use, and what you haven't used in months or years. Unused items — clothes, tools, supplies, whatever — should be gathered up and donated to a charity.

Go over the items remaining and decide what will be used regularly and what can be stored away for later access. Separate these items into two boxes. Delegate storage space for the unused items.

Before storing metal tools, rub a thin coat of all-purpose lubricant, like WD-40 or All-in-One, over the metal. If the tools have wooden handles, rub in a coat of linseed oil to preserve the wood. Store them so that they don't pile on top of each other, if possible, in a clean and dry place.

Before storing clothing or bedding, separate each item or layer with a sheet of tissue paper. Place a few mothballs or cedar balls (available in household sections of the supermarket or home-improvement store) in the corners of the storage box or drawer.

Once the clutter has been cleared away and organized, clean the entire house. To control clutter throughout the year, keep a scheduling calendar at hand and try to be disciplined about cleaning at the same time each week.

New Employee Benefit Program Between QMC, Jack Conway Co. Sees First Participant

Margaret Donnelly, R.N. is the first employee to benefit from a new partnership between Quincy Medical Center and Jack Conway & Co. Realtors of Norwell.

The program offers Medical Center physicians, employees and their families discounts on mortgages, home buying and selling services, help with moving costs, home warranty programs and relocation services. Each time an employee uses the new benefit program, Jack Conway Co. makes a donation to Quincy Medical Center.

Donnelly utilized the services of Ellen Euse of the Jack Conway Co. Canton office to sell her Randolph home of 45 years and purchase a new home in Braintree.

"Ellen was fantastic, I couldn't be happier and I would recommend Jack Conway Co. to anyone." said Donnelly. "This was the first time I ever sold a home so I was particularly nervous, but Ellen held my hand through the whole process, shes a real pro."

Quincy Medical Center President and CEO Dr. Gary Gibbons praised the new partnership. "This new partnership is designed to ease some of the stress for any physicians and employees who are in the process of buying or selling property.

TO MARK the first QMC employee to utilize the new employee benefit program, Richard Cahill, president of Jack Conway & Co. Realtors, (center) presents a check to program participant Quincy Medical Center Nurse Margaret Donnelly, RN, (left), and also presents QMC President and CEO Gary Gibbons, MD, FACS (right) with a charitable donation in support of the medical center. Through the new program, QMC employees who utilize the realty groups services receive a discounted rate with the firm, and the firm makes a charitable contribution to QMC, in the employees name.

"It's outstanding that Jack Conway & Co. has decided to further support the advanced, high quality care delivered by our physicians and employees each day by making an additional charitable donation to the medical center in honor of each participant."

Jack Conway Co. President Richard Cahill is also on the board of Quincy Medical Center and is very pleased with the new partnership.

"When I approached Jack Conway about this idea he immediately supported it," he said. "This hospital saved my life when I had pneumonia and Im happy to be able to give a little bit back to the dedicated professionals who serve this community."

Keeping Mold, Mildew Out Of The Home

(NAPS) Keeping mold and mildew out of the home is a relatively simple way to reduce the itchy eyes, runny nose and other symptoms commonly associated with allergies.

Start by looking for signs of mold and mildew around the house. The American Industrial Hygiene Association says mold and mildew grow in rooms that high humidity levels or where moisture is allowed to collect. Generally, that means the bathroom.

Check bathroom ceilings, curtains, shower curtains and walls for dark spots, which can be signs of mold. Use a hot water and bleach solution to thoroughly clean the area and then paint the area with a mold-resistant primer.

It's also important to check bath fans and ventilators. It is suggested to replace the fans with products such as the Broan and NuTone Ultra Silent ventilation fans. The regular use of a bath ventilation system will help reduce humidity and moisture buildup. Several models feature Microban Antimicrobial Product Protection, and are engineered to inhibit the potential growth of odor and stain causing bacteria, mold and mildew on fan grilles.

The Microban protection also shields the ventilation fans from stains, odors and product deterioration caused by bacteria, mold and mildew. Because the protection is manufactured into the fan grille, it will not wash off or wear away, providing continuous antimicrobial protection for the life of the fan. An added bonus is that the fans run more quietly than typical bathroom fans. After checking out the bathroom, take a trip to the basement. Mold and mildew like to grow on porous surfaces, such as the concrete of which most foundations are made.

Take a careful look around for water stains or leaky pipes, both of which can invite mold growth. If there is mold, follow the same steps used in the bathroom: break out the bleach, water and paint.

For more information on the Broan & NuTone Ultra Silent ventilation fans, visit www.broan.com or www.nutone.com.

Stress-Free Moving Tips

(NAPS) Moving to a new home can be exciting but also stressful.

Fortunately, a few tips from the experts can help reduce moving stress. The following tips were compiled after watching videotapes of actual moving experiences.

1. Pack by rooms to later unpack by rooms.

2. Pack one room at a time and by zones within the rooms. This streamlines the unpacking process.

3. Label all the boxes clearly with who owns the property, the name of the room, the contents and where the contents will be stored.

4. Pack important financial documents separately.

5. Pack cleaning supplies separately so that upon arrival at the new home, they're easy to find.

6. Don't overpack boxes. When boxes are too heavy they may be difficult to lift, or break when lifting them.

7. To make sure nothing is lost during the move, number each box and create a checkoff list. When in the new home, cross off each number as the box is removed from the truck.

8. Use hand lotion throughout the day because handling cardboard and paper can dry out skin.

9. Label the kitchen boxes by following zones: cooking zone, food preparation zone, food storage zone and cleaning zone.

When unpacking, it is important to know the zones of the kitchen and what items should be stored in those zones.

For example, the food preparation zone should house cutting boards, knives, storage containers and spices. The cooking zone includes having the pots and pans close to the stove and oven. And the cleaning zone should accommodate all cleaning supplies in an organized and easy-to-use manner.

Before doing anything else, say the experts and Merillat Cabinetry, who compiled the tips, make the bed to have a comfortable place to sleep at the end of the day. Unpack all toiletries. Consider putting all the lamps and pictures in the closets temporarily for safekeeping.

There are also some basic pointers that all homeowners should know: focus on unpacking the essential items first. Take time to unpack things that aren't necessary right away.

After unpacking all items, carefully consider where to store them. Think about how often they'll be used and how easily accessible they need to be.

Storage ideas for any room in the home can be found at www.merillat.com

Refinancing Can Put Home at Risk

A recent review of mortgages revealed that 88 percent of refinances are to pay off debt, mostly from credit cards.

According to Andrew Housser, co-CEO of Bills.com, most people compare the interest rates on credit cards and mortgages and call it a "no-brainer" as they opt for refinance to pay off debts. However, refinance might not be the easy solution that it seems to be.

On its face, refinance sounds good. You'll pay a lower interest rate. The mortgage interest is tax-deductible. You'll only have to write one check to your mortgage company instead of to multiple credit-card companies.

However, there are a number of negatives. You may be subject to PMI payments if the loan amount exceeds 80 percent of your home's value, and you'll certainly pay mortgage fees for the new loan. And there is an even bigger red flag if you refinance to pay off credit cards: You're putting your home at risk. If you fall behind on credit-card payments, you'll get phone calls and letters. Fall behind on your mortgage, and you could lose your home.

If you do choose the refinance route to clear up credit-card debt, beware the debt re-escalation cycle: You look at all those lovely credit cards with their zero balances and you think, "Well, maybe just this once ..." as you pull out the plastic to pay for something.

Instead, if you refinance, build a large emergency fund with the money you're no longer paying on credit cards. Should something happen, the funds will be there, and you won't be tempted to pull out a credit card to pay for it.

Unless you know exactly what your income and expenses will be for the next year, perhaps the better plan is to whittle down your credit-card debt without putting your home at risk.

A Job Well Done

On Thursday, Dec. 14, at approximately 8 p.m., Officer Tim Moran was dispatched to Monroe Road on a report of an "unarmed robbery." The victim, a 53-year-old female, gave the dispatcher a description of the suspect as a huskey white male in his 30's with a light cap and jacket, which was broadcasted to all Quincy officers.

LT. DAN MINTON

Officer Moran met with the victim and observed that she was bleeding from her hands, complained of rib pain and her coat had dirt and debris on it, consistent with being dragged. The victim said that she was walking from the Quincy Center train station to her home on Hospital Hill when she observed the suspect approaching her on Monroe Road. She said that as the suspect was about to walk by her, he grabbed her pocketbook, which was on her arm.

The victim attempted to hold on to the pocketbook, but was dragged to the ground as the suspect pulled hard, took off running and fled with the pocketbook. The victim then went to a home on Monroe Road and asked for assistance. Fallon Ambulance EMTs treated the victim for the lacerations and assessed her rib pain.

Meanwhile, Officer Lauren Lambert, one of many officers looking for the suspect, notified communications that she found a suspect similar in description, sitting on a bench at the Burgin Parkway entrance to the MBTA. Officer Lambert asked the suspect how long he had been there and he responded that he just got there and was waiting for a bus to Brockton. Officer Lambert informed the suspect that he was on the wrong side of the station for the bus.

When asked where he was coming from the suspect originally said Dunkin' Donuts, then said he came from Burger King. Due to the inconsistency of the suspect's answers, close proximity to the scene of the crime and similarity of description, Officer Lambert brought him to the victim's location to confirm or exclude him as the offender.

The victim, upon seeing the suspect, said "That's him." The suspect, a 34-year-old Brockton resident, was arrested and charged with unarmed robbery.

As for the victim, she was transported to Quincy Medical Center, treated and released. Her pocketbook, with license and keys in it, was not found.

Nice work!

In this case, being aware of your surroundings may help reduce the chances of being a victim. One option she had as she saw the suspect approaching her was to cross the street and see what he does. If the suspect crosses the street, make your way to the front door of the closest home.

Depending on the circumstances, one could either wait there until the potential threat passes by or ask for the resident to call the police.

It is not recommended that you enter a "stranger's" home either, for yours as well as their sake.

As a homeowner, if someone comes to your door asking for help, the first actions should be to call "911." Most likely, the above actions will prevent an assault.

Nice Work!

High Expectations For Experienced Raiders

By SEAN BRENNAN

HOCKEY

The North Quincy Red Raiders, who last season missed the post-season tournament for the first time in eight seasons, will take to the ice this year with high hopes and expectations. Head coach Bob Doyle's team is not lacking in experience at the varsity level as it returns 15 players from last season's roster. Among these 15 returnees are 11 seniors.

"Last year we did not make the tournament for the first time in eight years," Doyle said last week. "This year's team brings back 15 players, 11 seniors and a handful of talented underclassmen. We are lead this winter by our three captains and our three year varsity goalie (first-year starter)."

Doyle's senior captains are Nash Winters (LW), Jimmy Fitzpatrick (C) and Ted Finnegan (RW) and his starting goaltender is senior Matt Connors.

"Winters, Fitzpatrick, Finnegan and Connors should all play major roles for the team this season," Doyle added. "But we also have a strong returning defense that should help Connors and the offense as the season progresses."

Seniors Joe Canavan and Ken Patey headline a defense that could end up as one of the best in the competitive Atlantic Coast League. Two other names to watch for on the backline this season for the Red Raiders are junior Derek Scott and sophomore Matt Furey.

North Quincy, which plays in the ACL North Division, schedules the very best non-league opponents that it can find, and for this reason, Doyle expects his team to elevate its game to that of its challengers.

"Our goal this season is to compete for the ACL North title and make the state tournament," Doyle said. "Our non-league schedule is tough. We play Archbishop Williams, Hanover and Silver Lake. Plus, with the addition of Marshfield into the ACL this year, all of our games are going to be competitive. The non-league games should help prepare the team for where we want to be at the end of the season, but I feel like we will have a very good club."

Two players to keep an eye on this winter are sophomore Brandon Gilmore (LW/C) and senior Max Adams (G), a transfer from South Boston.

"I see Gilmore providing big things for us on the ice, and Adams is a good player who just transferred this year," Doyle said.

Doyle's team opened their season on Dec. 16 with a 4-0 loss to Falmouth, and as season-openers go, the team showed signs of some early season jitters.

"We did not come our with that much intensity to start the game," Doyle said. "It was only 1-0 after two periods, but in the third we took too many penalties, and as a result we spent the period trying to kill off their power play. Falmouth scored three power play goals in the third and that was the game. On a positive note, our goaltending was outstanding. Matt Connors stood on his head and made 45 saves."

North Quincy played last night (12/27) versus Archbishop Williams and next plays on 1/3 against Marshfield in an Atlantic Coast League showdown.

Megan Riley Participates In National Horse Career Development Event

Megan Riley of Quincy, a student at the Norfolk County Agricultural High School in Walpole, recently attended the 79th National FFA Convention.

Riley was part of a horse judging team that participated in the national competition. The team was one of 45 teams participating in the 2006 National FFA Horse Career Development Event.

FFA is a national youth organization of 495,046 student members preparing for leadership and careers in the science, business and technology of agriculture with 7,242 local chapters in all 50 states, Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands. FFA strives to make a difference in the lives of students by developing their potential for premier leadership, personal growth and career success through agricultural education.

The Horse Evaluation CDE involves the team members judging different classes including Halter horses, Hunter under Saddle and Western Pleasure. They have to place each class correctly, give reasons for their placings as well as complete a team activity demonstrating their knowledge of horses and the equine industry.

Riley's team won the Horse Evaluation CDE at the state level, competed in the regional competition held at the Big E in Springfield, and then went to the nationals. They placed 22nd out of 45 teams, they were only 63 points from the top 10 team and as a team they earned a silver emblem.

In addition, Riley earned an individual silver emblem.

Quincy-North Girls' Ice Hockey Skates Into 5th Season

The North Quincy/Quincy combined varsity girls ice hockey program is off and skating into its fifth year this winter. The program, which brings the city's two high schools together to form one team, is coached by Laura Prisco. The team's managers are Bo Shaughnessy and Allison Griffith.

The varsity roster is comprised of fifteen team members. There are twelve North Quincy students and three Quincy students on the team this year. The breakdown of grades includes five seniors, three sophomores, five freshmen and two eighth graders.

Leading the way is senior captain Alyssa Fontana (C) of North Quincy. The other seniors from North Quincy are Amanda Maggio (RW), C.J. Garber (D) and Kristen Reamer (G). Quincy High School senior Carla Nickerson (RW) is the other senior on this year's roster.

The sophomore class is represented by North Quincy's Lauren Brooks (RW), Meg Gillespie (D) and Brenna Morrisey (D). The five freshmen are North Quincy's Paige Keenan (RW), Colleen Newcomb (C) and Laura O'Donnell (RW) and Quincy's Anna Bythrow (D) and Colleen Grady (LW).

The two eighth graders on the roster are Jamie Shaughnessy (LW) and Shannon Coleman (LW).

The team next plays on Saturday (12/30) on the road against Marshfield High School before returning home to the Quincy Youth Arena on Wednesday (1/3) to play host to Falmouth High School.

Presidents Post First Win

The Quincy Presidents, behind solid goaltending and some timely offense, earned their first win of the season last Wednesday night (12/20) against Rockland High School at the Quincy Youth Arena. Quincy (1-0-1) defeated the Bulldogs, 4-0.

After a scoreless first period, the Presidents scored twice in the second period, and finished off the scoring with two goals in the third period. Junior captain Casey Conley netted two goals, giving him four tallies in the team's first two games, and junior captain Ted Walsh scored his first goal of the season. Junior Kevin Shea scored on an empty net to finish off the Bulldogs.

"Rockland played really well," head coach Bob Sylvia said. "They are not that deep of a team, but they used a box formation in front of their goalie, and we had a little trouble getting good opportunities. The team finally broke through after a scoreless first period, and when we went up 2-0 after the second our defense and our goaltending held its ground."

Quincy sophomore Jeff Giordani earned his second straight start and played well. Senior goaltender Bo Craig also saw time between the pipes and the combination of Craig and Giordani stopped all 16 Rockland shots they faced.

"The turning point in the victory happened once we got up 2-0," Sylvia said. "Jeff (Giordani) made a key save. He robbed a Rockland player on a scoring chance and after that we controlled play. Craig also played great, and one thing the team and coaching staff can take out of this win, is that we have confidence in both of our goalies moving forward."

The Presidents outshot Rockland, 40-16, and the team dictated the pace of the game, but the team's next opponent, Nauset High School, should give coach Sylvia a better barometer of how his team is progressing.

"Nauset, who we play on Saturday (12/23) should tell us about how the season is going so far," Sylvia said. "They are a very strong team. They are one of the better teams in the Atlantic Coast League, and the game will be a challenge for us."

Quincy's roster boasts a number of underclassmen who are just getting used to the varsity level, and although the team is 1-0-1, Sylvia is still not sure what he has this winter.

"The (jury) is still out," Sylvia said. "We have a lot of inexperience and we need to find an identity with our lines and with the team. The Nauset game should give us a better idea of where we are at."

Quincy, which will have the Christmas break to fix any problems that need fixing, next plays on New Year's Eve (12/31) against Rockland. After facing the Bulldogs, the Presidents have a three game stretch against Atlantic Coast League teams. Quincy travels to Plymouth North on 1/3, are on the road against Whitman-Hanson on 1/10 and hosts Dennis-Yarmouth on 1/13.

GROUND EFFECTS

It has become increasingly popular among auto manufacturers and enthusiasts to adjust a vehicle's "ground effects." One way to manipulate the airflow around a vehicle involves the use of a "spoiler" that attaches to the rear of the vehicle and changes the direction of the airflow in order to reduce lift. It is called a spoiler, because it "spoils" the normal airflow over the car to create a downward force. Similarly, a front spoiler (known as an "airdam" can change the direction of airflow underneath the vehicle. It should be pointed out, however, that changing a vehicle's aerodynamics in these ways is not always apparent in vehicles intended for daily living. These effects are largely applicable to race vehicles.

This column on ground effects and the aerodynamics of a vehicle is brought to you by the automotive experts at LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO. We are proud to serve our community, providing quality vehicle repair and maintenance. Located at 258 Quincy Ave., E. Braintree, we stress preventive maintenance for a reason. SPOTLIGHT ON HEALTH & FITNESS

by Andrea Wyatt
M.S.S., C.S.C.S.

Look Before You Leap

The idea of starting the new year off with a bang by joining a health club, gym or fitness facility is a promising thought for some. Television commercials and mailings offer specials to entice you to obtain that mean-and-lean body you've always wanted by joining their facility. But first, it's important to research a prospective health club to ensure your fitness needs will be met.

When deciding what type of fitness facility is right for you, develop a list of NEEDS. Your list should include amenities of the club that are a necessity in order for you to join. These might include child care, unlimited group-exercise classes or a fully equipped locker room. In addition, there are equally necessary qualities a fitness facility should include that are often overlooked. Use the checklist below to assess the next health club you are interested in.

Looks Can be Deceiving

Ask about the knowledge and qualifications of the staff. Don't let the outward appearance of someone in a health-club setting fool you into believing he or she is qualified.

Ask your sales representative or the fitness facility manager about the certifications of everyone from the personal trainers to the nutritionist and child-care workers. If there is any reluctance in responding to your questions, this could be a warning sign. ALL personal trainers should be nationally certified and preferably have a college degree. You are depending on the trainer for professional guidance, so it is important not to use physical appearance as a measure of knowledge, education and professionalism.

Safety First!

Often overlooked is the safety of the facility and the readiness of the staff to respond in case of an emergency. Inquire if the staff is first-aid and CPR certified and what emergency procedures are in place. Ask the club's manager or sales representative if it is prepared for health emergencies or a fire, and express any concerns about the security outside and within the building. If you are interested in child care, take your time and inspect the space where your child will stay. You should also check the safety, cleanliness and maintenance of the machines, cardiovascular equipment and group exercise equipment. You want to make sure you will use safe and well-maintained equipment.

The Devil Is in the Details

Discuss with your sales representative what is and is not included in your membership. Every facility is different, so it is necessary to ask if all classes are included, how is the payment structured after any start-up specials, what are the deactivation procedures, and about additional services, such as personal training.

Don't worry about asking too many questions. A professional facility will be glad to answer your questions, and be impressed that you did your homework. Take your time and make sure you are making the best decision for YOU. What may work for a friend or co-worker may not be what is best for you. Remember, this is not only a financial investment, but also an investment in your health. Choose wisely.

Always consult a physician before beginning an exercise program.

DENTISTRY for the 21st Century

by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.

ADDITION BY SUBTRACTION

The "wisdom teeth," or third molars, are the ones that come in at the very back of the mouth usually between ages 17 and 24. Our ancestors had greater need for third molars, due to their more primitive diets. And while some patients may automatically assume that these teeth are largely superfluous, that is not necessarily the case. If you have sufficient room in your mouth to accommodate wisdom teeth and they erupt properly, they may remain. However, if there is not enough room for them and/or they become impacted (unerupted), it is generally recommended that they be extracted. This helps avoid disruption of adjacent teeth and the potential of infection associated with a partially erupted tooth.

Wisdom teeth are a valuable asset to the mouth when they are healthy and properly positioned. If you would like further information, or to schedule an appointment, please call us at 617-479-6220. As with any worthwhile investment, after your dental work is completed, continued, regular visits will help ensure your future good dental health. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street, where comfort, care, and convenience make the difference. Our professional dental team would be complimented to have you as a patient. We offer the services of anesthesiology with a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Visit us on the web at www.quincydentist.com.

P.S. The dentist can monitor the progress and eruption pattern of wisdom teeth with the use of x-rays.

Tips To Stay Healthy From Colds, Flu

(NAPS) A recent study confirms that Americans can't afford the lost days of work or family time from being sick. It's important to pin down which sickness it is, cold or flu, so as not to treat the wrong ailment and find treatment ineffective.

"Severity is really what makes the difference," said Neil Schachter, M.D., author of "The Good Doctor's Guide to Colds and Flu," professor of medicine and community medicine and medical director of respiratory care at the Mount Sinai Medical Center in New York City.

"With a cold, people think about whether they're well enough to go to work or school. With the flu, there's usually no question. You're down and out and in bed," he said.

There are countless myths circulating the globe ranging from how one acquires a code or the flu to how it can spread. Dr. Schachter reveals some of these common myths about colds and flu and provides some truths to clarify what one should do to defend him or herself from viruses this winter season.

According to Dr. Schachter, the most prevalent myth is that people catch the flu from a flu shot. He points out that the actual flu-like symptoms a person feels from receiving this vaccine is the immune system's response. These symptoms should not last for more than 24 hours.

Another interesting myth is that kissing spreads colds. It ma be surprising, but saliva is actually the safest way to have contact with a person during a cold because it does not contain any viral particles. Secretions from the eyes and nose contain the highest proximity of the cold virus.

People often say to avoid cold weather to prevent getting the cold or flu, however these conditions are caused by a virus and have nothing to do with the temperature outside.

People can protect themselves by boosting their immunity. Dr. Schachter suggests doing so by using a natural dietary supplement that helps keep immunity high, such as Cold fx. Just now coming to drugstores in the US, it is the top-selling product in Canada and has good science behind it.

He also suggests lifestyle modifications:

• Quit smoking. Smoking paralyzes the cilia in airways, altering mucus production and damaging the cell's ability to destroy bacteria.

• Control weight. Excess weight has been found to lower immunity, which makes an overweight person more susceptible to colds and the flu.

• Drink in moderation. An excess amount of alcohol consumption paralyzes the cilia and also increases the production of mucus.

• Control stress. Stressful events have been shown to lower immunity. People should take at least a 30-minute break each day and do something specific that they enjoy.

This advice can help to stay healthy this season and all-year long. For more information on how to stay healthy, pick up a copy of "The Good Doctor's Guide to Colds and Flu."

Don't Let Stress Make A Mess Of Life

By EUGENE BAKER, Ph.D.

(NAPS) Statistics don't lie. The facts are in and the research suggests that stress is making Americans sick.

According to the National Institutes of Health, 80 to 90 percent of all illnesses are either directly or indirectly caused by stress.

In another study conducted by the Center for the New American Dream, researchers found that more than 50 percent of Americans would be willing to take a day off from work without pay in an effort to feel less stressed and have more time with their families.

And ongoing public opinion research finds that the majority of stress that people feel is directly related to work issues such as time management, deadlines, and dealing with difficult coworkers. Fortunately, there are action steps that people can incorporate into their daily routines to help them regain control of their lives.

Here are some tips for relieving workplace stress:

• Eat Right. Avoid eating unhealthy snacks. Eating healthy food can increase energy.

• Drink Less Caffeine. Drinking lots of coffee and sodas can increase stress levels. Those who can't cut out caffeine beverages completely should try alternating caffeine intake with healthier beverages or snacks.

• Exercise. Exercise is a great way to relieve stress, so try to take a brisk 10-minute walk during the day, even if it means a walk around the office or building. Walking will help to get blood moving and give a mental break from tasks.

• Stretch. Stretching can help to relieve stiff muscles, which can hold tension.

• Simplify the Morning. Getting up 15 minutes earlier, and packing lunches or laying out clothes the night before, can help create a routine and help with organization.

• Think Positive. Take a few minutes to reflect the good things in life. This can instantly improve mood and outlook.

• Breathe. When stressed, people have the tendency to take shallow breaths, which can result in feeling more tense. Start by inhaling deeply through the nose for a count of eight, then exhaling slowly for a count of 16. Concentrate on counting and breathing.

• Rest. Be sure to get enough sleep at night. Not feeling rested can add to stress and feelings of being overwhelmed. Those who have been experiencing recurring sleepless nights should consult a physician for guidance.

• Do Enjoyable Activities. Try something new or something to look forward to.

Most stress arises from feelings of life being out of control. By taking time to get organized, and taking care of one's self, people can begin to gain control and ensure the workday is as relaxed as possible.

• Email Stress-out. Email has become one of the most common forms of communications but it can also be one of the most stressful. Opening a full email box can be overwhelming, not to mention time consuming.

Learn how to use email software to organize the in-box and file away all important messages in a way that makes them easier to access. Also, don't forget to trash any spam or useless emails.

Change habits so that instead of leaving a message in the in-box until it's completed, try placing the task from the email on a task list along with the contact information, then filing the email away until prepared to reply.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Ease this year's holiday money pressures by letting your thrifty side guide you as you look for those perfect gifts that typically reflect your good taste and love of beauty.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) You'll have a good handle on potential holiday problems if you delegate tasks to family members, friends or co-workers — most of whom will be more than happy to help out.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Right now you are especially vulnerable to holiday scams that seek to take advantage of your generosity. Best advice: Check them out before you send out your checks.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) The upcoming holiday season gives the Big Cat much to purr about. Relationships grow stronger, and new opportunities loom on the horizon, just waiting to be pounced on.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) A changing situation brings conflicting advice about how to go forward with your holiday plans. Your best bet: Make the decision you feel most comfortable with.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Your holiday preparations are on track. But you need to confront a personal situation while you can still keep it from overwhelming everything else.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Tight financial matters ease a bit during this holiday season. But the sagacious Sagittarian is well-advised to keep a tight hold on the reins while shopping for gifts.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Don't put off making decisions about this year's holiday celebrations, despite the negative comments you've been getting from several quarters. Do it NOW!

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) The holidays will bring new friends and new opportunities. Meanwhile, be careful to use your energy wisely as you go about making holiday preparations.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) There's good news coming from a most unlikely source. And it could turn out to be one of the best holiday gifts you have had in years. Remember to stay positive.

BORN THIS WEEK: You are respected for your honesty and loyalty. You make friends slowly — but with rare exceptions, they're in your life forever.

SCOTT DEWARE

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

THOUGHTS ON TIME

To each of us, it seems that we never have enough time in our days, and yet we are all allotted the same number of hours. How we use up our hours is our own choice. We came across some thoughts on time that we think are good and we want to share them with you:

Time is money . . . we have no time to waste it.
Time is power. . . we have no right to dissipate it.
Time is influence . . . we have no right to throw it away.
Time is life. . . we must value it greatly.
Time is God's . . . He gives it to us for a purpose.
Time is a sacred trust. . . we must answer for every moment.
Time is wisdom. . . we have no right to be ignorant.
Time is preparation for eternity . . . we must redeem it.*

Tedeschi Food Shops Donate $25,000 To Toys For Tots

This past October, Tedeschi Food Shops made a pledge to the Toys For Tots Foundation, setting a goal to raise $25,000. On December 8, Tedeschi Food Shops Vice President Tom Hart presented a check in that amount to Colonel Kevin Doyle USMC (retired) of the Toys For Tots Foundation.

The Tedeschi Select/Toys For Tots campaign began on Dec. 4 with the commitment that 10 cents from every Tedeschi Select soda, water, candy, potato chips, bread and fresh sandwiches, sold this holiday season, would go to the Toys For Tots Foundation. All Tedeschi Food Shops, Li'l Peach and Store 24 locations embraced the cause. "The outstanding efforts on the part of our General Managers and Franchisees is the reason we met our contribution goal," Hart said. Over the past two years, Tedeschi Food Shops has donated $45,000 to the Marines/Toys For Tots Foundation.

Dec. 31 Last Day For Sun 'Citizen Of Year'

Sunday, Dec. 31 is the last day for nominations for The Quincy Sun's 22nd annual "Citizen of the Year" award.

Established in 1985, the award recognizes an individual for outstanding community service or a special achievement.

Last year, George White, a 40-year member of the Quincy Christmas Festival Committee – including 25 years as committee chairman – was honored for bringing holiday joy to many thousands of all ages.

White was selected for the honor from among 35 nominees submitted by Quincy Sun readers. A panel of judges representing a cross-section of the community made the final decision.

Again this year, Sun readers may nominate the person they feel is the most deserving of the award.

A nomination ballot to help the selection process appears below on this page of this week's issue of The Quincy Sun.

After nominations close Sunday, Dec. 31, a judging panel will be selected to make the final choice from nominations submitted.

If you know someone you would like to see recognized with the 2006 award, fill out the ballot and mail it to:

The Quincy Sun
Attn: Citizen of the Year
1372 Hancock St.
Quincy, MA 02169

Ballots can also be dropped off at The Sun office at the above address by Dec. 31.

Those submitting nominations should identify themselves. They can also attach to the ballot a letter detailing the reason for their nomination.

Nominees can be someone in elective office, a member of an appointed board, a clergy member, a teacher or school administrator, a police or firefighter, someone in the business community, a sports figure or an "unsung" neighbor or friend who has given freely of his or her time to a worthy project or cause.

Those nominated in the past are eligible to be nominated again this year. Since this is not a popularity contest, each nominee has an equal chance of being selected regardless of the number of nominations received. Anyone nominated just once has the same chance of being the award recipient.

The winner's name will be announced in The Quincy Sun in January.
